But the Grand Seignior and the Divan entertaining Sentiments different to thoſe of the Vizier, conſulting the neceſſity there was of gratifying the Chan, iſſued immediate Orders to the Paſha of Sofia to ſuppreſs the Incurſions of Teghen, and to Call to his Aſſiſtance the Neſiran, which are like our Trained-Bands, or Militia of the Country, to ſeize, and take, either Dead or Alive, this Teghen Paſha, who had violated the Laws of their Prophet Mahomet, and encouraged and fomented all the Rebellions in Aſia.

This diſmal News ſtruck Teghen with a ſudden Amazement, ſo that not knowing where to find any ſafety in the Parts where he remained, all the World conſpiring his Deſtruction, he reſolved to retire into Albania, and betake himſelf to the Aid and Protection of his old and faithful Friend Mamoot Bei Oglu; it having been ſuſpected for ſome time, at the Port, that this Teghen, whenſoever he ſhould be droven hard, would endeavour to ſhelter himſelf in Albania, under protection of this Mamoot Bei; means were contrived before-hand, with a thouſand fair Promiſes made to Mamoot Bei, that whenſoever Teghen ſhould come for Refuge under his Command, that he ſhould do that Service to the Sultan, as to betray him, or cut him off. Accordingly Teghen putting himſelf into the hands of his ancient Comrade, Mamoot, was received by him with outward Joy, and the moſt Endearing Terms of Love, and real Sincerity, that could be expreſſed, and deſiring him to continue with him for ſome days, he promiſed him all ſecurity, to joyn with him in his Adventures, and to run with him all the hazards of his Fortune; and ſo continued to Comfort and Encourage him, until all his Troops being got together, when one Night being in Conſultation with Teghen, in what manner they might with moſt Advantage annoy the Port, Orders were privately given to the Domeſtick Servants to fall upon him, which was accordingly executed, and his Head on a ſudden taken from his Shoulders, with the Heads of many of his Followers, which were immediately diſpatched by Mamoot to the Port, for a Teſtimony of his Fidelity to the Sultan, and in Reward thereof to Challenge the Promiſes which had been made him.

Mamoot Bei cuts off his Head.

In the Month of September laſt, as we have already related, News was brought to the Port, that the Diſorders in Aſia increaſed, where the Robbers appeared in great Bodies, Commanded in chief by Tedic, and encouraged by Teghen, who ſent Commiſſions over to his Kinſman Tedic, by which ſuch numbers of Robbers aſſembled from all Parts, that all the Country was ſpoiled and laid waſte by them; and the People being fled, there was nothing but Rapine and Violence in all Places. To ſuppreſs theſe Diſorders, Commands were ſent by the Vizier, to the Paſhas and Governors; but theſe Officers were ſo far from being able to Execute them, that they returned back ſtripped and plundered. Whereupon new Meaſures were taken to pacifie theſe Mutineers or Robbers rather, with Promiſes, that Teghen ſhould be created General of the Army, and that theſe Troops now in Aſia ſhould be paſſed over into Hungary, there to Fight under the Command and Conduct of their Beloved Teghen, where they all hoped to be made Paſha's. But whilſt theſe Mutineers were preparing to march into Europe, News came to the Grand Signior of the Death of Teghen, with many of his Followers; the which was confirmed by the undoubted Evidence of their Heads, which were laid at the Feet of the Sultan. This particular Action changed the whole Scheme of the Turkiſh Councils; and all the ſoft Promiſes made to Tedic, were changed into Vengeance and Puniſhment, Orders being given to the Chimacam, not only to oppoſe and hinder the paſſage of the Aſiaticks into Europe, but to Fight and Defeat them them in their own Country. By this time a great Party of theſe Rebels were come very near to Scutari, and ſcattered in the adjacent Villages, where remaining with all ſecurity, not having as yet received the fatal News of the Death of Teghen; when by Order of the Chimacam, ſome of the Ottoman Troops quartered on the ſide of Scutari, fell upon them, and by ſurprize, entirely defeated them, ſome of which were drowned in the Sea, and others killed by the Sword: Thoſe who were already paſſed over to Conſtantinople, hearing of this Diſaſter, and the Fate of Teghen, retired back into Aſia, and recounted thoſe unhappy Stories to Tedic, who was upon his March to follow his advanced Troops. Upon this News, Tedic, and his Companions, deſpairing of all hopes of Pardon, declared themſelves more openly Rebels than before; ſo that aſſembling all the Scum and Raſcality of the People, to the number of about 6000 Men, they marched towards Pruſa in Bithynia, pillaging, deſtroying, and ruining all in the way before them: So that there was no paſſage for any, unleſs Emirs or Green-Heads, mounted on Mules and Aſſes with Pack-Saddles.

And defeats the Paſha.

The Ottoman Court, which lately by the Death of Teghen, and the Defeat of ſo many Troops near Scutari, thought all things now ſafe and ſecure from the Aſiatick Rebellion, were again ſtrangely ſurprized with a Conſternation to hear that the Rebellion increaſed, and grew hotter than before; to ſuppreſs which, a Paſha was ſent to Pruſa to raiſe the Neſiran, who had the Fortune at firſt to Defeat a conſiderable Body of the Enemy; but being a Perſon of no Experience in the War, and ignorant of Martial Diſcipline, he unfortunately engaged with a more expert Body of the Rebels, by whom he was defeated, and made a miſerable Sacrifice to the Fury and Revenge of Tedic; who killed and made Priſoners, all the Forces of the Paſha.

Declared King of Anatolia, beſieges Angora.

Tedic being encouraged with this unexpected Succeſs, cauſed himſelf to be Proclaimed, King and Soveraign of Anatolia; and by his Arbitrary Power, laying Impoſitions, and exacting Contributions from all Cities and Towns of that Country, he laid Siege to Angora, a rich City, famous for the Trade of Grogram Yarn, who would not ſubmit it ſelf to the Tyranny and Plunder of Tedic: Of which the Engliſh and other Merchants at Smyrna took ſuch an Alarm, not knowing but that the Rebels, encouraged with the Riches and Openneſs of the Town, without any Walls or Fortifications, might march thither; they Packed up all their Goods, and put themſelves in a readineſs to fly on Shipboard when any Danger approached, where they might remain out of all danger or Violence either to their Perſons or Eſtates.

Angora pays a Ranſome.

The People of Angora, being in a Condition not long to withſtand a Siege, and Deſpairing of all Relief from the Ottoman Port, made their Compoſition with Tedic, and Ranſomed their Town from Plunder, by the Payment of 80 Purſes of Money, each Purſe containing 500 Dollars.

The Rebels refuſe all Offers of Grace.

This unhappy State of Affairs, ſuggeſted unto the Turkiſh Governors their old Methods of fair Promiſes, and ſmooth Words to work upon the Affections of Tedic and his Complices, aſſuring them all of Pardon and Reward in caſe they would return to their Duty: But theſe being a ſort of rough Villains, bred up in Rapine and Violence, who were Conſcious that they could never merit a Pardon, and had tranſgreſſed beyond all Hopes of ever being truſted, they no ſooner heard the fawning Words of the Grand Seignior's Grace and Favour pronounced towards them, but with one Conſent they cryed out loudly againſt it, ſaying, That they had learned not to be Cheated and Betrayed like Teghen, and their Brethren near Scutari. And that their Rebellion might carry a good Face, and ſome Reaſon with it, Tedic and his Complices declared, That they took not up Arms for Spoil, or Diſaffection to the Grand Seignior, but out of pure Zeal to Religion, and true Profeſſion of the Mahometan Law, which the preſent Governors had miſerably corrupted: In Defence of which he Summoned all the People and Inhabitants of Anatolia to come in under his Standard, and joyn with them to Reform the Abuſes of the Government and State.

The Nature of a Teftiſh Paſha.

Theſe Traiterous Practices of Tedic being made known at the Port; it plainly appeared, that there was no other means and expedient left, to reclaim the Practices of ſuch Robbers, and ſuppreſs the diſſolute Lives of Rebels, but only force and dint of Sword; to which end the Paſha of that Country honoured with the Title of Teftiſh, which is as much as an Inquiſitor, who in the Times of Peace, is every two or three Years ordained to enquire into the State of Anatolia, and make enquiry into Robberies, Breaches of the Peace, and Abuſes of the Government committed by the Kadees, Aga's, and other Officers: For execution of which, the Paſha is commonly attended with 500 Men, and authorized with ſuch an unlimited power, that he may act and do what he pleaſes with as uncontroulable an Authority, as the Sultan himſelf. I have known this ſort of Teftiſh in 1689. the Summer time having pitched his Camp near ſome great Town, immediately to call for the Kadi, or Judge, and the Imaum or Prieſt of the place, and to demand of them the Names of the Lewd and Diſorderly Young Men of the Place, and the Villages adjacent; and in caſe the Paſha, or the Imaum eſpecially, ſhall give an ill Report of any of them, as of ſuch, who come not conſtantly to Prayers, or frequent the Moſchs, his Buſineſs is done for him; and for as many of them as come under his evil Report. For the Teſtiſh Paſha concluding all ſuch for Thieves, requires no farther Teſtimony or Proofs againſt them; but ſending for them, Condemns them, and Hangs them up on the next Tree.

In this manner the Buſineſs of Tedic and his Complices, was committed to the care and conduct of Teſtiſh Achmet Paſha, whoſe firſt ſtep was rightly to inform the People of the perfidious Deſigns of Tedic, who fought againſt the Sultan and the Laws of the Prophet Mahomet, of which the People being once perſwaded, withdrew themſelves from that Party, and turned their Arms againſt Tedic, and his Villainous Accomplices; by which means the Teſtiſh having increaſed his Forces to ſuch a conſiderable number, that he might with all ſecurity promiſe himſelf Victory, he marched againſt the Enemy, and after two Days, he came in ſight of their Camp, and found them drawn up in good order, according to Martial Diſcipline. The Paſha readily attacked them with 3000 ſelect and brave Men, and well mounted, and with ſuch Reſolution, that at the firſt Onſet they put the Van-guard of the Enemy into diſorder, and with a Shower of Arrows from the whole Army, they put them all to flight; ſo that their Leader Tedic, truſted all his ſafety to the ſwiftneſs of his Horſe; notwithſtanding which, the Teſtiſh preſſing for an entire Victory, purſued him ſo hard, that having incloſed him in the midſt of two Squadrons, Tedic himſelf, with many of his chief Captains and Commanders, were either killed, or made Priſoners. The reſt of the Common Soldiery ſeeing themſelves deprived of their Chief, ſubmitted to the Teſtiſh Paſha, deſiring to be enrolled under his Banner; but the Paſha having no good opinion, or hope of getting any benefit from an Union with ſuch a ſort of Rabble, and Scum of the People, who had been bred up, and nurſed in Robbery and Violence; reſolved to make no uſe of ſuch corrupted Companions in his Army, but diſmiſſed them all with Licenſe to return to their Countries, and reſpective Habitations, and afterwards proceeded to reform the Abuſes and Diſorders of thoſe ill-govern'd Provinces.

The Teſtiſh engages Yedic and defeats him.

The Port having now entirely ſuppreſſed thoſe two deſperate Rebellions, the moſt dangerous of any in ſuch a time of a decaying Militia, and a victorious Enemy, began to be at leiſure to prepare for their War in Hungary; and in the firſt place Regeb Paſha was created Seraskier, or General, in the place of Teghen: But firſt to extirpate all that Party entirely, they ſeized on the Nephew of Teghen in Philippopolis, and put him to Death, with 40 of his Followers; as they did alſo the Governor of Widin, whom Teghen had put into that Place the laſt Campaign, being a Favourite and Creature of his. 1689.

Regeb Paſha made General in the place of Yeghen whoſe Nephew is put to Death.

The Turks to encourage their People to proſecute the War in Hungary, did not only cauſe a Report to fly about, That the Sultan had reſolved to appear this Year at the Head of his Army againſt the Chriſtians; but the Sultan did really march from Adrianople towards Sophia, with an Army of about 30000 Men, together with a Train of Artillery, conſiſting of 90 Pieces of Cannon, and 6 Mortar-pieces of a very large ſize, the which being joyned afterwards to a Body of 40000 Men under the Command of the Seraskier Regeb Paſha, formed a conſiderable countenance of an Army; but being all raw, and undiſciplin'd Men, would, as was ſuppoſed, be inſpired with new Courage at the preſence of their Sultan.

The Grand Seignior marches to Sophia.

On the $\frac{14}{24}$ of April, the Grand Seignior began to move from Adrianople, at which time a very great Earthquake was felt both in that City and Conſtantinople, which was ſo terrible, that ſeveral Moſchs, Houſes, and Towers were overthrown. At which time the Tungia and Meritz, Rivers which glide on a Sandy and Gravelly Soil near the Walls of Adrianople, overflowed their Banks with ſo violent an Inundation, that they Drowned all the Fields and Meadows round, and forced the Turks to remove their Camp, and pitch at ſome farther diſtance; the which Accidents were diverſly diſcourſed by the Learned Men, and the Turks being naturally Superſtitious, did generally interpret them as ſiniſter Omens for the ſucceeding Campaign. Howſoever Sultan Solyman marched forwards to Sophia; where according to the Cuſtom of the Turkiſh Army, they ſoiled their Horſe, giving them Graſs, and remained in expectation of the arrival of the Aſiatick Troops, and other Forces not yet come up; and here it was that the Sultan entertained himſelf in the Army, not intending to proceed nearer to the Enemy.

In the mean time great Conferences and Conſultations were held at the Imperial Court, for carrying on two mighty Wars againſt France, and the Ottoman Empire; to which which end the Forces were divided; thoſe which were to ſerve in the Empire againſt France, were committed to the auſpicious Conduct of the Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Lorrain: Thoſe which were intended againſt the Turk in Servia, were to be commanded by that Valiant and Fortunate General Prince Lewis of Baden; and under him as Field Marſhal by the Duke of Croy, General of the Artillery was Marquis Parella, Lieutenant-General was Count Veterani, and Major-Generals were the Counts of Hoffkirchen, Duke of Holſtein, with the Princes of Hanover and Heiſter: And on the other ſide in the Upper Hungary, Tranſilvania, Boſnia, and Sclavonia, the Command was lodged in the Hands of the Counts Aſpremont, Piccolomini, Trautmanſdorff, Guido of Staremberg, Herbeville, and Baron Herbeville; whoſe force conſiſted of 11 Regiments of Cuiraſſiers, nine Regiments of Dragoons, and 20 Regiments of Foot; together with the ſeveral Independant Companies of Hungarians, Croatians, and Raſcians, who had lately taken up Arms againſt the Turks.

In the mean time Tekeli, to keep up his Credit and Reputation with the Turks, cauſed a Report to ſpread abroad at the Ottoman Port; that by his Spies, and by his Letters of Advice, he had certain Intelligence, that the French had ſo diſtreſſed the Empire, that it was impoſſible for the Emperor to ſpare at that time above 10000 Men to carry on the War in Servia; and that all his Meaſures in Tranſilvania, and the Upper Hungary, were entirely broken.

May.

Plots of the French diſcovered.

And indeed by the Plots of Tekeli, and the Contrivances and Intrigues of the French, whoſe Emiſſaries began now to ſpread in all the great and conſiderable Towns, as well in Hungary as in Germany, Towns and Countries were burnt, and vaſt Devaſtations committed thereon. The City of Cronſtadt in Tranſilvania, was in the Month of May totally deſtroyed and conſumed by fire, which was kindled at the four Angles thereof; which in a few Hours, by the help of a ſtrong Wind, was reduced to Aſhes, notwithſtanding the Endeavours of Colonel Baron de Pace to extinguiſh it; only by the help of his Soldiers he preſerved the Caſtle, and the Ammunition therein, notwithſtanding the Flames, which by the forcible Winds were carried to the very Walls of it. At the ſame time the like Misfortune befel the Fortreſs of Honot in the Upper Hungary, and the Citadel of the Jews at Prague, ſo that both one and the other were in a few Hours miſerably reduced to Aſhes; all which was ſuſpected to have been done by Treaſonable Practices, and not by Chance, or Accident; and that which gave undoubted Aſſurances thereof, were certain Sacks of Powder found at the Gates of ſome Houſes in Vienna; and a Fire breaking out in a Houſe adjoyning to the great Hoſpital of the City, being kindled at a time when the Wind was very high, put all the City into a great Combuſtion; but by the Vigilance of the Magiſtrates, and the activeneſs of the Soldiers, it was ſoon extinguiſhed: The which horrid Practices were ſome Days afterwards diſcovered to have been acted by certain Frenchmen, who being convicted by courſe of Juſtice, were ſentenced, as Incendiaries, to be caſt into the Fire, and committed to the Flames. The which Tryals and Proofs being produced, and laid before the Council of State, extorted from the benign Nature of His Imperial Majeſty, a ſevere Edict for Baniſhing all the French out of his Dominions, unleſs ſuch as had been Naturalized, or for the ſpace of 10 Years paſt, could prove their Abode, or Reſidence with their Wives, eſtabliſhed in ſome City, were all, without any exception, to depart in the ſpace of 14 Days. The which Edict, how ſevere ſoever it might ſeem at another time, was in the preſent Conjuncture no leſs than neceſſary, when the French Nation was crept into every City and Country, and entertained for Valets de Chambre, Pedants, Dancing Maſters, Cooks, and ſuch like in moſt of the Houſes and Families of Princes, and Nobles of principal Quality; where they ſerved for Spies, and Traytors to the Empire: But the Wars in Germany not being the Subject of this Hiſtory, let us proceed to the Affairs of Turkey, where it was reported, That the Turks were aſſembling all the force they were able to recover the City of Belgrade; and that the Seraskier was already in the Field, and had prepared Bridges to paſs the Morava above Jagodina; and began to march ſo faſt, as if he intended to force Belgrade, before the Grand Vizier was joyned with him, the noiſe whereof cauſed ſome Conſternation at Belgrade; but at the appearance of Prince Lewis of Baden, ſent thither with Commiſſion of General of the Imperial Forces in Hungary, all the Fears of the Soldiers vaniſhed; and every one reaſſumed his Courage, and at the Command of the Prince, fell to work about the Fortifications; the which Work being by direction of His Highneſs put into a way of diſpatch; he proceeded forward to the Army.

June.

And on the 14th of June, being arrived at Semendria, he made it his buſineſs in the firſt place to enquire, and inform himſelf of the true State of the Affairs of the Enemy, who according to common report of the Spies, were ſaid to be very near, being encamped in the Plains of Jagodina, to the Num-

Number of 40000 Men under Command of the Seraskier, the greateſt part of which were Aſiaticks, raw, and Undiſciplin'd Soldiers, to which very ſpeedily the Grand Vizier was to joyn with 10000 Turks, and a conſiderable Train of Artillery, which was already on the way from Sophia. The Prince being alarm'd hereat by reaſon of the ſmall force he had with him, diſpatched an Expreſs away to the Counts of Veterani and Piccolomini, with Orders to haſten their March what was poſſible, and come to his neceſſary reinforcement againſt ſo formidable an Enemy; and in the mean time, the heavy Baggage was ſent to Belgrade, with about 30000 Inhabitants of that place, who for their better ſecurity, were ordered to paſs the Save: But for the more certain Intelligence of all, the Prince diſpatched an Expreſs to Haſſan Paſha Palanca, where Count Hoffkirchen was Quartered, to know of him what News he had received there from the Camp of the Enemy. At this Palanca I lodged one Night, as I remember, which is no other than a ſmall Fortreſs built of Stone in a Woody and a Deſolate Country, at the Charge of one Haſſan Paſha, with intent only to cover a Chan, or Inn for Reception of Travellers, and their Goods, from Spoilers and Robbers, which often infeſted that place, where notwithſtanding by means of this Fort, Garriſon'd by 60 Soldiers, Strangers may ſleep, and remain ſecure from Robbers.

The Meſſenger being returned from Hoffkirchen, brought Intelligence that the Turks were neither ſo numerous, and ſtrong, nor ſo near, as common Fame reported: And they only appeared ſometimes in Parties on the River Morava, but with ſome Care, and Caution in apprehenſion of the Germans, whoſe Numbers tho' they knew not, yet they were ſenſible enough of their Valour and Vigilance. This News, and the Conjunction with the Militia of Veterani and Piccolomini, greatly encouraged, and animated the Prince; and more eſpecially, becauſe that Piccolomini had paſſed a Bridge over the Save, between Belgrade and Sawaz, for the more commodious Tranſportation of Ammunition, and Victuals, which came from the Parts of Hungary.

Veterani and Piccolomini joyn with Pr. Lewis.

In the mean time Tekeli did not remain idle, but made ſeveral Incurſions, with deſign to relieve Temeſwaer, Giula, and Waradine, which were ſtreightly blocked up by the Imperialiſts: In which, tho' he did not ſucceed, yet having joyned with the Paſha of Siliſtria, he fell upon Fetiſlau, a Garriſon of the Raſcians, which after a ſtout defence for 12 Days, and having no hopes of ſuccour, they were forced to yield at Diſcretion, and being made Priſoners, ſeveral of the principal Men, with their Colours, were ſent in triumph to the Grand Seignior, who in recompence thereof, ſent a Scimetar, a Veſt of Sables, and ſome Money unto Tekeli, (with an Aſerum) or You have well done, and do ſtill better. Tekeli having put a Garriſon of 1000 Janiſaries into Fetiſlau, he marched to Orſoua, a place which Heiſler had lately deſerted and demoliſhed, which he poſſeſſed, and delivered it into the Hands of the Prince of Walachia, to be Garriſon'd, and made a place of Arms, and a Magazine for divers ſorts of Proviſions and Ammunition expected from Nicopolis; and which, if well fortified and provided, might be conſidered, as the Key of the Upper Hungary.

And poſſeſs Orſoua.

About the ſame time, Count Corbelli made a Detachment of 1000 Heydukes, from the Blockade of Waradine, who approaching near the Walls with intention to carry off the Cattle which were feeding thereabouts, they were ſo furiouſly attacked by the Enemy, that before they could retreat, they loſt 300 of their Men, and amongſt the reſt Captain Tugnochy, a Valiant Soldier, who the laſt Year had ſignalized himſelf on various occaſions againſt the Turks.

300 Heydukes killed by the Turks.

This Loſs was ſoon afterwards recompenſed by the Succeſs which the Croats gained upon the Turks; who having formed a Body of about 8000 Men, intended to ſpoil all the Country round about Coſtanovitza, near the River Unna. On the other ſide the Croats, to the Number of 2000 Men, under the Command of Count Draſcovitz, marched againſt them, with deſign rather to view the Countenance of the Enemy, than to give them Battel; took their March through certain Woods and Mountains, and unfrequented Ways; when happily near a place called Czrin, they met a ſtrong Party of Turks, who were come out alſo to diſcover the Enemy; and having eſpied the Croats, and believing them to be of greater force than they really were, they betook themſelves to Flight; but being purſued by the Croats, ſeveral of them were taken Priſoners; and by them it was known, that 8000 Turks, or thereabouts, under the Command of Sar Muſtapha Paſha, lay encamped not far from that place.

The Croats defeat a great Body of the Turks.

Upon theſe Advices the Count and his Croats reſolved bravely to attack the whole Camp; which being performed without other Heſitation or Delay, and taking a ſhort Turn about ſome little Hills, they charged the Turks with ſuch Fury, that they being ſurprized with ſome Conſternation, the Spahees betook themſelves to Flight, leaving 2000 Janizaries open and undefended, who all yielded themſelves Priſoners at diſcretion; of which ſome intimation having been given to the Croats on the Confines, they marched with ſuch haſte, that they met the Spahee's in their Flight; and the Bridges being broken down, the greateſt part were made Priſoners, beſides many who endeavouring to Swim were Drowned in the Waters; in which Action the Croats took 11 Colours, and much Booty. In this Fight the Flower of the Militia of Boſnia was cut off; and the Ways were covered with dead Bodies for the whole length of an Hungarian Mile; of which many of them by the finery of their Clothing, were judged to be Perſons of Quality: The Commander in Chief, called Sar Muſtapha Paſha Kaja, with the Bey, or the Lieutenant-General, were taken Priſoners; and according to the Report of thoſe who came to enquire after ſome who were miſſing, there were 6000 Men killed and ſcattered: In which Action very few Croats were killed, or wounded.

A compleat Victory.

Count Corbelli having intelligence that the Turks of Jeno and Giula intended to fortifie Fechedebator, in revenge for his late Misfortune, reſolved to uſe his Endeavors to ſurprize the Caſtle, and thereby ſave the Turks the trouble of their intended Fortifications; and in order thereunto he mounted the Regiment of Gondola on Horſeback, and with 500 Huſſars, and 100 Muſqueteers, and about as many Heydukes, which he had mounted on Waggons, he paſſed the River Gereſch in ſight of the Garriſon of Waradin, who had drawn out about 2000 of their Men into the Field: But to amuſe the Enemy, Corbelli marched to and again the whole Day; and at Night he detached two great Bodies of Huſſars before, to take cogniſance of the place; and being come near to Fechedebator, they took two Raſcians Priſoners belonging to the place, by whom they underſtood that there were not above 50 armed Turks in the place, beſides ſome few Raſcians; for the greateſt part of the Garriſon were gone to Jeno, to ſolemnize the Marriage of a certain Perſon of chief Quality in that Country; upon which intelligence the Party ſent to diſcover only, without farther deſign, meeting this Opportunity, and reſolving not to loſe it, ſent immediately a Summons to the Caſtle to ſurrender; to which the Turks returning an impertinent and ſcornful Anſwer; and ſaying, That when he brought the Keys of their City with him, meaning Giula, Jeno, and Waradin; upon taking of which, they ſhould be forced to ſurrender, that then they would open their Gates to them; until which time they craved their excuſe, intending to defend themſelves to the utmoſt Extremity. At the ſame moment that this Anſwer was returned, a Raſcian who had made his Eſcape out of the Town, adviſed that there was a great Diviſion ariſen amongſt the Turks in the Caſtle, of the which Corbelli deſirous to make uſe, he cauſed the Regiment of Gondola to paſs the River on Horſeback, and the Foot on Ferry-Boats and Floats, and being on the other ſide, he drew up in order of Battle in ſight of the Fortreſs, threatning them, that in caſe they did not ſurrender in the ſpace of one quarter of an Hour, that he would give no Quarter to any Perſon whatſoever.

Corbelli Summons Fechedebator.

The Governor of the Caſtle being terrified with this ſudden Demand with ſuch affrighting Menaces, he requeſted the reſpite but of one Day only; which being denied, he then Capitulated to have 30 Carts allotted to them, and to be Convoyed with their Arms and Baggage to Waradin; but Corbelli refuſing that alſo, they were conducted to Jeno, a place infected with Sickneſs, and ſtarved with Famine. Accordingly the Turks came forth to the Number of 40 Soldiers, 14 Young Men with Arms in their Hands, with about 80 Women and Young Children, who were all carried to Jeno.

Fechedebator is ſurrendred.

In the mean time Corbelli entered the place, and found the Caſtle in good repair, encompaſſed on one ſide with a Ditch full of Water, fortified with Paliſadoes, and on the other ſide with the River Gereſch; the which place, tho' in it ſelf ſmall, was yet conſiderable for its Situation, being ſeated in a convenient place to cut off all Communication between Waradin, and the Towns ſtreightned by Blockades; and for that reaſon Corbelli put a Garriſon into it of 200 Huſſars under Command of Comloſchi a ſtout and valiant Soldier, and after this Action returned to his Camp.

In the mean time Prince Lewis of Baden had diſcovered that the Deſign of the Seraſkier was to avoid a Battle; and that the Report he gave out of his March to Belgrade, was only to amuſe the Germans, and cauſe them to draw their Troops on that ſide, whilſt he encamped his Forces near the Banks of the River Morava. Wherefore the Prince having reinforced the Garriſon of Belgrade with 2000 Foot, and fortified Semendria, he moved with the whole Body of his Army, and towards the end of July, encamped near the Morava; where Boats being provided, the ſame Night by help of the Moon, a Bridge was caſt over the River, over which 2000 Horſe were Commanded to march under the Command of Colonel Straſſer, to obſerve the Countenance of the Enemy; who upon the News of the Germans Advance, had made their Retreat. The force of both Armies.

The Germans contemn their Enemies.

6000 Men to ſecure the Bridge, he marched his whole Army on the 2d of Auguſt over the ſame, with deſign to purſue the Enemy, and either force them to a Battel, or to abandon all their Magazines at Niſſa. The Turkiſh Army under the Command of the Seraskier, did not then conſiſt of above 40000 good fighting Men, and diſciplin'd Soldiers, the reſt were raw and unexperienced Fellows, fit rather to follow the Plough, or Plunder, than to fight a Battle. The Army of Prince Lewis conſiſted of about 12000 Germans, and 6000 Hungarians and Huſſars, beſides ſome of the Country People, who were got into a Body in hopes of Booty and Plunder, being animated thereunto by the Succeſs of the Cæſarean Arms. Notwithſtanding this great diſadvantage in Numbers, the Germans being Spirited with Deſires of farther Glory, and the meaner ſort of them with hopes of Prey and Booty, and all confiding in a continual Courſe and Run of Fortune, boldly proceeded on their March, having the Turks in Contempt, whom they had ſo often overthrown and defeated.

The Grand Vizier goes not to the War.

The truth is, the Turks were in a bad Condition both at Home and Abroad; the Grand Vizier himſelf durſt not appear in Perſon in the Field, leaſt his Enemies at home ſhould ſuggeſt Matters to the Sultan in his Abſence, which might coſt him his Head, or the Loſs of his Office: And indeed the Army was ſo inconſiderable this Year, that it ſeemed beneath the Dignity of a Grand Vizier to appear in the Field, with other than a Royal Army, which was ever reckoned at 100000 Men; to which it was much inferior, and ſcarce did ariſe to half the Number. For the Tartar Chan excuſed his joyning with the Turkiſh Army this Year, by reaſon of the Alarms given them by the Muſcovites, who in vaſt Numbers threatned their Country, and were on the Frontiers ready to enter with Fire and Sword. The Militia alſo of Aleppo, Damaſcus, Arbekier, and others of the more Eaſtern Countries of Aſia, which always compoſe a great Nerve of the Ottoman Arms, began to mutiny for want of Money, not being able longer to ſupport and maintain themſelves: Upon their Remonſtrance of which to the Grand Vizier Anſwer being returned, That the Royal Treaſuries were empty, and exhauſted, and that they were obliged by the Conſtitutions of the Empire, to maintain themſelves out of their Timarlucks, or Lands given them for that Service: The Reply was ſo diſpleaſing, that great Diſorder would have followed, had not the Torrent of the Soldiers Anger been ſeaſonable ſtopped by paying the Spahee's, or Timars, five Dollars apiece, which qualified, and appeaſed the Mutiny, and Sollevation which was ready to break forth into an open Rebellion.

A Mutiny prevented in the Turkiſh Camp.

Countermanded by Pr. Lewis.

Herbeville ordered to recover the place.

Whilſt Prince Lewis was on his March, News was brought to him, that Heiſler had demoliſhed Orſoua, and retired to ſome other Quarters; of which the Turks having received Advice, they entered into it, and having ſtrengthned it with ſome Paliſadoes, they put a Garriſon into it. At which Prince Lewis was ſo diſpleaſed, that he ſent immediate Orders to that General, that he ſhould forthwith return thither, and endeavour again to recover the place; and with all poſſible ſpeed repair the Fortifications, and conſerve that Poſt, as the moſt convenient Situation, whereby to tranſport Victuals and Ammunition, and cut off all the Succours, and Correſpondences on that ſide, by which the Turks might bring in Succours and Relief to Temeſwaer, and other places, which had been for ſome time ſtreightned by Blockades. But in regard that General Heiſler was much indiſpoſed by Sickneſs, and forced to retire to Hermanſtadt, for recovery of his Health, Orders were given to the General Count Herbeville, to execute that part which was to be acted by Heiſler, and accordingly having diſpatched Sempſai with his Huſſars in the Van, it was his Fortune to encounter a Party of Turks, from whom he carried 30 Heads, made 25 Priſoners, and took three Colours. The General following with the reſt of the Army, and being come near to Orſona, another Party of Turks appeared, which had newly paſſed from the other ſide of the Danube in ſmall Boats; and theſe being Attacked by Herbeville, between the Fortreſs and the River, the whole Body was in a moment either cut to pieces, or Drowned, or made Priſoners; of which 50 Horſe were taken, and one Standard.

He defeats a Party of Turks,

And Retires from Orſoua.

After which the groſs Body of the Imperial Army being advanced under the Fortreſs, the place was obſerved to be well fortified; and on the other ſide of the River they diſcovered an Army in their Trenches, well defended and guarded with Cannon; and on the Shoar ſide many well armed Gallies, and 100 Veſſels laden with all ſorts of Ammunition and Proviſions; the which, according to Report, was ſaid to be the Army of Tekely joyned to the Forces of the Paſha of Siliſtria, and another Paſha. Howſoever the General being deſirous to make trial of his Fortune, advanced with his Forces near the place, and having poſted themſelves under ſhelter of Banks and Sacks of Earth, to take a view of the Enemies State and Condition, they were ſo warmly receiv'd by their Cannon and Granadoes, that they were forced to retire towards Caranſebes; and at the ſame time News came that Tekely had killed 100 Raſcians, and taken ſome Boats with the Huſſars which were in them, and advanced with reſolution to carry Succours and Relief into Temeſwaer.

In the mean time Prince Lewis was on his March towards Niſſa, but finding the way very bad, and difficult by reaſon of the thick Woods, and Marſhy Grounds, and much Rain, ſo that it was almoſt impoſſible to draw their Cannon and Waggons laden with Proviſions, which began already to be wanting, it was reſolved to retire to Semendria.

August 27*th and* 28*th.*

And here it was that Prince Lewis altered the Courſe of his March; and being come into the Parts of Reſſava, the Foot advanced a Day before, and the Horſe following them the next, they joyned at Gabrovitz, where a Survey being taken of the Situation of the Place along the Banks of Morava, by ſeveral Engeniers, and particularly by Count Marſigli, they fixed on a place the moſt commodious for caſting a Bridge over the River, which was effected in a few Hours, and the ſame ſecured with 16 pieces of Cannon, mounted on a Redoubt which they newly raiſed, and defended by 500 Men.

A Bridge made over the Mo*rava.*

The Germans having paſſed all their Forces over the River, a ſtrong Detachment of the Enemy appeared, and ſurprized the Centinels and Out-guards, of which the Tartars killed ſome, and purſued the others, until the Imperial Troops, (who were always ready upon the firſt Alarm) gave a ſtop to the Career of the Tartars, of which they killed ſome, and took two Priſoners; from whom they received intelligence, that a great Body of Turks and Tartars under Command of Sultan Galga, Son of the Chan of Tartary, had paſſed the Morava near Jagodina, with deſign to attack the Germans on that ſide of the River near Paſſarovitz. And moreover that the Seraskier was on his March with an Army of 50000 Men towards Paſſarovitz and Semendria, with deſign ſo to environ the Imperial Army on all ſides, as to cut off the Proviſions from coming to their Camp; the which Reſolution was formed upon the Report of ſome French Fugitives, who had deſerted and fled to the Turks; and given them intelligence, that the Germans were in great want of Proviſions, which was the cauſe of their Retreat to Semendria.

The Deſigns of the Turks.

Pr. Lewis reſolves to Attack the Seraskier.

Prince Lewis being well aſſured, that he was able to march ſecurely to Paſſarovitz, notwithſtanding a Thouſand Difficulties which were preſented before him; and tho a Body of Turks and Tartars were not far diſtant, and the whole Army of the Seraskier encamped not above an Hour and halfs March from the Chriſtian Forces; yet truſting to the good Conduct of his General, and the Bravery and Courage of his Soldiers, he reſolved to diſlodge the Camp of the Seraskier, and thereby open a free Communication between the Palanca of Haſſan Paſha and Semendria, whereby the Magazines would be maintained, and the Reputation of the Imperial Arms ſupported.

His March.

Hereupon on the 29th of Auguſt by Break of Day in the Morning, the Prince commanded two Regiments of Dragoons, with all the Quarter-Maſters, and Foragers, and a Party of 500 Horſe to aſcend the riſing of a Hill not far diſtant from the Bridge, to cover and ſecure the March of the Foot, which were ſent before under Command of General Heiſler, and Count Guido of Staremberg, who were appointed to ſecure the Baggage in paſſing the River Reſſava: And at the ſame time the Prince himſelf, with his Cavalry, advanced towards the River, keeping the riſing Hill on his right Hand, and the Plain to Reſſava on his left; marching always in a Line, the better to withſtand the Enemies Horſe, which ran on all Quarters to find out where they might beſt annoy and break in upon them. And here it was that Prince Lewis very wiſely, and with much Policy commanded the Horſemen to diſmount, as if they intended to lodge there, for ſecuring their Baggage: But in regard the ſole Deſign of the Prince was to fight the Enemy, and drive them to the other ſide of the River, he commanded Colonel St. Croix with ſome Hundreds of choice German Horſe, and the Generals Czinecky, Drach, and Badiani a Captain of Strigonium, with their Hungarians, privately to paſs the River, and with their Huſſars to hide themſelves amongſt ſome Woods and Buſhes in a certain Valley, oppoſite to the Horſe; upon which Veterani, and Piccolomini, and the Huſſars, advanced in full Career againſt the Enemy, whilſt the Prince, with the reſt of his Cavalry, followed upon an eaſie Gallop.

He advances towards the Turks.

At the firſt the Turks did not believe that the Deſign of the Prince was to advance ſo far upon them, or to force them to a Battle; and therefore they retired very eaſily with their Tartars, keeping a Reſerve of 12000 Horſe, with 500 Janizaries mounted behind, which they emboſked in a Wood to attack Veterani and Piccolomini, which they looked upon only as a handful of Men: But ſo ſoon as they diſcovered the whole right Wing moving through the Plains under Veterani, and the left commanded by Piccolomini; and the Prince following with the main Body of the Army, directly marching, and pouring upon them, they made more haſte in their Retreat than before, and being attacked on all ſides, both from the Hills, Mountains, and Vallies, they made a haſty March away for the ſpace of four Hours; but being cloſely purſued to a narrow Paſs, where they were forced to make a Stand, they were ſo furiouſly aſſailed by the Troops of Veterani, and afterwards ſeconded by thoſe of the Prince, that in a ſhort time they were defeated, and diſperſed in the Woods; in which being purſued, and hunted for the ſpace of an Hour and a half into the Plains on the other ſide; the Turks were ſo beaten, that above 400 of their beſt Horſe, both Turks and Tartars were killed, and many Priſoners taken, amongſt which was the Commander in chief of the 500 Janizaries, with 12 Standards and Timbals which are the Muſick of Paſha's.

The Turks defeated.

In this Confuſion many of the Turks forſook their Horſes, and betook themſelves to their Heels through Buſhes and Thickets, and the adjacent Hills and Mountains; but being purſued by the Heydukes and Huſſars, who were acquainted with the private and ſecret Ways and Conveyances of the Country, many of them were killed and taken: Others of them, who to make themſelves more light for Eſcape, threw away their Arms, and whatſoever elſe might incumber them in their Flight; ſo that all the Ways were ſtrowed with Lances, Turbants, Boots, Caps, Cloaths, Veſts and Arms, all which became a welcome Booty and Spoil to the Victorious Soldiery.

This Succeſs ſo encouraged the Germans, that Prince Lewis to improve this Advantage to an entire Victory, reſolved to defeat and thwart the Deſigns of the Son of the Tartar Chan, (who lay encamped on the other ſide of the River) by falling upon him before he could come to joyn with the Turkiſh Cavalry lately beaten: And tho' the Imperial Horſe were much tired and haraſſed with the Fatigue of that Days Action, he returned notwithſtanding to the Bridge, where after three Hours March, about ſeven a Clock in the Evening he arrived.

The Cavalry being here refreſhed, and ſet up for a while, the Prince went in Perſon to viſit the Infantry, which he found well encamped out of all danger, and every thing perfectly well diſpoſed, and in good order by the Care and Conduct of thoſe two brave Generals, Veterani and Piccolomini.

Conſultations to Aſſault the Enemy.

After which ſome Scouts were ſent to diſcover the Ways, and obſerve the Ground on that ſide; upon whoſe Report that there was only a very narrow paſſage through a rough and thick Wood, about half an Hours March in length, by which there was an Entrance into a ſmall Plain, which if the Enemy ſhould poſſeſs, they might eaſily defend the Paſs, and make an Attack on the Tartars difficult and hazardous. Prince Lewis and the Generals, being well aſſured hereof, detached Count Solaro with 500 Men to ſecure the Paſſage into the Plain, but the Enemy having intimation thereof, with 3000 Janizaries, and a good Body of Horſe, not only gave a ſtop to his March, but cauſed him to retire with the loſs of ſeveral Men: But General Heiſler coming ſeaſonably in to their ſuccour, ſo advantageouſly poſted himſelf within the Woods and thick Buſhes, that he maintained the Paſs, until ſuch time (which was next Morning by Break of Day) that Prince Lewis coming on with his main force in a thick Fogg, poſted himſelf before the Wood, being ſheltored on the right Hand by Thickets and Buſhy Grounds, almoſt unpaſſable, extending his left Wing to the ſide of the Morava; and being thus advantageouſly drawn up, immediate Orders were diſpatched to the Cavalry, which were refreſhing themſelves at the Bridge, to haſten unto the Foot; but before they could come up, the Fog clearing away, unexpectedly the whole Body of the Turkiſh Army appeared (the moſt part conſiſting of Moors and Arabs) drawn up in order of Battle, juſt fronting the Imperial Infantry, which the Turks aſſailed with ſuch unuſual Fury, and ſudden Violence, that Prince Lewis had ſcarce time to draw up his ſecond Line into a poſture of defence. The Imperialiſts howſoever ſtood the Shock with great firmneſs and conſtancy, and received the Fire both of their great and ſmall Shot; and tho' the Chevaux de Freeze, were of great uſe to them at this, as on other occaſions, yet many of the German Foot were at that time cut to pieces by the Turkiſh Scimetars.

The Turks attack the Chriſtians.

And now the Fight became very hot on both ſides, and continued ſo for the ſpace of two Hours within Piſtol-ſhot, by which time General Count Caſſelli being come up with his Cavalry, and ſounding without the Wood with his Trumpets, Hautboys, and Kettle-Drums, the Enemy were put into ſuch a Fear and Conſternation, that they began to retreat into the neighbouring Wood; by which Prince Lewis having gained both Time and Ground, drew up his Horſe behind the Foot; and whilſt he remained in this poſture, a Bavarian Soldier, (who had been taken Priſoner at the Siege of Buda) having made his Eſcape, came and reported, that the Enemy was retired to another Plain behind the Wood; where for their better ſecurity, they had thrown up ſome Earth, and made new Trenches:

Are beaten & retreat.

Upon this Intelligence the Generals were in great hopes of gaining an entire Victory, if they could handſomely come to Charge the Enemy in the Flank; to perform which they deſigned to open a paſſage by their Muſqueteers; but it ſeems there was no need of ſo much Labour: for Count Guido of Staremberg being commanded to advance before with a Party to diſcover the Countenance and Diſpoſition of the Enemy, he found a way ſufficiently open and wide for a March, and not above 500 paces to the Plain, where the Enemy was retired not far behind their Trenches.

They quit their ground.

Upon this News the Prince immediately detached 300 Horſe, and a Battallion of his own Regiment, and another of Count Straſſer's under Command of that Count, to ſeize that Poſt, which ſucceeded ſo happily, that the Turks upon their firſt appearance, cowardly abandoned the place, and fled; which the Imperialiſts poſſeſſed, whilſt another party of Foot came in to their Aſſiſtance; and then the Cannon on both ſides fired with mutual damage, the which continued for the ſpace of an Hour and half; during which time ſeveral German Soldiers were killed and wounded, as alſo four Captains killed, beſides Lieutenants and Subaltern Officers who were wounded.

Some German Soldiers kill'd.

And here it was thought fit to take Breath a while, and enter into Conſultation, whether it were adviſeable to proſecute the Victory farther, or not, and purſue the Enemy, who had again poſted themſelves with more advantage in another Trench about 3 or 400 Paces behind the former, and which was much ſtronger, being encompaſſed with a deep Ditch of Water, and only acceſſible in one place, which the Turks continued to fortifie without any fear or apprehenſion of danger.

Another Attack on the Turks.

Upon due conſideration of the ſtrength of the place, and the Difficulties of an Attack, it was concluded that an Attempt was to be hazarded, and that with all expedition, and without loſs of time: Accordingly the Prince ordered that the firſt Trench ſhould be levelled for the more eaſie paſſage of the Horſe; and that Count Piccolomini (to whom the Command of the Van-guard was that Day committed) ſhould advance with ſome Regiments of Horſe, and ſome Battalions of Foot, and put himſelf into Battalia before the Trench; and Count Palſi with his Regiment of Heydukes, was ordered to take the left Hand by way of the Wood, and to ſound all his Drums, and Hautboys, and other Inſtruments, making the greateſt noiſe he was able in the Wood, and to give an Alarm, as if ſome great Body were in motion, to Attack them in the Rear, which would ſerve to put them into greater Conſternation and Diſorder.

Matters being thus wiſely ordered, Piccolomini began to advance in Battalia, and the Enemy endeavoured to repulſe him with their Cannon; but when they obſerved that the Germans without fear of their Fire, advanced ſtill reſolutely upon them, and gained ground; and that the Heydukes came on deſperately to the left; ſo fearing to be engaged in the midſt, they abandoned this their laſt advantageous Poſt, and with great Diſorder marched through thick Woods to their Camp at Patoſchin.

The Turks fly to Patoſchin.

This Cowardly Flight of the Turks inſpired new Courage into the Chriſtians to purſue them to their ultimate Retirement; which they had done to the entire Deſtruction of the Enemy, but that the Way was ſo narrow, that they were forced to break their Ranks, and march one after the other, which loſt much time, and gave the Turks means to eſcape, and the Janizaries having Horſes ready Sadled, notably advanced in their Flight; but Baron Zant having Orders to purſue the Rear-Guard of the Enemy, being joyned with the Regiments of Sarau, and Kiſel, they overtook many of them in the Woods, and purſued the reſt to their very Camp; after which, theſe Colonels not having Orders to follow the Enemy farther, who were 25000 ſtrong, beſides thoſe which ſtraggled in the Woods, they betook themſelves to the riſing of a Hill, where they halted until Prince Lewis came up to them with the groſs Body of his Cavalry, and then the Turks fled with Diſorder and Precipitation, as the Germans purſued with greater Heat and Courage; and had not the Woods been thick, and the Germans ignorant of the Ways and Paſſages, they had made a moſt terrible Slaughter, to the entire Defeat and Deſtruction of the Turkiſh Army. Howſoever Prince Lewis continued the Purſuit with ſome Parties of Horſe, under the Command of Colonel Zant; who gave ſo frightful an Alarm to the Turks, that forſaking their Camp with Fear and Conſternation, they left all their Cannon, Ammunition, and Proviſions to the Diſpoſal of the Enemy.

They abandon their Camp.

In the Camp they found 105 pieces of Braſs Cannon, and three Mortars, with great Numbers of Bombs, Granadoes, Powder, and all ſorts of Warlike Ammunition, and Proviſions, with their Camels, Oxen, Buffalo's, and Tents; and in ſhort all their Baggage became a Prey to the Victorious Germans, whilſt the timorous Turks fled in much Confuſion towards Jagodina and Krakolovetz; and many of them were taken up on the Way by the Hungarians, Huſſars and Raſcians.

The Germans poſſeſs it.

Great

August.

Great was the Joy of the Generals and Soldiers for ſo ſignal a Victory, and having lodged one Night in the Enemies Camp, with much Pleaſure and Feſtivity, the Day following early in the Morning they ſang Praiſes to God for his Mercy and Bleſſings of Victory; and as a ſignal of Triumph, made the Camp to reſound with three Vollies of Shot, with Drums, Trumpets, Timbals, and all ſorts of Warlike Muſick.

Return Thanks to God.

After Thanks were returned to Almighty God, who is the God of Hoſts, and Giver of Victory; the Imperial Generals thought it reaſonable and neceſſary to give ſome repoſe and reſt to the wearied Troops; and to augment their Commons and Refreſhments, Orders were given to the Commiſſaries to diſtribute amongſt the Army the Proviſions found in the Enemies Stores: In the mean time the Huſſars and Hungarians, who had purſued the Enemy for ſome Days, returned the 3d of September to the Camp, bringing ſome Colours, and many Priſoners with them, together with 36 pieces of Cannon of the largeſt ſize.

Septemb.

And thus the Victory being compleat, Prince Lewis permitted the Courier, whom the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors had dis-ſpeeded from Vienna to Conſtantinople, to proceed; he had been detained for ſome Weeks at Semendria, ſo that now beſides the Diſpatch from the Ambaſſadors, he carried another from Prince Lewis to the Grand Vizier, giving him to underſtand, that the Imperial Armies having advanced ſo far within the Bowels of the Ottoman Dominions, he would now proceed forward to meet him, and ſave him the trouble of a tedious March; but in caſe his Company, and coming ſhould be unwelcome and diſpleaſing to the Sultan, they might thank themſelves for the trouble of ſuch unacceptable Gueſts; which might have been avoided, had they hearkened to the Propoſitions which His Imperial Majeſty and His Allies made to them for a Peace, which they having unadviſedly rejected, had brought upon themſelves all thoſe Misfortunes which had attended them in every Action of this laſt Campaign.

Pr. Lewis Writes to the Vizier.

In the mean time the Blockades of Caniſia and Great Waradine, were daily more ſtreightned, and all the Corn and Graſs burned up in thoſe parts which were neighbouring to thoſe Cities; and tho' they ſuffered much Want and Penury of all things, and had received the unwelcome News of ſeveral Defeats given to the Turks; yet ſupporting and comforting their Spirits with hopes that a Peace would ſpeedily inſue, at leaſt in the Winter Seaſon, they reſolved not to ſurrender until the laſt Extremity.

Prince Lewis having refreſhed his Forces with ſeveral Days of reſt, and plenty of Proviſions taken from the Enemy, and reinforced his Army with ſome Troops coming from Belgrade, he prepared for a new Enterprize, and began his March towards Niſſa, about 20 Leagues diſtant from the Camp at Patoſchin, the moſt part of the way Woody and Mountainous; but nothing was now difficult, or inſuperable to the exalted Courage of the Germans. The Turks on the other ſide, tho' ſomewhat abaſed and mortified, yet ſupported themſelves with the Comfort, That tho' they had loſt their Camp, with their Cannon, Tents, and Baggage, yet moſt of their Army was ſtill in being; That the Tartars had beaten the Muſcovites; That the Troubles in Aſia were pacified, and the Diſcontents in Albania wtih Mamut Ogli Bey, compoſed. Moreover a Reinforcement of 20000 Men were ſent to the Seraskier, with new Tents, and all the neceſſary Appurtenances for War; and likewiſe it was reported abroad, That the Grand Vizier would come himſelf in perſon, and in deſpight of the preceding Misfortunes, would yet put an Honourable end to this Campaign.

Pr. Lewis marches to Niſſa.

Prince Lewis little regarding the Talk, and the Reports with which the Turks comforted themſelves, committing the charge of Patoſchin to a Sergeant Major, with 100 Horſe to cover the Artillery, and to guard them on their Way to Semendria, he disſpeeded ſome Hungarians and Raſcians to take a Survey of the Country, and of the State of the Turks Affairs; who accordingly coaſting the Country, brought News, that the Turks were not only fled out of all thoſe parts, but had likewiſe abandoned Niſſa, having for their eaſier paſſage built a Bridge over a Marſhy Ground near that Town. Whereupon the Prince having fixed his Boats on Wheels, Convoyed by a Party of 500 Horſe, he took his March with the whole Army on the 11th of September, and arrived that Night at Jagodina, after a hard March through Woods and Marſhes; and to make a paſſage for the Boats which were deſigned to make a Bridge over the Morava, a new Way was made through the Woods, where being arrived, they happily met ſome other Boats from Paſſarovitz, with ſome quantities of Flour, which came ſeaſonably for relief of the Army.

Pr. Lewis marches towards Niſſa.

At Jagodina News was brought that the Turks had quitted Niſſa; whereupon Prince Lewis detached 50 Heydukes of Palſi's Regiments, and 10 Dragoons on Foot to Cruſſavetz, to break down the Bridge there, and conſerve that Poſt; and for paſſage of the Army at a more convenient place, another Bridge was made with Boats, and to cover it Colonel Straſſer with 2000 Men, made a Redoubt on the other ſide of the River.

And here ſo great was the Mortality of Men and Horſe, and want of Forage, that it ſeemed almoſt impoſſible to advance farther; but News being brought, that the Turks were in great Conſternation in their Camp, and that the Soldiers deſerted by Hundreds every Day; and the Dukes of Croy, and Holſtein coming about that time to the Camp with ſome Recruits, animated Prince Lewis to come to one Battle more with the Seraskier; and having raiſed two Forts at the Bridge, he paſſed over with his Horſe on the 16th, and the Day following with his Foot. The Turks had juſt then received a Recruit of 10000 Men, and ſtrongly intrenched themſelves by the ſide of the River near Niſſa.

Pr. Lewis engages the Turks near Niſſa.

The Prince being ill provided with Victuals in his Camp, had no time to loſe, and therefore marched ſo faſt, that on the 22th of September, he pitched his Camp within a League diſtant from Niſſa, near a little Stream which falls into the Niſſava; from whence he took a proſpect of the Countenance and Situation of the Enemy, and their Camp; and having obſerved every thing, and in what place the Enemy might moſt commodiouſly be Attacked; on the 23th they marched forward in a cloſe, and well ordered Battalia; but nothing happened that Day beſides ſome ſmall Skirmiſhes of little importance; but that Night before the Evening was quite ſhut in, the Prince made as if he intended to make a Bridge over the Rivar to paſs to the Tartars, who were poſted on the other ſide; but in the Morning he took another Method, poſſeſſing himſelf of the ſides of the Hills, over the Enemies Camp; which when the Turks diſcovered, they detached a Party to engage with them, and with 2 or 3000 Turks and Tartars, they attacked the Rear-Guard of the Right Wing, by which Count Veterani was forced to keep a little behind with the two Regiments of Hanover and St. Croix, which formed the ſecond Line of that Wing, and were appointed to guard and cover the Baggage, which was always placed in the Rear of the Army: This ſlow motion of the Cannon and Baggage, which could not be avoided, retarded the motion of the advanced Troops, which ever and anon made a Halt, ſo that it was five a Clock in the Evening before they could reach the Foot of the Hill, where both Armies came in ſight of each other.

Septemb.

And becauſe it might rationally be conjectured, that the Turks would before the Morning, fortifie their Camp with ſome Trenches, and Parapets of Earth; the Prince reſolved without giving them ſo much time, to advance upon them with all the Courage and Fury imaginable; extending his right Wing towards the Foot of the Hill, and his left along the Plain to the Banks of the River Niſſava; which being orderly diſpoſed, reſolutely Attacked the Enemy, according to the Methods and Meaſures deſign'd.

Pr. Lewis Attacks the Turks.

The Turks with their accuſtomed Cry of Allah, Allah, cauſed the greateſt part of their Cavalry which was drawn up on the declivity of the Hill, to charge the Infantry of the left Wing, Commanded by Count Guido of Staremberg, and the Regiments of Kiſel and Sarau; which when the Prince obſerved, he cauſed ſome Cannon to be brought on that ſide; with which, and a Detachment from theſe Regiments, the whole left Wing advanced towards the Enemy; the Turks ſeeing this, retired with their Body of Horſe, and wheeled about towards the right Wing, and Attacked them at the Foot of the Hill on the Flank, which could not well be ſecured; which produced ſome Fear and Confuſion amongſt the Huſſars, but being ſuccoured by the Regiments of Holſtein, and Noircharmes, which Piccolomini Commanded, and by a Party of brave Hungarians, they ſo diſordered the Turkiſh Horſe, that they had been put to an open Flight, had they not been ſtopt in their Career by ſome of their own Troops, who met them and Fired upon them: By this Accident the Enemy ſtill maintaining their Ground on the ſide of the Hill towards the right Wing of the Germans, gave opportunity and time to the Cavalry to rally again in the Plains: But Prince Lewis inceſſantly riding and giving Orders in all places of the Army, commanded the main Body, which was directed by Baron Heiſler, to Attack the Turks on the Hill, which they performed ſo effectually, that after a long Conflict, they gained the top of the Hill; and then drawing all the Battalions into an equal Line, both the right Wing and the Baggage were both ſecured from the Attempt of the Enemy.

The Turkiſh Horſe in diſorder.

Duke of Croy ſuccours the right Wing

On the other ſide the Duke of Croy, who commanded towards the River, being adviſed by the Prince, that the right Wing was diſtreſſed, and hardly beſet by the Enemy, he preſently reſolved to advance to the top of the Hill in a direct Line towards their Succour, to give a greater Diverſion to the Enemy, and to gain the top of the Hill; the which being effected, the Situation thereof proved ſo advantageous a Poſt, that in a ſhort time they drove the Enemy from thence with a conſiderable Slaughter. Notwithſtanding which, the Turkiſh Horſe rallying again in the Plains, made another Vigorous Aſſault on the left Wing, but were received by them with ſo much Bravery and Reſolution, that they were once more on their Flight, when the Janizaries who were making new Trenches, Fired upon them, and forced them to ſtand another Charge; which they ſteadily performed, and with great Vigour againſt the Huſſars, but they being ſuccoured by the Regiment of Caprara, forced the Enemy entirely to quit the Field, and purſued them with great Fury to their very Camp.

Whilſt the left Wing had thus gloriouſly acquitted themſelves, another Party of the Enemies Horſe Attacked them in the middle of their Body, but being ſuccoured by Count Guido de Staremberg, with ſome Battalions of his own Regiment, and of the Heydukes of Palfi, they diſcharged ſuch terrible Vollies upon them, that great Numbers of the Turks fell Dead on the Ground; and the others ſo cowed and affrighted, that loſing all hopes of Conqueſt, when they ſaw their Trenches poſſeſſed by the Prince, and ſhut up on all ſides by the right Wing, they betook themſelves in good earneſt, to a confuſed and diſorderly Flight; and tho' the Night came on, yet the Victorious Germans purſued the Turks ſo long, as they could have the leaſt glimpſe or appearance of the Enemy; ſo that many of them to avoid the Sword, threw themſelves headlong into the Niſſava; where by the depth of the Water, and rapidneſs of the River, they miſerably periſhed. And here, as well as during the whole courſe of the Battle, the two Brothers Charles and Auguſt Princes of Hanover, with their Regiments, behaved themſelves with great Bravery; and in the heat of the Action, could ſcarce be withheld from following the Enemy into the Water; but only by the Perſwaſions and Injunctions of General Veterani, they gave a ſtop to the Purſuit.

The Turks put to Flight.

Thus the Night put an end to the Victory, and the Slaughter of the Turks, who abandoned the City tho' fortified with a good Ditch, and ſome Paliſadoes, after the Turkiſh manner, tho' irregularly planted; the ſame Night Prince Lewis put into the Town, ſeveral Battalions to conſerve it from being burnt, as the Turks intended to have done. In the Morning Proviſions and Forage were found ſufficient to ſubſiſt the Army for three Weeks. In ſhort, all the Cannon being 30 pieces for Battery, became a Prey to the Germans, as alſo many Thouſands of very fine Tents, (amongſt which was that of the Seraſkier, which the Grand Seignior had lately ſent him) with divers Standards, particularly that of Mamoot Ogli Paſha of Albania. The Horſe-Tayls were alſo taken.

The Chriſtians gain an entire Victory

The Numbers ſlain on the Enemies ſide, with thoſe Drowned, were computed to be 10000, amongſt which were 3000 Spahee's, whoſe Horſes and Mules, with rich Furniture and good Lading were brought to the Camp, where for that Night it remained, and next Morning was diſtributed amongſt the Imperial Cavalry.

This Victory was ſo much the more Glorious and Wonderful for having been atchieved by 15000 Germans tired and haraſſed by Marches, Countermarches, Skirmiſhes and Battles, as before related, againſt 80000 Turks; and what is ſtill more miraculous, there was not on the Chriſtian ſide above 300 killed and wounded, and none of any conſiderable Quality, beſides the Sergeant-Major of the Regiment of Stirum, and Count Vellen, the which great Succeſs is entirely to be attributed to the Almighty Hand of the God of Armies.

The Victory wonderful.

This ſecond Victory being in this manner obtained againſt the Seraſkier on the 24th of September, the whole Army continued in Arms all that Night; and in the Morning Quarters were regularly ſet out for the Soldiers within the City of Niſſa; and on the 26th all things being ſetled in good order, Te Deum was ſolemnly ſung in the Seraſkier's Tent, with three Salvoes of all the Cannon, and Vollies of Muskets returning Thanks to Almighty God, for this Wonderful Victory, which none but the Powerful Arm of the God of Hoſts was able to beſtow.

The Chriſtians enter Niſſa.

Afterward Prince Lewis having viſited the City, obſerved that it was fortified only with a ſingle Ditch and ſome Paliſadoes; howſoever it was judged very convenient for Winter Quarters, and therefore ordered that it ſhould be ſomething better fortified, by the Work of 2000 Foot, which were drawn out of ſeveral Regiments to labour on the Fortifications, which in a ſhort time was brought to that condition, as to render it capable of being the head Quarters for the whole Winter, where Proviſions were accordingly laid up in Store-houſes for Subſiſtence of the whole Army. And to diſcover the Countenance and Condition of the Enemy, Count Piccolomini gave Orders to Detach a Party of 1000 Horſe to enter farther into the Country, to view and obſerve the Quality and Situation of all places, as far as Sophia, and to poſſeſs all the Paſſes which the Enemy had abandoned.

It is fortified for Winter Quarters.

This Party being returned, brought News to the General, that tho' they had proceeded above half the way towards Sophia, they had not met, or ſeen, ſo much as one Turk on the Road, having found divers Places and Caſtles without People, and Deſerted; amongſt which, was Muſtapha Paſha Palanca, a Fortreſs, as Muſtapha Paſha Palanca.

1689. Septemb.

I remember, raiſed by a Paſha of that Name, to cover a Caravaſarei, for Travellers to Lodge with their Horſes and Goods in ſecurity, from the frequent Attempts of Thieves and Robbers, which in that deſolate Country gained great Spoils and Booty; and that they might be better protected, a Garriſon was put into it of 60 Men; for maintenance of which, this Paſha had given a Revenue ſufficient for it's Subſiſtance: And in this place I ſlept one Night as I remember, without any Care or Fears.

A Party of the Germans near Sophia.

From this place a ſmall Party of Germans and Hungarians were ſent as far as Dragoman, about four hours Journey from Sophia; which gave ſuch an Alarm all the way, that the Turks every where forſook their Dwellings, and ſo affrighted the Inhabitants, that hundreds of them ran to the Mountains, but ſuddenly returned, ſo ſoon as it was known, that the Party was ſmall which gave the Alarm. Howſoever, the Conſternation was ſo great, that the Soldiers contrary to the Commands given to make their Rendezvous at Sophia, fearfully deſerted, and fled to their own Dwellings.

October.

The News of this Defeat was firſt brought from Sophia to Conſtantinople, on the firſt of October, by one called Muſtapha Aga, whom Zulfigar the Turkiſh Ambaſſador at Vienna had freed from Captivity, and afterwards diſpatched him with ſome Letters to the Ottoman Port; but on his way, Prince Lewis had ſtopped him for ſome Months at Semendria, until the laſt Victory was obtained againſt the Turks; after which, he diſcharged, and ſuffered him to proceed, to carry his ſtale Packets from the Ambaſſadors, and freſher News from the Turkiſh Army, which was now entirely defeated, and diſperſed in the moſt ſhameful manner that ever was recounted in any Hiſtory.

The Turkiſh Court in great Confuſion.

The News hereof ſtruck all the Ottoman Court with confuſed Conſternation, none knowing what to ſay, or what to Counſel, much leſs to Act; but all wiſhed that the Meaſures and Reſolutions taken at Sophia, by the Grand Vizier, preſently after the Battle of Patoſchin, had been put in Execution, whereby the laſt defeat before Niſſa had been avoided, and an end put to the War with more Honour and Advantage than could now be expected.

A General Council of the Turks called at Sophia.

For the Grand Viſier had on the 17th of September, a thing not uſual, Convened a General Council at Sophia, of all the Grand Officers and Miniſters of the Empire; ſuch as the Nakib Effendi, who is the Chief of the Green-Heads, or thoſe of the Kindred of Mahomet, the Mufti, the two Kadileskers or Chief Juſtices of Romelia and Anatolia, the Generals of the Spahees and Janizaries, with many other principal Officers of the Army, and Civil Government. At which Council, the Propoſals for a Peace made by the Emperor and his Allies were publickly Read, and with much Attention hearkned unto by this Grand Aſſembly; which though judged in the Opinion of all there preſent, to be very ſevere and diſhonourable, and unknown before to their mighty Empire, which was uſed in former times to give rather than to receive Conditions of Peace; yet conſidering the preſent unhappy poſture of Affairs; it was unanimouſly concluded by them, to Embrace the Offers made, leaſt God who had puniſhed them for the Violation of their laſt Truce or Peace, ſhould puniſh them yet farther, if they ſhould refuſe to accept the Conditions now propoſed to reſcue them from Deſtruction.

The Grand Seignior conſents to a Peace.

The Articles being drawn up in Paper, were preſented to the Grand Signior for his Approbation, who having Read them, gave Anſwer, That he deſired to return to his Throne at Conſtantinople in Peace: And having ſigned them, they were committed to Muſtapha Aga to carry them to Vienna; for which Journey he had received 3000 Hungarian Ducats from the Treaſurer. The Articles were as follow, incloſed in a Letter to Zulfigar Aga, one of the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors in the Caſtle of Puttendorf.

Offers of Peace by the Turks.

I.

THat he ſhould uſe his utmoſt Endeavours to Conclude a Peace, ſo much deſired by all the People; who notwithſtanding the many Arguments, Allurements, and fair Promiſes of the French to the contrary, would not truſt to that Nation, which had been falſe to them in all Ages, and now alſo endeavoured to entertain them with a thouſand falſe Hopes.

II. That he ſhould labour by all means poſſible to perſwade the Emperor to quit Belgrade, and to make that place the Limit of their Dominions; and the Save to Terminate the Frontier on both ſides. And if any ſcruple or difference ſhould ariſe thereupon, that then in lieu thereof he ſhould offer Caniſa, or if that ſhould be taken, then to propoſe Giula, Temeſwaer, or Great Waradin.

III. As to the Polanders; to Content them, a Propoſal ſhould be made to demoliſh Kaminiec; and if that would not ſatisfie them, that it ſhould be ſurrendred.

Laſtly, As to the Venetians, They ſhould Enjoy and Keep all that they had taken; and that no mention ſhould be made of Negropont.

The News of a defeat given the Turks hinders the Peace.

Now whilſt Muſtapha Aga was ready to depart with theſe Articles, the unhappy News was brought to the Grand Viſier, That the Turks had received a total defeat before Niſſa, with the ſlaughter of many thouſands of Turks, and with the loſs of all their Cannon and Ammunition, together with the City of Niſſa it ſelf: And that the Vizier Kaja, or Deputy, with the Treaſurer of the Army, had made his Eſcape out of the Battle to Sophia with great difficulty; and that the remainder of the ſcattered Army went wandring through the Woods and Mountains; it not being known as yet, who was killed, or taken, or alive.

So ſoon as this Report was made known to the Grand Vizier, he immediately poſted the ſame by the Meſſenger who brought it, to the Grand Seignior, then at Adrianople; and all the way he Rode, he gave Orders in all Places to raiſe the Neſtran, or the Trained-Bands of the Countries, by which all things were in ſuch Conſternation, as if the Germans had been at the very Gates of Sophia.

This Change of Affairs gave a ſtop to the Expedition of Muſtapha Aga, until new Reſolutions ſhould be taken by another Divan, or ſome other Aſſembly of Council; the which being again met, they confirmed the former Reſolution, and diſpatched away Muſtapha Aga, with the former Propoſitions of Peace; And an Expreſs was diſpatched before him from Sophia, to obtain from Prince Lewis, a Paſſport and Safe-Conduct unto Vienna: The Prince readily granted, and ordered him a Party of 25 Horſe to Convoy him ſafely ſo far as Pyroth. And here Prince Lewis gave a period to the Proceedings of this year's Campagne: For conſidering, that the Seaſon was entirely ſpent, the diſtance far from the Danube, the Difficulties of ſo long a Communication, and the uncertainty of ſubſiſting the Army in the Enemies Country already waſted, and ruinous, he thereupon judged it moſt ſecure to return back to the Danube; and accordingly marched away on the 4th of October, having committed the Government of Niſſa, and of the Conquered Countries, to the Care and Conduct of Count Piccolomini, with ſome Regiments of Horſe and Foot, and ſome Raſcians under Paul Dioch, placing a good guard on the Mountain Hemus. But becauſe the Prince was very deſirous to defeat Count Tekeli, the great Partiſan of France, who was encamped near to Widin, he judged it of great importance to fall into his Quarters on his way to the Danube; and accordingly on the 6th of October, he encamped near the Caſtle Saverlick; and the next day he Quartered at the foot of the Mountain of Temach, which he paſſed on the 8th, through ſo narrow a ſtreight, that a ſingle Cart could ſcarce paſs; and moreover, the ways were ſo very rocky and incommodious, that the Baggage was greatly retarded; wherefore the Prince commanded ſome German and Hungarian Troops to advance towards Widin, and on the way by ſuch Priſoners as they ſhould take, to inform themſelves of the State of Widin, and of the Enemies Camp. Theſe Troops had not been on their way above two hours, before they returned with two Turkiſh Priſoners, who informed them, That Orſoua and Fetiſlau had been burnt on the firſt of this Month, and abandoned by the Enemy; And becauſe they feared, that ſome ſudden Attack would be made upon them by the Germans, they had carried away from Widin all the Proviſions of that place, and were gone farther by Water into the more diſtant Places of their Country; And that about 2000 Turks, and others of Tekeli's Troops were encamped near the River to cover the Boats on which their Baggage was to be laden; and that their Camp conſiſted of about 200 Tents: So Prince Lewis lodged that Night in the Country and Plains of Bergfelt.

The Ambaſſador proceeds to Vienna.

The Campagne ended.

Deſigns to ſurprize Tekeli.

Orſoua and Fetiſlau burnt.

Upon theſe Advices, next Morning by break of Day, being the 13th of October, the Army then with the Prince, conſiſting but of ſome few Regiments, proceeded on their march towards Widin, deſigning to arrive at the place early next day; and becauſe the Hungarians returned with the News, that the Enemy quartered near the City with all ſecurity, not ſuſpecting the approach of the Germans, having refreſhed their Horſe for ſome few Hours near Drenoua, they marched all that Night, and came about 11 a Clock in the Morning within ſight of Widin, where they firſt diſcovered the Camp of the Enemy; and having taken a view of the ſituation of the place, and the ſeveral Avenues thereunto, they found that they muſt neceſſarily paſs Three Bridges, or take a round through through ſome marſhy Grounds, which perhaps were unpaſſable, at leaſt very hazardous, without a faithful Guide or Pilot. Wherefore taking the opportunity, when the Janizaries and People were in the Moſch at Prayers, they cauſed the Horſe to paſs the Bridges, which having done without any Oppoſition, they trotted directly to the Enemies Tents, and entered into them about Three a Clock in the Afternoon: This unexpected Enterprize ſo alarm'd the Turks, that part of them, with affrighted Precipitation, betook themſelves to the Boats, and others mounting on Horſeback, drew out with the Janizaries, to the number of 12000, ranging themſelves in poſture of Battle.

The Turks make a ſtand before Widin.

Prince Lewis (advancing with ſome of his light Cannon in the Front) committed the Conduct of the Right Wing to Count Veterani and Trautmanſdorf; and the Left he commanded in Perſon, with which ſome Countermarches were made to ſpend time until the Infantry could come up, gaining ſtill ſome ground upon the Enemy. Howſoever, the Turks made a ſtand, and fought with ſuch Reſolution, that the Victory ſeemed dubious for a while; but the Dragoons of Veterani diſmounting, which were uſed to do Miracles, threw themſelves with their Swords drawn into the Ditch of the Town, killing and ſlaying all that came in their way; which, when the Turkiſh Infantry obſerved, part of them came to their aſſiſtance; but the Right Wing, Commanded by the Prince, ſoon relieved them, and came thundring on them with ſuch furious Reſolution, that they put all to the Sword, excepting thoſe who were retired into the Caſtle, or made their eſcape by Water: The greateſt part of the Turkiſh Cavalry (unleſs thoſe belonging to the Baggage) fled by the way of the Moor or Marſhy Ground (with which they were acquainted) towards Sophia and Nicopolis, leaving the Mountains on the Right Hand, and the three Bridges on the Left; and all their Camp, with their Tents and Baggage both within and without the City, for a Prey and Booty to the Victorious Chriſtians: Many Colours, four Horſe-Tails, ſome thouſands of Horſes, and other Beaſts, were taken, with great quantities of Forage: Above a thouſand Turks were killed on the place, with many Priſoners: In ſhort, the plunder of the City was given for a Prey to the wearied Soldiers, who had well deſerved it for a Reward of their Valour, and indefatigable Labours, and for an Encouragement to future Services.

The Turkiſh Cavalry put to flight and the Army defeated, and Widin taken.

The Germans gained greater Honour by this Action than by any other of this Summer's Expedition; for their Forces were few, and the Enemies fought with more Reſolution and Bravery than they had done in any former Engagement; for in none were more killed, and wounded than in this. Count Veterani received a Wound with a Muſket-ſhot, and Count Trautmanſdorf with a Scimetar, and both in the Head; and Baron Orlich, a Lieutenant Colonel, was killed on the place.

October.

But as yet the Caſtle of Widin held out, for which reaſon the Soldiers kept a watch about it all Night, that the Defendants might not have an opportunity to make their Eſcape.

The Turks refuſe to deliver the Caſtle of VVidin.

The next Morning the Caſtle was ſummoned, but no Anſwer being given, the Prince ſent a Turk to the Commander, to let him know, That unleſs he did Surrender up the Caſtle and Garriſon that very Day, he was not to expect any Quarter, or Conditions of Mercy. It was not long before the Turk returned from the Caſtle, with a fierce Anſwer from the Governour, That he and his Companions were reſolved to defend the Caſtle to the laſt drop of their Blood. Prince Lewis was not a little diſpleaſed at this Anſwer, becauſe for want of Proviſions he was in ſome haſte to remove his Camp; but not to leave ſuch a neceſſary Work as this imperfect, he immediately diſpatched away to Semendria, for Cannon, Mortars, and Ammunition; And having raiſed on the 16th of October, a Battery, he plied the Caſtle ſo hard, that the Turks ſpread a white Flag and came to Capitulations, which were ſoon agreed, upon Terms; That the Garriſon and People therein might march forth with all their Goods: for Carriage of which, 30 Boats were to be aſſigned them; but in regard Boats were not to be procured, 200 Carts were provided in the place thereof; So that on the 19th of October, 2559 Soldiers, all Armed, with about as many Inhabitants, marched out of the place, which were Convoyed by 200 Dragoons towards Nicopolis; and the Hoſtages being committed to ſafe Cuſtody, five Companies of the Regiment of Dunghen, were placed therein for a Garriſon.

The Caſtle of VVidin ſurrenders.

The Soldiers and People march out.

Upon the Report only of the march of the Imperialiſts towards Widin, Tekeli abandoned the City, tho' he had a ſtately Houſe therein, and very well furniſhed; yet ſo debaſed was he in his Courage, that he fled before the Battle towards Nicopolis; from whence he came with a ſad Countenance, and Tears in his Eyes, to meet the Garriſon and People expelled from the Town and Caſtle: Howſoever, he ſhowed a courteous Aſpect to the German Soldiers, who were appointed for Convoy to the People of Widin, and in a Friendly manner treated them with Wine, and a plentiful Entertainment.

Widin a place of much advantage to the Chriſtians.

As Widin was a great loſs to the Turks, ſo it was of high advantage to the ſucceſsful Arms of the Emperor; for by taking this place, all the Conqueſts made by the two laſt Victories, namely the Territory of Niſſa, and other Places poſſeſſed on the Way to Sophia, were all covered, and the Way ſecured for importing Forage and Proviſions, and all Neceſſaries for ſupport of the advanced Troops under Piccolomini, poſted for guard and defence of the Conquered Countries, and free Communication and Correſpondence with the Neighbouring Principalities: And on the contrary the Turks of Temeſwaer, and other Garriſons maintained in the Upper Hungary, were all greatly ſtreightned and annoyed thereby, without any hopes of being ſuccoured, or relieved; and thereby Tekeli alſo was diſlodged from thoſe Parts, in which he had perſwaded the People by his fair Words and Promiſes, to remain conſtant and faithful, and ſtand by the Grand Seignior with their Lives and Fortunes.

Winter Quarters provided for the Soldiers.

It being now towards the end of October, it was judged high time to give refreſhment and eaſe to the wearied Soldiery, by putting them into warm and commodious Quarters during the Winter Seaſon. The Province of Walachia was a Country near to them, abounding with all ſorts of Proviſions, and there it was intended to Quarter a great part of the Army.

Upon which Reſolution Prince Lewis diſpatched to the Prince of Walachia theſe following Propoſitions, requiring an immediate Compliance therewith, otherwiſe that he would do himſelf Reaſon with his Sword, giving him only ſix Days time to return an Anſwer.

The Propoſitions made to the Prince of Walachia and the States of that Province, dated the 28th of October, were as followeth.

Propoſitions made by the Prince of Walachia.

‘WHEREAS it hath pleaſed Almighty God to give many ſignal Victories unto His Imperial Majeſty, whereby ſeveral Cities, Countries, and Provinces have been recovered out of the Barbarous Poſſeſſion of the Turks, and thereby alſo Walachia ſecured from Servitude and Slavery; in conſideration whereof, it was demanded from the Prince and States, that Winter Quarters be given for the ſpace of ſeven Months for 15000 Men Horſe and Foot, according to the Rules and Proportions which have been ſetled by the Imperial Decrees in former times, both in Hungary and Tranſilvania: That is to ſay, from the firſt of November 1689, to the laſt of May 1690, in the manner following.

For Winter Quarters.

‘I. That two Pounds of Bread ſhall be provided for every Man per Day, with a Pound of Fleſh, and a Meaſure of Wine, beſides his Bed, Salt, Candle, Wood, and all other Neceſſaries for ſupport of Humane Life. That four Buſhels of Oats a Month, eight Pounds of Hay a Day, with two Bundles of Straw a Week, ſhall be allowed for every Horſe.

‘II. That the Prince and States ſhall pay unto the Soldiers 800000 Florins within a certain time.

‘III. That the Prince and States ſhall find 1500 good Horſe, to mount thoſe Cavaliers who have loſt their Horſes, and alſo ſhall find them Armour within a certain time, according as hath been practiſed in Hereditary Kingdoms and Provinces; the Arms for Cuiraſiers ſhall not be valued at more than 30 Dollars for every Horſeman, and 25 for every Dragoon, the which ſhall be defalked out of the Sum of the ready Money which is to be paid.

‘IV. That the Deputies ſent by the Prince and States, ſhall return to them again; and in the ſpace of ſix Days, ſhall come back to the Imperial Camp, with the poſitive Reſolution of what ſhall be performed in this Matter, and ſhall bring with them Commiſſaries, who ſhall allot to the Soldiers their reſpective Quarters.

‘V. That the Prince and States ſhall appoint and ordain Hoſtages; namely, two Barons of the chief Nobility in the Province, who ſhall remain with the Imperial General as Guarantees for performance of the Treaty, and that the Prince may have liberty to change and relieve them every Month (if he pleaſes) with two others.

‘VI. That in caſe the Prince and States ſhall punctually comply with theſe Propoſitions, they are hereby aſſured in the Name of His Imperial Majeſty, That neither the Emperor's General, nor any other Officer, or Soldier ſhall bind, or oblige them to any other Conditions, nor ſhall they in the leaſt manner be farther oppreſſed, or damnified, but to the con-

Lewis of Baden.

About this time the Expreſs which Prince Lewis had diſpatched lately to Piccolomini, returned back with this following Letter.

Count Piccolomini to Prince Lewis.

IF Your Moſt Serene Highneſs ſhall be pleaſed to return me back all Your Army, I can here give them Quarters and good Subſiſtence. The Albanians of Clementa have ſent their Deputies to me, with Propoſals to ſubmit unto the Emperor, with whom I am now in Treaty. Upon theſe Succeſſes, I hear that Mamut Paſha is fled, and I have ſent to ſeek for his Horſe-Tail which the Vizier gave him. I know not what to do with theſe Wild Beaſts, for upon pretence of coming in to us, I know not how to reſtrain them, tho' they ruine and ſpoil all the Country, and put me into ſome Fears and Apprehenſions for them, whilſt their Outrages affright others from coming in. To diſmiſs them out of our Army, I fear ſomething worſe, and to keep them, is to ſuffer them to deſtroy all. I am going to the Paſs of Cavinigh, *intending to ſecure my ſelf on every ſide. Count Piccolomini.

1689. October.

Upon theſe encouraging Advices, Prince Lewis reſolved to detach Prince Charles of Hanover, with three Regiments, viz. of Sarau Hanover, and the Infantry of Croy, to reinforce Piccolomini at Procopia, where was a Magazine repleniſhed with Hay, Oats, Flour, and every thing for the Subſiſtence of an Army. With theſe Recruits Piccolomini on the 14th of this Month marched from Procopia towards Uſcopia; and the Day following came to a narrow Paſſage which the Turks call a Dervent; where meeting with a Deſerter from Sophia, they were adviſed by him that the Turks had a deſign upon Niſſa, for which reaſon retarding their March, until the 17th, they learned within that time that thoſe Informations were only the Lyes of Greeks, who are naturally falſe, and haters of the Weſtern Chriſtians; whereupon they took their March for two Days through the Mountains, on which are the two Counties of Clementa and Roſſaiava, which had never paid Taxes, or Contributions to the Turks, but rather the Turks unto them. In theſe Countries they made no ſtay, but haſted with all expedition poſſible towards Priſtina and Clina, where they had underſtood from the advanced Guards, that 6000 Arnouts, with 1300 Carts, and many Thouſand Head of Cattle remained in expectation to joyn with the Germans, and to oppoſe the Turks with all the People of the Country, and to yield themſelves Subjects and Vaſſals to His Imperial Majeſty. Being arrived at Priſtina, they concluded a Treaty with thoſe People; and on the 23th they proceeded to a certain little City with a Caſtle called Kazianech. Upon the News of this Approach, the Turks fled the Night before; but a Party of Horſe purſuing after them, they happily encountered within the Mountains near a Bridge, with 300 Turks, which were coming from Scopia, to reinforce the Caſtle of Kazianech, which was already taken; and tho' it was Night, yet they attacked them, and killed 19, taking ſome Horſes, 4 Colours, and 11 Slaves: And here it was neceſſary to make a Halt for a ſhort time to ſecure a Paſs which was in the middle way, which was ſo rugged and narrow, that the Cannon not being able to paſs, they were remanded back to Kazianech, with all the Carts of heavy Baggage.

In two Days time more they marched through this narrow Paſs, and entered into a large Plain, diſtant about three Hours from Scopia, where they received different intelligences of the State of Affairs in that City, ſome reported that the Turks were reſolved to defend the Place unto the utmoſt Extremity; others, that thoſe People who

the Night before had eſcaped from the Attack, had given a terrible Alarm to the Town, inſomuch that the Turks and Greeks had abandoned the place, and had joyned themſelves to Mamut Paſha, who with 10000 Men was encamped in a Valley. Nothing could come more joyful to the Chriſtian Army, than to hear that the Turks had quitted their Walls, and places of Defence, to draw into an open Plain; with which they were ſo animated, that they gave a Salvo with the 10 pieces of Cannon which they had with them, and with ſuch Shouts of the Soldiers, as if the Victory had been already in their Hands: At the ſound whereof, the Turks were put into ſuch a Conſternation, that they quitted their Camp and fled for refuge and ſhelter into the Neighbouring Woods; but being purſued and hunted by the Huſſars, and ſome few Germans, many Turks were killed, and 2000 Carts belonging to the Country People, were ſet at liberty, which the Turks had preſſed for their Service, to carry away whole Families of Men, and Women, and Children into Slavery: Moreover ſome Chriſtian Slaves were recovered, together with a conſiderable Booty, beſides above 100 Turks, and as many Jews were made Priſoners.

The Antient Seat of Ladiſlaus Cziacchy plundered and burnt.

In this manner the Way being made open, Piccolomini marched into the adjacent Countries of Scopia, in which he found the ancient Seat of Count Ladiſlaus Cziacchy, which was of a much more capacious and large extent than it was ſuppoſed to be; howſoever without a Wall, Ditch, Cannon, People, or Money; howſoever there was in it a large Magazine, filled with all ſorts of Grain, Flour, and other ſorts of Proviſions and Merchandize; but according to the Report of the Inhabitants, much infected with the Peſtilence: There was alſo an old ruinous Caſtle, conſerved only for its Antiquity. Piccolomini not giving much credence to theſe Reports, went in perſon to viſit the place; where having conſidered the Situation of it, and the difficulty to maintain it, he gave it over to the plunder of the Soldiery, and afterwards putting Fire to it in ſeveral places, the Houſes were all in a ſhort time reduced to Aſhes together with ſeveral ſtately Moſchs and Fountains.

Upon theſe Succeſſes Piccolomini retired back towards Kazianech, which he had left defended with a ſtrong Garriſon, the People flocking thereunto in great Numbers to be protected, and received for Subjects of His Imperial Majeſty.

Piccolomini ſick, yet marches towards Priſſeren.

At this place having divided his Army, he detached a Party under Command of the Prince of Holſtein, with a Regiment of Cuiraſiers belonging to the Hanover Troops, to march towards the Mount Hemus; and with the remainder of the Forces, he went himſelf to Lippian, and thence he detached Colonel Straſſer with his Regiment of Foot, and ſix pieces of Cannon towards Boſnia, to drive the Turks out of the Caſtles of Zwetzey and Panza. And tho' the Sickneſs of Piccolomini increaſed upon him, which ſome People termed the Plague; yet his active Soul ſtrugling with the Diſtemper, he took a March with his own Regiment, and that of Stirum, with two pieces of Cannon, towards Albania, to diſcover and inform himſelf what his Lieutenant Colonel the Baron of Hebersburg had acted in Priſſeren with his Albanians: Whilſt he was in this March his Fever increaſed, ſo that he was conſtrained to reſt a while with his Army at Capuſchmit, where he received advice, that Lieutenant Colonel Maursberg of the Regiment of Stirum, had poſſeſſed himſelf of the Caſtle of Panza; but that the other of Zwetzey, being ſituate on a Rock, refuſed to Surrender, unleſs compelled thereunto by Fire and Cannon.

And to Panni.

The Commander of Pyroth defeats 1500 Turks.

The Imperialiſts defeated near Dragoman.

Tho' the Diſeaſe of Piccolomini increaſed, yet he could not be perſwaded to take a longer reſt and repoſe, which is neceſſary in Fevers; but being full of Zeal, and deſire of Triumph, he marched with his Regiments towards Panni; on the way to which, Advices came to him, That the Commander of Pyroth, with a Party of Germans, and 800 Huſſars, had taken the Field in the Enemies Country, where at the firſt they had the good fortune to defeat a Party of 1500 Turks, which they found encamped near Dragoman, a place diſtant about ſix or ſeven Hours from Sophia, where they had poſted themſelves, to obſerve the Motions of the Imperial Forces; but that ſoon afterwards the Turks being Alarm'd in all their Quarters near Sophia, they appeared in ſeveral Bodies on both ſides of the Mountain, with Reſerves both of Turks and Tartars; and having with their Numbers ſurrounded the Germans, after a great Slaughter on both ſides, the Chriſtians were forced to give back, and betake themſelves to Flight.

To repair the damage, and prevent the ill Conſequences of this Surprize, Piccolomini without any delay diſpatched poſitive Orders to Colonel Straſſer, to deſiſt from his Enterpriſes in Boſnia, and return to Niſſa, leaſt the Enemy encouraged by this Succeſs, ſhould adventure to make an Attempt upon that place.

Piccolomini comes to Priſſeren.

In the mean time Piccolomini continuing his March, on the 6th of this Month came early in the Morning under the Walls of Priſſeren, where he was met by the Archbiſhop of Albania, and the Patriarch of Cle-

And formed into regular Troops.

Count Piccolomini, tho' in a languiſhing Condition, was yet much relieved by ſuch a ſurpriſing appearance of People, who came with humble ſubmiſſion to devote themſelves to the Imperial Soveraignty, but being acquainted with the unſetled and voluble Temper of that People, he knew not what to think of this ſuddain Revolution, until he had firſt ſatisfied himſelf by the Archbiſhop, and ſome of the Officers, (who were the firſt of thoſe that were come in) that this People would prove obedient, and conſtant to the Emperor's Intereſt; with which Report Piccolomini remaining ſatisfied, he cauſed all the Soldiers to be liſted under his Banner; with this Temperament howſoever, that all thoſe who were deſirous to retire, and live like orderly Citizens within the Walls of Towns, or in the Fields to cultivate the Ground, ſhould have a free liberty ſo to do, and be protected by the Imperial Arms: But as to thoſe who were willing to follow the Camp, and be formed into regular Troops, ſhould be obliged to take the Military Oath, binding themſelves to all Obedience and Reſpect towards their Commanders, and to live according to the rigour and exact Rules of Military Diſcipline.

Piccolomini's Death.

So ſoon as Piccolomini had made this Declaration, and given this Charge to the new Soldiery, his Diſeaſe increaſed upon him, of which being ſenſible, he ſent to the Archbiſhop to perform all thoſe Offices, which were to be done in the time of the laſt Agony; which being adminiſtred with great Devotion, this brave General expired his laſt, to the unexpreſſible Lamentation of the whole Army, and Sorrow of the Imperial Court.

The Command and Government of all the Conquered Countries, having been promiſed to General Veterani, upon News of the Death of Piccolomini, he prepared to take poſſeſſion thereof; but in the mean time that the Army might not be deſtitute of a General, the Conduct thereof was committed to the care of the Prince of Holſtein, to maintain and ſupport the Conqueſts of thoſe parts, until Veterani ſhould come and take poſſeſſion thereof.

1689. Decemb.

Muſtapha Aga comes to renew the Treaty of Peace.

Thus ended the Campaign of 1689, glorious in the whole progreſs thereof to the Imperial Arms, the Victories whereof over the Turks being ſcarce to be numbered, filled Vienna, and the Hereditary Countries with Joy and Triumph. And here it had been happy for the Empire, and all Europe, had the Germans fixed the Concluſion of the War at this period, before the Air of Fortune, which had blown for ſome Years with a proſperous Gale in favour of the Germans, had changed her Kindneſs, which we ſhall find in the following Year inconſtant and favouring the Enterprize of the Turks. It is a moſt unaccountable Infatuation, That the Imperial Court, obſerving before their Eyes the vaſt Preparations of France to attack the Empire, ſhould not have endeavoured to quench the Fire of War on one ſide, an Opportunity for which ſo fairly offered it ſelf, by the Arrival of Muſtapha Aga, ſent with Letters from the Ottoman Port to the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors detained in the Caſtle of Puttendorf, to renew the Treaty, which had for ſome time been laid aſide.

The Imperial Court was at this time at Auſpurg buſied in the Election and Coronation of the King of the Romans; and therefore the Emperor appointed Count Quintinio Jergher, Knight of the Golden-Fleece, and Counſellor of State, and Lord Lieutenant of the Hereditary Countries of Auſtria; together with Baron Dorſch Secretary and Counſellor of War, to enter into Conference with the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors; to whom alſo was joyned the Cavalier Girolamo Venier, who was Ambaſſador to the Emperor from Venice, and there attending the Intereſt of that Republick, in regard to this Treaty. But before the Turks would enter into the Particulars, they diſpatched a certain Bey to the Congreſs, with ſome Conſiderations and Reflections which might repreſent the State and Temper of the Ottoman Empire, not to remain in ſo vile and debaſed an Eſtate, as to beg a Peace; but that they were ſtill able with their Swords in their Hands to Treat, and in caſe of failure of an Agreement, to maintain a War. The Conſiderations offered were theſe.

Conſiderations Offered by the Turks.

I.

THAT they ſhould conceive a right Notion of the great Power of the Ottoman Port.

II. That the Chriſtians favoured rather by Fortune, than by the ſtrength of their own Power, had gained all thoſe Victories of which they now Triumph.

III. That all the Inſurrections in Aſia, and Civil Commotions amongſt themſelves were now appeaſed.

IV. That the Sultan had diminiſhed much of his Expences, and reduced the Number of uſeleſs Officers in his Seraglio, whereby vaſt Sums were ſpared for Maintenance of the War.

V. That the Taxes on the People, were raiſed from five Dollars on every Houſe, unto a hundred.

VI. That it might now be hoped, that the Anger of God being appeaſed for the Sins of the Believers, the Chriſtians turn would ſhortly come, when they alſo ſhould be puniſhed for their Offences.

VII. That the Ottoman Empire was ſtill powerful, both in Men and Money.

VIII. That the Sultan would in lieu of Belgrade, which upon the Peace muſt be ſurrendered, that the Save might be made the Confines of both Empires, yield up to the Emperor ſome other Fortreſſes, as an Equivalent for that important City.

Theſe preliminary Suggeſtions were generally turned into Ridiculous Interpretations, and Commentaries thereupon; ſo that in Anſwer thereunto theſe following Reflections were drawn up, which evidenced the Scorn and Diſdain, the Imperialiſts at that time conceived of the Turkiſh Power.

Anſwers to the Conſiderations Offered.

TO the Firſt it was reply'd, That the Ottoman Power conſiſted more in Numbers than in Force; an Evidence whereof appears to the World, in that the Turks, who for the ſpace of 300 Years had waged a War in Hungary, do now ſcarce poſſeſs a Foot, or Palm of that Kingdom, unleſs in ſome few Cities, which are yet ſo ſtreightned by Blockades, that they are ready to periſh with Famine, and offer themſelves up to the Mercy of the Emperor. Witneſs alſo the Succeſs before Vienna, when Beſieged by 300000 Turks, were not yet able to render themſelves Maſters of the ſame, but were forced to fly, and ignominiouſly to turn their Backs to a quarter part of their Number, and forced to return without other Glory, than that only of burning ſome Villages, which might have been done by a Rabble of People, or 100 Incendiaries.

To the Second it was ſaid, That with the Divine Aſſiſtance, the Chriſtian Troops, tho' much inferiour in Number to thoſe of the Turks, had won divers Battles during this War, and made themſelves Maſters of many Towns, and Caſtles; and particularly of Buda and Belgrade, the Capital Cities of great Provinces, which were not ſubdued by long Sieges, but by Storms, and dint of Sword.

To the Third it was ſaid, That the Troubles in Aſia ſtill continued, and their Civil and Domeſtick Seditions, not as yet appeaſed, and were yet likely to increaſe higher, by reaſon of their Tyrannical Government, which the oppreſſed People would not longer endure.

To the Fourth it was ſaid, That the Diſcharge of the Women, and Officers, to the Number of 4000 out of the Seraglio, was an evident Token of their want of Money to ſuſtain the War.

To the Fifth it was ſaid, That the heavy Burden of Taxes, from five to a 100, was the ready means to move the People to a Rebellion, of which there are frequent Examples in all Hiſtories.

To the Sixth, that howſoever the Turks might flatter themſelves with the pacification of God's Anger againſt them, they would yet find the contrary, and prove the juſt Revenge of the Juſt God, whom they had provoked by the Breach of their Faith, and Oppreſſions of thoſe People whom they had ſubdued.

To the Seventh, That there was great difference between Soldiers and Incendiaries, in the latter of which the Turks ought rather to be reckoned, than amongſt the former.

To the Eighth, which concerns the Surrender of Belgrade, it was replyed, That the Emperor would ſooner ſurrender Newſtadt in Auſtria, or the Gardens about Vienna, than that City, with which this Conference was concluded.

Amongſt all the foregoing Particulars, we find nothing ſolid or material, or under any Diſpute, unleſs that point of exchanging Belgrade for ſome other place or places, not as yet Conquered in Hungary; that ſo the River Save might be the limit and confine between the two Empires: Nor was it probable, that the Turks would have broken off the Treaty on this Point only, had they they not hearkened to the Promiſes of the French, who now being ſenſible how uſeful, and neceſſary the Alliance of the Turks would be to them, were reſolved not to loſe the Benefit of ſo helpful an Aſſociate; and therefore uſed all their perſwaſive Arguments to continue the War, which were inculcated with mighty Preſents to the principal Officers of State, and Aſſurances that with the next Spring they would not only enter the Empire with ſuch vaſt Armies, as ſhould oblige the Emperor to withdraw his Forces out of Hungary; but alſo aſſiſt them both with Money, and with able Engineers and Officers to carry forward the War.

And indeed tho' in the following Year of 1690, we ſhall not find any great matter warmly acted by the French on Germany, purſuant to the Promiſes they had made unto the Turk; yet we ſhall find them in a Year or two afterwards entering Germany with Fire and Sword; and in the Year 1693, beſides the Conqueſts gained in Brabant and Flanders; we ſhall hear of the burning of Heidelberg, and all the Upper Germany in danger of an entire Deſolation: All which might eaſily have been prevented, had the Emperor hearkened at this time to the Offers of the Turks, who came prepared to accept of any Conditions, that in reaſon could have been impoſed upon them. But this Opportunity being let ſlip, Fortune changed its Courſe, and the Exploits of War were acted with various Succeſſes; and tho' afterwards the Emperor ſought for Peace by Interpoſition of Mediators, the Turks were ſo far engaged with the French, and ſo encouraged by their Succeſſes, that they would now hearken to nothing under the Surrender of Buda, and all the Conqueſts in Hungary.

1689. Decemb.

The Reaſons for which the Peace was obſtructed.

The Loſs of this Opportunity for gaining a Peace, may be attributed to the Infatuation of the Minds of the Germans, blinded for puniſhment of the Sins of Chriſtendom. No doubt but the French Faction in the Imperial Court, availed much in the defeat of this Deſign, as did alſo the power of the Papal Court, in which at that time Alexander VIII. reigned; who hearing of the Overtures of Peace treating at Ausburg and Vienna, diſpatched away from Rome, Cardinal Colonitz, with Inſtructions about the Affairs of Hungary, who after having aſſiſted in divers Conſultations, and Conferences thereupon, the whole Treaty broke off, and the Ambaſſadors diſmiſſed from all farther Negotiations, of which we ſhall very ſpeedily bewail the fatal Effects.

THE

Venetian Succeſſes

In Their WAR againſt the

TURKS,

In the Year 1689.

1689. January.

IN the preceeding Year we made a Relation of the Venetian War againſt the Turks, maintained in the Iſland of Negropont, and againſt the chief City thereof known by that Name. The Enterprize was of great Importance, and the Preparations for the ſame agreeable to ſo mighty a Deſign, which had it ſucceeded, would not only have ſettled and eſtabliſhed the Venetians in their Conqueſts of the Morea, but rendered them Maſters of all the Coaſt of Romania; but the Venetians inſtead thereof, being compelled by Sickneſs, and unfortunate Attacks upon the place, in which they loſt many of their brave Officers, to quit the Iſland with ſome Confuſion, and as it were ſtealing off in the Night, for fear the Enemy ſhould fall on their Rear, Cannon and Baggage; but the Turks being deſirous to be rid of ſuch Gueſts, were willing to have made a Bridge for them, rather than to have adminiſtred the leaſt Retardment, or Hindrance to their Departure.

The Venetian Fleet Winters at Napoli de Romania.

All the Auxiliary Gallies, as thoſe of the Pope, Malta, and Florence, being retired (as we have ſaid) to their reſpective Countries; the main Body of the Venetian Armata entered into the Port of Napoli di Romania, with deſign to Winter there, ſo as better to Command the Archipelago, and to be near Negropont, ſo as to be ready to obſtruct the Turks in caſe they ſhould Attempt to repair thoſe Works, it being intended to make another Attack on that place early in the Spring; and to that end Orders were ſent to Venice to diſpatch away the Recruits for the Land Forces, with all Neceſſaries for the Fleet, and Proviſions for the Winter, of which there was ſo great want, that both the Land and Sea Forces had much difficulty to ſubſiſt, ſo melancholy a Countenance was put on through the whole Camp, that nothing but the prevailing Authority of their Doge and Captain-General could reſtrain them from a Mutiny; but that which a little comforted the Soldiery, was the mildneſs of the Winter, which gave a cheerful green colour to the Fields, which yielded Herbs, and Winter-Fruits in much Plenty; and becauſe the Buildings of the Town had been much deſtroyed and ruined by the Bombs, and Cannon, they raiſed little Hutts and Cottages for ſhelter, and Lodgings for the Soldiery; to which the Athenians, who had no great deſire to return to their own City, had greatly contributed, having Built divers Houſes at their own Coſt, and with their own Labour.

1689. January. The Venetians in ſome diſtreſs.

But what moſt diſ-ſpirited the Army, was the Sickneſs of the Doge Moroſini, who long had laboured under a violent Fever, in ſuch a manner, that the Phyſicians themſelves deſpaired of his Life; for Conſervation of which, ſolemn Prayers and Proceſſions were appointed to be made, both at Venice, and in all Places under that Dominion.

The Doge ſick.

February.

At length, after a tedious Expectation, the Convoy arrived, to the univerſal Joy and Conſolation of all the Forces and Country round about; which began to give new Life to all Motions and Enterprizes, and to inſpire the Soldiers with a new ſtock of Courage; for all People having been ſupplied both with Money and Proviſions; the Carpenters fell heartily to Work on the Veſſels, and Gallies, to repair and make them fit for the next Voyage, and the Soldiers remained ready to Embrace any new Enterprize: But the Doge continuing ſick, and reduced to a great weakneſs and debility of Body, put a damp on the Spirits of the Soldiery, and much retarded the proceedings of all Deſigns.

A Convoy with Money and Proviſion arrives from Venice.

For 1689.

February.

Turkiſh forces landed at Negropont.

For tho' the Captain Extraordinary Venier, was Commanded with his Ships to watch, and guard one ſide of the Channel of Negropont, and Captain Valier Commander of the Great Alexander to attend the other; yet the Captain Paſha broke into Negropont, with ten Gallies, and there landed 500 Men, promiſing them by Order of the Sultan, in a ſhort time, a much greater force, with which they ſhould be ſupplied very ſpeedily: and that in the mean time, they ſhould labour with all poſſible induſtry to repair the Works which the Enemies Bombs and Cannon had ruined; ſo that the Venetians were not able to obſtruct the Turks from giving Relief to Candia, but inſtead thereof, had the Misfortune to loſe two of their Gallies by Storm, and were forced to return back again to Napoli di Romania, where their chief Comfort was, that the Sickneſs began to decreaſe, which had for ſome time raged both in the Fleet, Army, and Countries round the City.

March. Moroſini recovers his Health.

The Spring coming on, the Doge began to recover his Health and Strength again, to the great Joy of all the Soldiery, ſo that he could now attend to Buſineſs, and give Orders to the Armata, which had been ſo well repaired, and Careened, as that the Gallies were in a Condition already to put to Sea: Notwithſtanding all which, the Turks were not obſtructed in their paſſage to Negropont, where four Gallies belonging to the Beyes arrived, bringing Spades, Shovels, Pick-axes, and ſeveral other Inſtruments for repairing the Breaches made laſt Year by the Enemy; on which, their Slaves, being diſ-enchain'd from the Oar, laboured Day and Night with all diligence; and Miſſir Ogli, with ſome Gallies, was alſo arrived, being ſent to forward that Work; for the Turks had an Opinion, that the Venetians would make another Attempt thereupon, and which ſhould be the Work of the following Summer.

But the Venetians had ſuffered ſo much the laſt Year before Negropont, that they eſteemed themſelves in no good Condition for a ſecond Enterprize, they having not as yet licked their Wounds whole, nor recruited their Army, which was much more weak than it was the Year paſt, and unable to undertake an Enterprize in which they had already been foiled. Howſoever, not to ſit Idle, and look about them, their Aim was on Malvaſia, to reduce which, ten Gallies, and 12 Galleots were diſpatched by the Captain-General to aſſiſt in the Building of two Forts near the Bridge entering to the Town, on which the Mainotes, whom the Captain-General had armed, were labouring to finiſh, being of great importance towards a Blockade, and to hinder all Veſſels from bringing Proviſions to the place: And farther to proceed in this Deſign, the whole Armata was Commanded to Sail to Porto Porro, appointed, as it was the laſt Year, to be the Magazine for Arms, Proviſions, and Ammunition for the War; where being arrived, they attended the Duke of Guadagne, with his Troops for Reinforcement of the Army; and in the mean time, the Bridge was broken, and the two Forts before Malvaſia were finiſhed, and a great number of Boats, Felucca's, and Palandra's, lay before the Town to hinder all ſorts of Proviſions and Succours from being brought into it, by which the place was entirely blocked up on all ſides, both by Sea and Land; for the ſituation of the Town being on a Peninſula, there was no Communication could be had with the Country but by the Bridge, and a narrow ſpot of Land.

1689.
March.

Malvaſia blocked up.

Whilſt Matters remained in this Nature before Malvaſia, a certain Greek, called Liberachi, lay encamped near Xeromero alias Miſſolonghi, with about 100 Turks, 150 Sclavonians, and ſome Deſerters from the Venetian Army. This Liberachi or Liberio, was a Mainote by Nation, a Fellow bold and ſubtle, and did great Services for the Venetians, until he was taken Priſoner by the Turks and carried to Conſtantinople: He had not remained any long time there, before he gained ſuch Credit with the Turks, that by his fair Words and Promiſes, they were perſwaded that he could draw all the Mainotes to their Party, and cauſe them to Revolt from the Venetians. Upon which Opinion, they ſet him at Liberty, and entertained ſuch Confidence of him, that they gave him the Title and Charge of Bey, that is, Lord of the Mainotes; whereby many Deſerters from the Venetian Camp came in to him; And ſome Propoſitions for joyning Forces paſſed between him and Enſign Boſſina, who in the Month of October 1687. with moſt part of the People called Oltramarines, had Deſerted and liſted themſelves under this Boſſina, who ſtiled himſelf Commander in Chief of the Deſerters; and having his Head-quarters at Carpenizi, towards the Confines of Lepanto, he exacted Contributions from the Villages and Countries round about: With him joyned ſome other ſeditious Captains, and a certain Enſign called Vito of Captain Rado's Company, a Fellow of a bold Spirit, without Faith or Honeſty; and with him he debauched ſeveral diſſolute Soldiers to forſake the Camp and joyn with Boſſina.

The Remedy.

The Troops of Liberachi being greatly increaſed by this Conjunction, the Venetian Generals conſulted in what manner they might give a ſtop to this Deſertion, and cut to pieces Liberachi, Boſſina, Vito, and their Followers: In the firſt place it was reſolved to declare, That ten Zechins ſhould be given for the Head of every Deſerter, or for any that ſhould be brought alive to the Camp; the which produced an excellent Effect; for hereupon many of the Albanians, who had deſigned to be of the Conſpiracy, changed their Minds, and having poſſeſſed themſelves of the narrow Paſſes from Thebes to Petra, Negropont, and Vola, ſeized on many of them, and brought them back to the Camp, where they ſuſtained the Puniſhment which their Treachery deſerved; by which means the Conſpiracy was broken, and many of thoſe who watched an opportunity to Eſcape, contained themſelves within the Limits of their Duty.

A Plot laid againſt Liberachi.

A Plot againſt Liberachi.

Dambi ſent to him

But the manner how to Ruin Liberachi was much more difficult, and ſome Conſultations were held thereupon: At length it was concluded, That the only way to Effect this Stratagem, was either by alluring him into the Hands of the Venetians, or by rendring him ſuſpected to the Turks; who upon the leaſt Jealouſie were ready to apply the Bow-ſtring to his Throat. To this purpoſe, a certain Captain, called John Dambi, offered himſelf, a Perſon of great Bravery and Conduct, and a good Soldier; one who ſpake Turkiſh, Greek, and Italian, and was very well verſed in all the Manners, Ceremonies, and Cuſtoms of the Turks; and above all, that which made him the moſt proper Inſtrument for this work, was, That he had been a moſt intimate Friend of this Liberachi; for having been a Fellow Slave with him, and linked in the ſame Chain at Conſtantinople, they became ſworn Brothers, and made Proteſtations of mutual and unviolable Friendſhip ever to continue; and that after they ſhould be eaſed of their Chains, yet the ſame Bonds of Faith and Affection ſhould never be diſſolved.

Nor was Dambi only his Friend; but the Doge Moroſini had been Liberachi's Godfather, a Relation much endearing in that Country; and therefore the Title both of Friend, and Godfather, had great Charms with the generous Temper of Liberio; who upon the firſt notice given him by Dambi, that being at Lepanto, not far from Vracori, was very deſirous to make him a Viſit, he inſtantly diſpatched a Paſs, or Salvo Condotto to him, inviting him with all the kind Terms imaginable to come to him without the leaſt ſcruple or fear imaginable.

Is kindly received by Liberachi.

Their Conferences.

In Confidence of Liberachi's Fidelity, Dambi departed from Lepanto in Company with two Friends, and two Servants; and in two days time arrived at Vracori, where he was received with all the Ceremony and kind Treatment that could be expected. Upon the News of a Stranger's arrival in that Town, the Turks were curious to know who he was, which Liberachi freely declared, ſaying, That he was come from the Venetian Armata, on no other Deſign, than as an old Friend, to ſee him, and tell old Stories of what Troubles and Miſeries they had ſuſtained together. The Turks ſuppoſing that he might be come over to their ſide, bid him kindly welcome; as did alſo one Marco Stiſichi, Captain of a Galleot, whom the Captain-General had for his many Pyracies committed to the Gallies; howſoever, in reſpect to the Oltramarines, had ſet him at liberty; but he, ungrateful for the favour received, fled to Liberachi, intending to ſide with the diſcontented, or rather licentious Mainotes under his Command. After ſome Diſcourſes over a Diſh of Coffee and Sherbet, according to the Turkiſh Treatment, the Turks and Stiſichi withdrew; and then Liberachi began to unboſom himſelf to Dambi, That the Obligations he had to the Captain-General, who in the year 1657, had Anſwered for him at the Holy Font in Calamata, were ſuch, as called for all Reſpect and Duty to him; and moreover, he could not but be ſenſible, that his moſt Serene Highneſs, could not but be diſpleaſed, and troubled to ſee one, whom he had made a Chriſtian, to ſide with the Enemies to that Religion; and therefore he did not doubt, but that he had ſent him, that is, Dambi, to endeavour to get him back to the right Way from whence he had ſwerved: Dambi hereupon confeſſed the ſame, and aſſured him from the Captain-General of Favour and Promotion, in caſe he would return, and bring over with him the Revolted Mainotes, which would be a good Example for Boſſina, and his Oltramarines to follow.

Liberachi excuſes his coming over to the Venetians.

To which Liberachi made this Reply; That he would moſt readily comply, were not his Obligations too great at Conſtantinople, where he had not only a Wife and Children, but two Friends engaged for his Fidelity to the Grand Seignior, and which would moſt certainly ſuffer with the Ruin of their Families, ſhould he Prevaricate from the Faith he had given to the Turks; moreover, he had Married the Widow of the late Prince of Moldavia, with an Eſtate of 20000 Crowns; in which Match, the Grand Vizier had been inſtrumental; ſo that his Sin of Ingratitude would be the more notorious, ſhould he make a Revolt after ſo many Kindneſſes he had received on all ſides. By this time Dinner was brought in, which was with great Plenty both of Diſhes and Wine, well dreſſed, and very ſumptuous; at which there was none preſent unleſs Liberachi himſelf, Dambi, and his Prieſt. After Dinner, the ſame Diſcourſe was carried on, and Dambi perſiſted to urge him with all the Arguments which Reaſon could ſuggeſt to return unto his Duty; but Liberachi ſtill perſiſted, that his Obligations to his Wife and Children were ſo great, that they out-weighed the Duty to his Prince; for that the Laws of Nature and Faithfulneſs given to thoſe, who had been Bail, and Security for his Fidelity, ought upon no Conſiderations in the World to be violated, and therefore he deſired his Friend to preſs him no farther upon that Point. At the end of this Diſcourſe, one Ali Bey, ſent with Money from the Seraskier to pay the Soldiery under Liberachi, came in, and demanded who this Dambi was; and being informed, that he was an Ancient Friend known to him at Conſtantinople, and came now to him from the Venetian Armata, for no other Reaſon than to make him a Viſit: Ali Bey deſired, that he might have him in his Cuſtody, to carry before the Seraskier, promiſing upon his Faith to return him back again in Safety: But Liberachi refuſing ſo to do, ſaying, That he had pawned his Word already that he ſhould return back without Hindrance or Moleſtation; Ali Bey departed, but with ſome Threats, that he would make this Denial known unto the Seraskier, and how he had given Entertainment to a ſuſpected Stranger. Dambi fearing ſome ſtop or trouble from hence would immediately take leave of his Friend, who juſt at his departure, deſired him, that ſo ſoon as he ſhould be arrived in the Morea, that he would kiſs the Feet of his moſt Serene Highneſs, and return him a thouſand Thanks for the great Goodneſs and Favours which he had by many inſtances demonſtrated unto him; giving him to underſtand the Reaſons and Cauſes which debarred him from enjoying the true Felicity of thoſe many Offers of his moſt precious Grace and Favour: Howſoever, he gave him Aſſurances of doing all Services poſſible to his Highneſs, by adviſing and informing him of all the Motions and Deſigns of the Turks; but becauſe the practice hereof might be dangerous by Letters, which were ſubject to be intercepted; he deſired that his Highneſs would direct the way, and manner of ſuch a Correſpondence; And in the mean time, he pray'd Dambi to inform him, That the Seraskier was at Zittuni, with 4000 Soldiers, amongſt which were 1200 Horſe; That his Orders from the Grand Seignior were, That in caſe the Venetians ſhould make a ſecond Attempt upon Negropont, and that he had force ſufficient, that then he ſhould give them Battle, and not ſuffer them to Intrench before the City: But if on the contrary, the Venetians ſhould be too ſtrong for him, that then he ſhould endeavour to make a Diverſion, by falling into the Morea, waſting and conſuming the Country; and that he, Liberachi, was ordered with his Forces, being about 2000 Men, to joyn with the Seraskier in this Action. And farther he deſired him to acquaint the Captain-General, That in Negropont they had made a Palliſade round Carababa, about a Musket-ſhot diſtant from the Town, which was of great Defence to the place. Likewiſe, That Ibrahim, who Commands in Negropont, had declared, That in caſe the Seraskier at Land ſhould not aſſiſt him in the Defence of Carababa, it would be impoſſible to maintain and conſerve the City; That they were making other Outworks to cover the place; That the Seraskier was ordered not to depend upon any Succours from Conſtantinople, but received Commands to raiſe what Men he was able in the Parts where his Army was, as far as to Lariſſa; and that the Garriſon of Negropont conſiſted of no more than 3000 Men: And that the Orders which he himſelf had received, were to bring all the Country under Contribution from Salona to Santa Maura; which he was reſolved to do with great rigour, by forcing them to pay ten Dollars a Head; by which means they would be conſtrained to fly for Refuge into Morea, which he thought would be of ſome Advantage to the Venetians. Diſcourſing farther upon theſe Matters, Dambi deſired to know what was become of Captain Boſſina, who Commanded the Oltramarines, which had deſerted from the Army; to which he gave Anſwer, That they were in the Villages of Carpenizi.

Dambi departs.

In this manner, the Diſcourſe being ended, Liberachi would accompany Dambi on ſome part of his way, and brought him four Miles with 70 Horſe, and ſome Footmen, commanding alſo two of his Captains with ſome Men, to give him Convoy ſo far as the River Lepanto; to which place being conducted with ſafety, he was admitted with all readineſs to the preſence of his Serene Highneſs, who much applauded the punctual Relations and Services of Dambi; hoping from thence, that the Plot could not fail that he had 1689. laid for Liberachi; for either he would be forced thereby to leave the Service of the Turks, with many of his Followers, or otherwiſe falling into the Jealouſie of the Turks by this free Conference, it could not but prove fatal to him; ſo that take it which way they would, Liberachi was under a neceſſity with his Men of ſeeking Refuge under the Protection of the Venetian Arms.

The Troops embarked.

Theſe Circumſtances being well conſidered, were a ſufficient motive to Embark the Troops, and to order ſome Ships, and other Veſſels to ſail forthwith to Malvaſia, and to direct Orders to Gradenigo Proveditor-Extraordinary, to march with the Horſe into thoſe Parts. But whilſt the Doge was in a readineſs to Embark, there arrived an Expreſs with Letters from Demetrio Gaſpari, an Athenian, dated at Culuri, adviſing, That he, and thoſe Inhabitants had received Intelligenee, That ſeveral Galleots belonging to the Enemy, were coming upon them, and therefore in all Humility, they ſupplicated, that they would come to their Aſſiſtance and Succour; Whereupon Orders being given to the Galleaſſes, Ships, and Galleots to ſail for Malvaſia, the Doge with the Gallies took his Courſe directly for Culuri; but before they could come thither, labouring againſt the Winds by force of their Oars, the Turks had been there, and tranſported from thence 350 Greeks, for the moſt part Women and Children; for the Men had ſecured themſelves in the Mountains; but great Inſtances being made for their Tranſportation to ſome more ſecure place, and that they might be ſet aſhore on the Iſland of Egena; it was ordered, that three Veſſels ſhould attend, and carry them to what Place they ſhould determine; and then the Doge proceeded to the Iſland of Specie, and the day following to Malvaſia.

The Doge ſails for Culuri.

And here having Intelligence, That ſeveral Barbaroſſe Ships infeſted the Coaſts of Zant, and Sapienza, and had already taken a Patach belonging to Zant; the Doge began to be in ſome fear for the Convoy expected with Money from Venice for Subſiſtence of the Army, under the Command of Girolamo Cornaro Proveditor-General of the Sea; the which being debated at a Council of War, and the importance of the Matter well conſider'd, it was reſolved to diſ-ſpeed away immediately, the Proveditor of the Armata, Auguſtino Sagredo, with twelve Gallies, and Lorenzo Venier, Captain-Extraordinary, with ſix Ships, with Orders to ſail as far as Corfu to meet the aforeſaid Cornaro, and to bring him and the Ships under his Convoy, laden with Money and other Neceſſaries, in ſecurity to the Fleet. In which matter, both the Commanders of the Gallies and Ships having received their Inſtruction, and having provided themſelves with all things neceſſary for their Voyage, they ſet ſail in few hours before Night.

In the Morning the Ships were obſerved to be at ſome diſtance from the Shore, and at leaſt ten Miles from the Gallies, which were making their way to Cape St. Angelo, the which gave ſome Trouble to the Doge, by thinking, that in caſe theſe two Diviſions were ſo far ſeparated at the beginning, what would become of them before the end of the Voyage; Whilſt the Doge thought of theſe things, a great Fleet appeared Steering directly to that Port, which coming nearer was found to be the Fleet which brought the Duke of Guadagne, Serjeant-General Baron Spaar, and ſeveral other Officers, with 333 Foot Soldiers.

The Duke of Guadagne joyns the Fleet.

Two Venetian Gallies loſt.

About this time arrived the unhappy News of the loſs of two Venetian Gallies, one Commanded by Pietro Dona, and the other by Henrico Pappafava, both Venetian Noblemen, taken by the Corſairs of Tripoli on the Coaſt of Sapienza. This Advice was very ſurprizing to the Doge, it being a loſs which had not happened with ſo much Diſgrace for many years to the Venetian Arms; and the more ſtrange it was, in regard, That Franceſco Dona was on Board the Galley, a Perſon of great Experience in Maritime Affairs, and yet ſuffered himſelf to be deceived by two white Streamers or Pendants which the Enemy had put forth, to be eſteemed French, by which the Gallies were decoyed ſo near, as to be out of all poſſibility of Eſcape.

A Relation of the ſtate of the Town.

The Doge having laid Siege to the Town of Malvaſia both by Sea and Land, a certain Slave, who had been Captain of a Tartana, having made an Eſcape from the Fortreſs, gave an Account of the State and Condition of the Town and Caſtle; relating, that the Garriſon conſiſted only of 700 ſtout Soldiers, with which, and with the Inhabitants, they might amount to about 2000 Souls, Women and Children, all reſolved to defend themſelves, as appeared by the Sequel. The Commanders in Chief were Muſtapha Diſdar, or Governor of the Caſtle, an antient Man, who carried great Authority and Reſolution in his Face and Actions: And Aſſan Aga, who Commanded the Town, who upon approach of the Enemy, cauſed their Galleots, Brigantines, and ſmaller Boats and Veſſels to be drawn cloſe under the Wall of the Town, for their better ſecurity; That the Houſes of the Town were ſtrongly built; and that the principal Perſons thereof had filled all their upper Rooms with Earth, to cover them from the Bombs; but that the Streets for the moſt part were very narrow: That the Turks were then at work in drawing their Cannon to ſuch parts of the Wall, from whence they might moſt annoy the Bridge: That the rich Inhabitants were well ſupplied with Proviſions, of which they were forced to Communicate ſome part to the poorer ſort: That the Garriſon was not paid; but that conſiſting for the moſt part of Natives of the Country, and Seamen inured to Hardſhip and Pyracy, were contented to ſuffer and undergo any Trouble and Want for the Sake and Defence of their Native City: And in ſhort, That beſides the Garriſon there were about 160 Greeks, who kept Watch and Ward, and underwent all the Duties of a regular Militia.

This Information gave ſome Retardment to the formal Siege and Attack of the place; for it was reſolved to attend the arrival of the ſeveral Convoys, and Auxiliary Gallies ſhortly expected; and that in the mean time, the Town ſhould be kept under a ſtrict Blockade, and the Guards placed in all the Avenues and Paſſages to the Town, where the Duke de Guadagne the General ſhould judge moſt proper to diſpoſe them; and to loſe no time, all the Troops were drawn into a Body, that a particular Review and Account might be taken of the Numbers and Condition of the whole Army.

June.

Whilſt theſe things were acting, the eight Gallies of Malta began to appear, being then Doubling the Cape of St. Angelo, Commanded by Fra. Carlo Spinelli, who was Bali of Armenia; a worthy Soldier, and a Religious Commander, whoſe Fortune being to joyn the Venetian Fleet on St. John's Day their Tutelar Saint, added very much to the Joy and Feſtivity of the Day. And what farther increaſed the Satisfaction both of the Fleet and Army, was at the ſame time to ſee the happy arrival of a Convoy Commanded by Pietro Bembo, bringing 72000 Zechins in Gold for Service of the Army; upon which alſo arrived, the Prince de Harcourt, and Count Enea Rapetta Serjeant-Generals, beſides ſeveral ſelect Companies of Foot to the number of 455 Soldiers, with Proviſions of all ſorts for their Support and Maintenance; as alſo the Regiments of Hiſy, and Simon Famſogna, both Colonels of Croatia, conſiſting of about 700 Foot; as alſo a Regiment of Dragoons of the ſame Country, under the Command of Colonel Strel. After the Entrance of theſe ſeveral Gallies and Veſſels into Port; and having caſt Anchor in their orderly Diviſions, and the Salutes made and returned by Cannon, and Vollies of ſmall ſhot, according to the cuſtomary Civilities of the Seas, the Admiral of Malta attended with his Followers of Knights and Gentlemen, went to pay his Viſit to the Doge, after the ſame manner as he had done the year before, (which happened then to be on the 16th of July) the Ducal Galley remain'd with it's Anchor a-Pique, in an open place, having the Galleaſſes for Antiguards, with their Anchors alſo a-Pique, and with Streamers and Colours flying, as is uſual in ſuch Solemnities; The Doge received theſe Generals below on the Deck, and afterwards conducted them into the Poop, where having entertained one the other, with Diſcourſes of their reſpective Voyages, and of the preſent ſtate of the Camp before the Town, and paſſed other Civilities and Compliments, they took their leaves, and returned to their ſeveral Veſſels.

The Malta Gallies arrived the 24th.

The Venetian Convoy arrives.

1689. June.

Viſits made to the Doge.

The next Day the Doge ſent his Lieutenant-General Andrea Piſani to return the Compliments in his Name with the like Ceremony, and to deliver unto thoſe Generals the ſeveral Ordinances of War, and the Inſtructions both for Fighting and Navigation. After which, a Council of War was called, at which the Doge, the General of Malta, the Duke of Guadagne, and all the General Officers both of Sea and Land, were preſent to Conſult, and take ſuch Meaſures as were moſt agreeable to the preſent Exigencies.

The Compliments returned.

There were four Propoſitions made for employing their Arms, and four Deſigns offered, but they were all of ſo different a Nature, that they could not come to any Determination at that Meeting; but at length, after various Reflections made on the neceſſity there was of coming to a Reſolution, it was concluded, That General Guadagne ſhould with his Cavalry take a view of the Streight of Corinth, (which is that Neck of Land which joyns the Morea to Greece) and upon a Survey thereof to make a Calculate, how many Men would be required to Maintain and Defend that Paſs in caſe the Turks ſhould endeavour to force their entrance that way into the Morea, it being of great importance to fortifie that paſſage, and not leave it open, and undefended to the Incurſion of the Turks; whilſt the Armata ſhould be employed on other Enterprizes.

Liberachi threatens Villages near Salona.

He fights, and is defeated.

Whilſt things remained under theſe Uncertainties, News was brought by an Expreſs from Salona, That Liberachi had wrote a menacing Letter to the Bayliffs and principal Men belonging to the Villages and Parts adjacent, that they ſhould come and pay their Reſpects to him, and bring their Carach, or Poll-Money with them, or otherwiſe he would come and puniſh them according as their Diſobedience ſhould deſerve. To which they unanimouſly made Anſwer, That he might come when he pleaſed, that they feared him not; and that he ſhould find their Scimetars to be as keen, and ſharp as his. Liberachi upon this Anſwer, being then at Zittuni, not far from Salona, immediately put his Troops in order, and marched againſt them; and was boldly encountred by Charopoliti, who Commanded the Country People, and being joyned with ſome Troops of the Confederate Provinces, and of the Oltramarines, (who under the Command of Elia Damianovick, had deſerted the Venetian Army) they joyned Battle with Liberachi, and after a Bloody Fight defeated him, and carried many of the Turks Heads to General Cornaro, who with his Gally was nearly approached to that Coaſt.

July.

The Narrow of Corinth fortified.

But as to the Venetian Arms, all things remained ſtill and without motion; only the Doge and Guadagne paſſed with ſome Gallies along the Shoar-ſide by way of the Gardens, to take neceſſary Obſervations of the Countenance of the Enemy, and Situation of the place, without coming to any certain Reſolution. Howſoever at length, after long Debates, they reſolved at a Council of War, (that their Arms might not remain longer unemployed) to dis-ſpeed the Cavalry, which were to march by Land, and 3000 Foot Soldiers to be embarked on the Ships, furniſhed with all ſorts of Proviſions both for Arms, and Victuals, and therewith to ſail to the Streight of Corinth, to diſappoint the Seraskier of all hopes of Entrance into the Morea: The Prince Harcourt was to Command the Horſe, accompanied with the Sergeant-General Spaar; who joyning with the Auxiliaries of that Country under the Command of Dambi, it was calculated, that they might form a Body of about 7000 fighting Men effective; who were to be attended by Cornaro the Proveditor-General, who, with ſome Gallies, was to aſſiſt as any occaſion ſhould occur.

The Plague breaks out.

But whilſt this Deſign was putting in practice, and all things prepared for the March and Voyage of the Soldiers, and ſome already gone, the unhappy News arrived, That the Plague was broken out in the Country of Tropoliza, whereby the whole Army might be in danger of Contagion; that being the common Way, and Road by which all the Proviſions were to paſs for Relief of the Army, unleſs they would take a compaſs by Sea round the Morea, which would be an uncertain and tedious Navigation. But His Serene Highneſs the Doge, having put all things in the moſt ſecure manner poſſible to avoid Infection, 14 Sail of Ships were diſpatched for Tranſport of the Soldiers, on which were laden the Chevaux de Friſe, with all ſorts of Proviſions, and Ammunition for War, and Suſtenance of the Soldiers. And that the City of Malvaſia might ſtill remain ſtreightned by a Blockade, and as it were Beſieged, the two Forts were finiſhed, which ſerved to keep the Defendants within the compaſs of their own Walls, and to hinder them from other Avenues on the ſide towards the Gardens, at that place which is called Palio Dirgo, ſome Regiments were ordered to raiſe certain Forts and Redoubts on that ſide, the Slaves belonging to the Gallies, which were brought as near as they could come, were employed in the Works to caſt up Earth, and make Faggots; and a Squadron of Gallies under Command of Piſani, was poſted there to be aſſiſtant to the Regiments aſhoar.

Malvaſia blocked up.

The Doge in the mean time removed from the Fort of St. Nicholas, which was the Old Malvaſia, towards the New Forts, which being entirely compleated, four pieces of great Cannon of 50 Pound Bullet were Landed, and planted on the principal Fortreſs, whence they greatly annoyed the Turks; howſoever the Enemy was not negligent on the other ſide to ply their Cannon on that part which is neareſt to the Bridge.

The Malta Gallies permitted to cruiſe abroad.

In the mean time alſo the General of Malta, (for whom at preſent there was no great Action) by permiſſion of the Doge received licenſe to be abſent for 15 Days, and to cruiſe about the Cape of Sapienza, and Watch for the Corſairs of Barbary, which did commonly infeſt the Seas.

A Storm endangers the Gallies.

About this time Prince Maximilian of Brunſwick arrived at the Armata, where the Day following he was received with the uſual Ceremony by the Doge; he brought with him no more force than what ſerved for his own Equipage, and for the better Defence of the Ship, on which he was Embarked: but ſo ſoon as this Prince had performed his Complements, a ſudden Storm aroſe with Hail and Wind, ſo violent, as put all the Gallies into imminent danger; ſome loſt their Boltſprits, others their Main-Yards, others had their Oars broken, ſome had their Poops blown away, and Boats were overturned, with ſuch prodigious Hail, as the like had ſcarce ever been ſeen before. In ſhort the whole Armata was in danger of being loſt; but God be praiſed, tho' the Eſcape was wonderful, yet it coſt ſome Trouble, Time, and Charges to repair the Damages; in which alſo the Forces on Land had their ſhare, having had their Tents and Huts overthrown by this Hurricane of Wind; only the Turks received ſome benefit thereby, having had their Ciſterns filled with the Showers of Rain and Hail, which fell like a Deluge into all the Receptacles and Veſſels made to receive freſh Water for the Uſe and Service of this City, of which before this Accident, they began to be ſenſible of ſome want.

Reinforcement ſent to the Narrow of Corinth.

And now Letters were brought from the Forces lately ſent to guard the Streight of Corinth, that the Defence and Conſervation of that place, would require a 1000 Men more; which His Serene Highneſs being deſired to diſpatch away, they were without any delay embarked on the Squadron of Captain Piſani, and by that time the Batteries for the Mortar-pieces being alſo completed, they began to throw their Bombs and Carcaſſes thick into the Town, which ſo incommoded the Defendants, that the Venetians began to conceive ſome hopes of a ſpeedy Surrender, and the Forts played ſo conſtantly on the Town, to open and widen the Breaches, as if they had intended to have ſtormed the Walls, for which they had neither Men, nor other Preparations. Howſoever it was hoped, that by the Cannon and Bombs only, the City might be reduced: For that a Magazine of Powder in a place called the Wind-Mill, was blown up, and by a Report received from ſome Deſerters, the Defendants were extreamly annoyed by the Bombs; of which their greateſt damage was to their Ciſterns, and Conſervatories of Water; by this intelligence the Doge was encouraged to ply them inceſſantly with Bombs, not only from the Land-ſide, but from three Palanders, or Bomb-Ships, two of which were placed directly oppoſite to the City, and a third was drawn juſt under the Fortreſs to increaſe the Annoyance which was made by the Cannon.

The Bombs annoy the Town.

The Gallies of Malta return.

In the mean time at the expiration of the 14 Days allotted, the Malta Gallies returned from cruiſing on the Coaſt of the Cape Sapienza, having neither met the Ships of Barbary, nor other Booty: And whereas it was repreſented, that theſe Gallies could be little ſerviceable at preſent towards the Subjection and Surrender of the City, it was judged, that they might be beſt employed in cruiſing on the Pirates of Barbary, and ſecuring the Chriſtian Veſſels which Trade in thoſe Seas; and accordingly thoſe Gallies were without the leaſt delay diſpatched again for the Cape Lands, which are moſt infeſted by the Pirates, being favoured by the Northern Winds, which continued for ſeveral Days, even to the end of this Month.

July.
They go again to Sea.

But this Wind which was beneficial to the Gallies of Malta, was ſo prejudicial and dangerous to the Palanders, as put them beſides all their Works and Operations; ſo that inſtead of annoying the Town, they had Buſineſs enough to ſave themſelves from ſinking in the Seas, which the Northerly Winds drove violently upon them: So that now the Beſiegers had nothing to annoy the Enemy, but what was thrown from the Forts erected on the Land.

Auguſt.

Cornaro joyns the Fleet.

Things in this manner not ſucceeding well on the Venetian ſide, ſome little encouragement was adminiſtred by the Arrival of the Proveditor General of the Seas, Girolamo Cornaro, who on the 5th of the Month of Auguſt, whilſt the Doge was in perſon on the ſide of the Gardens, to invigorate, and by his preſence to animate the Approaches againſt the Town, was diſcovered to double the Cape of St. Angelo with two Gallies, and a Galleot, and to bend his Courſe directly towards the Fleet. The Arrival of Cornaro, a perſon of ſo much Honour and Eſteem, generally applauded in all parts, gave wonderful ſatisfaction to the Fleet and Army; for tho' the Gallies and Galleot he brought with him, could not contribute much to the Reinforcement of the Armata; yet the Reputation of ſuch a perſon, renowned as well for his Bravery and Conduct, as for the fame of his Family and Anceſtors, gave a general Satisfaction and Confidence to all the Forces.

Attempt to burn the Veſſels of the Town,

It being obſerved by the Doge, that notwithſtanding all their Endeavours, no great Advancement was made on the Town, and that the Defendants continued ſtill reſolute and unterrified, and therefore that ſomething more effectual ſhould be attempted upon them, to force them to a Surrender: It was ordered, that four of the greateſt Ships ſhould be appointed to batter the Town with their Cannon, whilſt an Attempt ſhould be made to burn their Galleots, Brigantines, and Londra's, which were drawn up cloſe under the Walls: To execute this Enterprize, four Boats, or Pinnaces armed with Stout Reſolute Seamen, Commanded by Peter Ferrari, were appointed to burn the Veſſels lying under the Walls, and being furniſhed with Fireworks, were to make an Attack on them, under the Smoak of the Cannon, which were to play on the Town from the four Ships.

Things being all prepared for ſuch an Enterprize, the Doge left his own, and mounted the Galley of Piſani, who was Captain of the Slaves condemned to the

But without effect.

Are greatly lamented.

Oar, and thereon returned to the Garden ſide, to be a Spectator of the Action, knowing that his preſence would much animate and inſpire Courage into the Aſſailants. The next Day being the time appointed, a Body of about 100 Oltramarines, were ordered in the Night to hide themſelves under ſome little Hills and Rocks called Grebani, and at the Foot of one of the Enemies Forts, to cover the Attack in caſe the Turks ſhould make a Sally from the Town. But the Succeſs did not anſwer the Expectation of the Martial Spirits of ſo many brave Officers and Soldiers, who came down in great Numbers to behold the performance of this Action; the which was abſolutely defeated for want of the four Ships, which were detained below by contrary Winds: Howſoever the Expectation being great, the Officers on the ſhoar approached the Town nearer than was neceſſary and ſafe, of which the Turks not neglecting their Advantage, made many Shots amongſt them from the Walls, one of which killed Lorenzo Venier, Captain Extraordinary of the Ships, and Michael Angelo Caraccioli, a Cavalier of Malta, whilſt they were both in ſerious Diſcourſe together, having received the Mortal Blow on their Heads. The Death of Venier was greatly lamented not only by the Doge, but by the whole Army, and indeed the Loſs was general, being one of the moſt able Citizens of Venice, and the beſt Sea Captain belonging to that Republick: And indeed it ſeemed, as if an unhappy Conſtellation had been reigning over him at that time, when being deſirous to be aboard for better direction of the four Ships, the Doge permitted him not, out of a regard to his Perſon, which he did not think fit to adventure on ſo deſperate a hazard, ſo that what was intended for his Conſervation, was turned to his Loſs and Deſtruction.

The Turks make a Sally.

Some Oltramarines put to flight.

But this was not all the Misfortune; for the Turks obſerving ſuch a Concourſe of People, and from thence apprehending ſome intention of an Aſſault, made a Sally, not only from the Town, but from the Rocks, under which the Oltramarines had concealed themſelves; where the Turks falling on them in the Rear, killed many of them, and put the reſt to Flight; and tho' the Sergeant-Major Tomaſo Pompei, with ſome of his Men, came in to their Succour, he got nothing thereby more than a Musket-ſhot in his Thigh, after which he was forced to retreat.

The Seraskier keeps a Guard on Negropont.

After which unhappy Misfortune, the Doge returned to his Ducal Gally greatly afflicted for the Death of Venier; by which the Ships wanting an Admiral, Domenico Diedo was ſubſtituted in his place, until the return of Piſani from the Gulf of Corinth. All which time the Forces ſent to guard that important Paſs and Narrow leading into the Morea, remained there without any Action, the Seraskier not intending to make any effort thereon for that Year; for that his Eyes being fixed on Negropont, where he expected that the Venetians ſhould renew their Attempt, he judged that their appearance before Malvaſia, was nothing but a Blind to divert him from the guard of that important place.

The Ships batter the Town.

Things not being very promiſing before Malvaſia, and little hopes to ſubdue it by force, the Doge reſolved to ſpend the remainder of the Summer in cruiſing in the Archipelago; but not to loſe all the Fruits of the preceding Labours, the Redoubt raiſed at the Bridge was fortified and perfected, and the other Forts ſtrengthned with as many Men and Cannon, as were eſteemed ſufficient both to keep the Enemy from Sallying out, or Proviſions from entring in; but before the Doge departed, four of the greateſt Ships were ordered to batter the Town, and give a farewell to them with their biggeſt Cannon: The which being performed within Musket-ſhot, ruined almoſt all the Suburbs, yet not without ſome Loſs aboard the Ships by the Enemies Small-ſhot from the Walls.

Septemb.

The Preparations for ſecuring the Blockade of the Town being perfected, and the Work of Careening, Waſhing, and Tallowing of the Venetian, and Malteſe Gallies being ended, it was concluded neceſſary to execute the former reſolution of ſailing up the Archipelago, to the Gulph of Negropont, whereby the Seraskier might be alarm'd, and amuſed ſo far as to keep his Forces on that ſide, and without farther attempt, to paſs the Streight of Corinth into the Morea; and that in the mean time all things might be ſecured before Malvaſia, four Gallies were appointed to remain there, under the Command of Frederico Bembo, and Colonel Fabio Lanoia to maintain the firſt Fortreſs, and Colonel Carlo Montanari the ſecond, with their reſpective Regiments.

The Doge ſick of a Fever.

All things being thus ordained, and agreed, the Doge weighed Anchor in the Night, and endeavoured to get out, but the Winds being contrary, he was forced to return back again to an Anchor; as the like happened alſo the next Day, not only by contrary Winds, but by ſome Miſunderſtandings between the Veſſels of the Van-Guard. But what was worſe than all the former Misfortunes, the Doge was ſeized with ſuch a violent Fever, as confined him to his Bed, in which the Phyſicians diſcovered very dangerous Symptoms of a long Diſtemper. Moreover ſome unhappy Reports were then flying abroad, That the Captain Paſha was come out, and roving upon the Seas in the Archipelago with 14 Gallies, 31 Ships, including thoſe of Barbary, and 18 Galleots, with deſign to raiſe Carach, or Contributions from the Iſlands: But no great credit was given to that Report, by reaſon that the Seaſon of the Year was ſo far advanced, that it ſeemed rather time to lay up Veſſels in Harbout, than to begin a new Expedition. Howſoever the News hereof, and the Diſtemper of the Doge increaſing, which the Phyſicians termed a Relapſe, and therefore more dangerous, declaring alſo that the change of Air would be the moſt proper Remedy for the Diſeaſe, it was reſolved, That the Charge and Command of the Fleet, ſhould be committed to the Conduct of that Wiſe and Prudent Cavalier Cornaro the Proveditor-General of the Seas, whoſe Vice-Admiral was Carlo Piſani, and Rear-Admirals Bartolmeo Gredenigo, and Giovanni Pizzamano; to whom alſo the Galley of Ludovico Balbi deſigned for Dalmatia was joyned, together with the Gallies of Malta, which being according to the Seaſon of the Year, recalled home; the Admiral with that Squadron, ſailed with the Venetians, eſteeming it a great Honour to accompany the Doge on that occaſion, ſo far as his Way and Courſe would admit.

The Doge returns home.

In this manner the Doge, whoſe Illneſs increaſed, ſet ſail the 15th of September, and directing his Courſe towards Venice, came the next Day in ſight of Coron, and paſſing at no great diſtance from Modon, they Anchored that Night at Prodano, and the next Day in the Road of Zant; where having remained all that Day, they Anchored the next Day in Port Viſcardo upon the Iſland of Ceffalonia, and the following Day at Corfu. We omit all the Ceremonies which paſſed between the Armata, and the Officers of the ſeveral Cities, and Countries by which they ſailed; as alſo the ſhort ſtay made at Caſopo, where Prayers and Money were offered at the Miraculous Image of our Lady, for the Health and Recovery of the Doge; and here it was not far from the Rock of Jaſſena, that the Gallies of Malta taking their leave of the Venetian Fleet, returned to their own Country: From Caſopo they came to the Entrance of Cattaro, where they had intelligence, that Alexander Molino, Proveditor-General in that Province, was returned from Narenta, having failed of the Deſign he undertook in thoſe Parts, by reaſon that the Morlacks had not executed his Orders.

The Gallies of Malta ſeparate from the Fleet.

On the 28th they came in ſight of Raguſi, from whence the Senate ſent off five of their principal Gentlemen to Complement the Doge; but by reaſon of his Indiſpoſition they were introduced to the Preſence of the Lieutenant-General, to whom, with ſenſible Expreſſions of their Sorrow for the Indiſpoſition of His Moſt Serene Highneſs, they declared the great Honour and Deference they conſerved for the Moſt Serene Republick of Venice, being extreamly ſorry, that they ſhould be deprived of the ſatisfaction of laying themſelves at the Feet of His Highneſs: After which they made their Preſents of all ſorts of Refreſhments, ſuch as Confects, Fowl, Fruit, Wax, Herbs, and Ice, with whatſoever elſe might be acceptable at Sea.

October.
Spalato.

The 1ſt of October they Anchored before the City and Caſtle of Spalato, the ſtrongeſt Venetian Garriſon that is on the Dalmatian Shoar, commanded by Bartolmeo Gritti, who with the Archbiſhop attended with many Followers, came to the ſide of the Ducal Galley, where they were received by the Lieutenant-General. And here it was thought fit to paſs the Quarantene, which is obſerved with indiſpenſible Rigour by all Veſſels coming from the Levant; for which this being eſteemed a commodious place, Orders were given for fitting and preparing the Lazaretto, and to provide it with all things neceſſary, and with faithful and diligent Guardians.

Octob. 3d

And here it was that the Doge having all things fitly accommodated for him, went aſhoar to enjoy ſomething of Repoſe and Reſt, being much weakned by his Sickneſs and Fatigues of his Voyage. From hence was diſpatched an Expreſs to the Senate, to give them notice, that the Doge reſolved to make his Contumacia at that Place, and was already entered into Quarantene. In anſwer unto which, the Senate diſpatched their Ducal Letters to ſignifie their Pleaſure, that the Doge might continue to finiſh his Quarantene at Spalato; to which end the Prior, and Overſeers of the Health, were diſpatched from Venice to take care that all things relating to that Matter, ſhould be performed with due Care and Punctuality; and accordingly all things were inſpected by them, whether of Goods or Merchandize, and nothing of rigour omitted with the leaſt reſpect to the Perſon of the Doge, or his Retinue.

The Doge makes his Quarantene at Spalato.

Novemb.

At the beginning of November, News was brought to Spalato, That the Proveditor-General Molino, had ſucceeded in his Deſign againſt Trebigne, having poſſeſſed himſelf in that Country of 10 Towers, of which he had demoliſhed ſeven, and retained three, into which he had put ſome Forces, which might ſerve to incommode the Turks in their Excurſions.

During the time of this Quarantene, nothing paſſed at Spalato, but only Triumphs and Feſtivals for the Succeſſes of Prince Lewis of Baden againſt the Turks, and for the Election of Cardinal Ottoboni to the Papal Throne, under the Name of Alexander VIII. Letters alſo were brought from the Ports of Malvaſia, of the 4th of October, That the General of the Seas Cornaro, departed from thence the 23d of September, with the Gallies under his Command; having left four Gallies behind for Guards under Rear-Admiral Bembo, and 10 Ships under Marco Piſani; and that ſince the Departure of the Doge, about 30 Perſons had made their eſcape out of Malvaſia, declaring the great Miſery which was in the City, beſides the raging Diſeaſes of Fluxes and Convulſions.

The Pratcick given to the Doge.

Decemb.

The Doge departs from Spalato, and arrives at Venice.

In performance of the Quarantene the Month of November paſſed, and an entrance made into the Month of December, by which the Doge being returned to a better State of Health, and all the Gallies well refreſhed, and in a good Condition, and ſupplied with Proviſions, come from Venice; and all things put into a Poſture for Sailing; Prattica was given to the whole Fleet, (that is, a Licenſe of Converſe and Communication) by the Officers of Health; and next Day being the 17th of December, Anchors were weighed, and the Doge proceeded on his Voyage towards Venice, where he arrived about the end of this Month; with which the Year expiring, we ſhall not need to deſcribe the glorious Reception of the Doge into the Palace of St. Mark, with all the Pomp and Magnificence which the Riches, and fervent affection of this celebrated City, and Wiſe Senate could confer on a Prince ſo famous and deſerving as this: And ſo let us proceed to the following Year.

January.

THUS far had the Affairs of Chriſtendom ſucceeded proſperouſly againſt the Turks; for tho' the Venetians had for the two laſt Years performed no great Feats, yet the Imperial Arms under the Conduct of Prince Lewis of Baden, had been Proſperous even to a Miracle; but now the German Empire being furiouſly Attacked within the Bowels of it by the Arms of France, there was a neceſſity to look homewards, and for the ſeveral Princes to provide for their own Safety, and guard their own Countries, for which reaſon many of the German Troops being called out of Hungary, the main Burden of the War fell upon the Emperor, and was carried on with various Succeſs, tho' for the moſt part Proſperous, whilſt his Affairs were under the Auſpicious Government of that Valiant and Renowned General Prince Lewis of Baden.

January.

This Month of January began not very favourably on the Chriſtian ſide; for the Prince of Holſtein hearing that the Turks miſerably deſtroyed the Countries round about, he marched to Priſſeren, with ſome Troops to meet them, and thence, not being able to ſpare many Forces, he detached the Prince of Hanover, and Colonel Straſſer, to relieve the Paſs of Caſſeneck, which was ſaid to be Beſieged by the Turks: On the the 1ſt of January, when they decamped from before Priſſeren or Priſſina, their Troops conſiſted of 120 Foot, drawn from the Regiment of Aſpremont; 80 of Averſperg's, five Companies of Dragoons of the Prince of Hanover's Regiment, eight Troops of Horſe of Holſtein, ſix Troops of Horſe of Hanover, four Troops of Horſe of the Regiment of Stirum; all which did not amount unto more than 1600 Men, with which they marched ſo diligently, that the next Day they arrived near Caſſeneck, in ſight of the Enemy; their Orders were not to approach too near, nor advance too far, until they had well obſerved the true ſtrength of the Enemy, and diſcovered whether they were ſo ſtrong as had been reported: Accordingly they at firſt poſted themſelves with their Backs to a Moraſs, and planted four Field-Pieces againſt the Enemy, who durſt not Attack them in that Place; but keeping within the Hills and Woods, they detached 1000 Tartars into the open Fields, upon ſight of which, Colonel Straſſer quitting his Advantageous Poſt, forced them to retreat with the Death of ſome of them; but the Germans being now in the open Field, and not able to retreat, they found themſelves ſurrounded on all ſides with 30000 of the Enemy, againſt which having ſuſtained a Battle from Nine in the Morning, till Three in the Afternoon, and having ſpent all their Powder and Ammunition, they were at laſt totally defeated. In this Fight the Prince of Hanover, Colonel Straſſer, Count Solari, with moſt of the Officers, and many of the Common Soldiers were killed on the Place, moſt of the Priſoners being wounded, died; all their Colours, Kettle-Drums, &c. were taken by the Enemies; nevertheleſs 6 or 700 Men, by help of the Night, and of Woods and Mountains, came ſafe to Belgrade, from whence they were diſpatched to their Regiments.

The Germans defeated.

This News being brought the ſame Night to the Prince of Holſtein unto Priſſina, he retreated from thence to Niſſa, leaving behind all the Forage and Baggage of the Regiment of Stirum.

On

Count Monte-celli Attacked by the Tartars.

On the 4th the Regiment of Piccolomini, which was to joyn with Straſſer, having no Advice of the Defeat, came near to Caſſeneck, under the Command of Lieutenant-Colonel Count Montecelli, ſo ſoon as he came in ſight of the Tartars, they immediately Inveſted him, but he very prudently retreated towards a Moraſs, over which there was a Bridge; on the other ſide whereof he commanded a Lieutenant with 30 Horſe to guard that end of the Bridge, until he put himſelf in a Poſture to fight on the other ſide. After ſome time the Tartars Attacked them on both ſides, the Lieutenant with 30 Men defended himſelf for a good while; until being over-powered, he was relieved by two Companies ſent to his Aſſiſtance, and on both ſides defended themſelves ſo valiantly until Night, that under ſhelter of the Darkneſs, they made their Retreat; the Tartars followed them with great noiſe for the ſpace of an Hour, but could not put them into diſorder; ſo about Midnight, they arrived at Priſſina, which Place they found Abandoned; but having refreſhed themſelves and their Horſes there for a while, they proceeded to Procopia with the loſs only of about 30 Men, and one Captain and ſome wounded, their Baggage was not with them, they having ſent it to Poza, and Novibaſſa, which afterwards fell into the Hands of the Enemy, with moſt of thoſe which accompanied it, the reſt ſaved themſelves in the Woods.

He makes his Eſcape with ſome loſs.

By this time Veterani who was appointed General in the Place of Piccolomini deceaſed, arrived at Niſſa from Tranſilvania, with ſome Troops; which being a Place open to the Attack of the Enemy, and much feared, they cauſed the Garriſon and Inhabitants to work Night and Day upon the Fortifications; Veterani alſo provided Pyrot, Procopia, Muſtapha Palanca, being Paſſes, with all Neceſſaries, and demoliſhed Coſſova, Albania, and ſome other little Places, from whence he withdrew the Soldiers to ſtrengthen Places of greater moment.

The Paſs Caſſeneck which was Beſieged, (wherein was a Garriſon of 180 Men) and before which the Turks had raiſed a Battery of ſeven Guns, defended it ſelf ſeveral Days, and at length ſurrendred on Conditions, one of which was that they ſhould be conducted to Belgrade.

Corbelli deſtroys the Palanca of Bellingeſh.

Whilſt things were acting on this ſide, Colonel Corbelli, who commanded the Blockade of great Waradin, received Advice that the Turks at Bellingeſh had provided a great Number of Cattle, and 100 Waggons with Proviſions, under a ſtrong Convoy, to be put into Waradin for relief of the City, whereupon making a Detachment of 200 Horſe, 300 Dragoons, 300 Huſſars, and 200 Heydukes, he marched therewith towards Bellingeſh; but thoſe of the Place having received early notice hereof from Waradin, withdrew all their Proviſions into the Caſtle; ſo that the original Deſign of Corbelli was defeated, yet not to return empty, he ſtormed and entered the Palanca, where after the Slaughter of ſeveral Turks, he plundered, and carried away every thing that was in it: He could not Attack the Caſtle which was well fortified, for want of Cannon; and therefore having deſtroyed the Palanca, with the Gardens thereabouts, he returned back with good Booty.

On the 15th Tekeli with his Men, and 2000 Turks, arrived near Oraviza, with a deſign to Attack Temeſwaer; but he miſcarried therein, and was forced to retreat.

The Germans get an Advantage.

On the other ſide the Governor of Lippa, Captain Chriſtopher Morris, with Captain Baltaſar, having under them 100 Huſſars, 100 Horſe of Heiſler's, and 100 Dragoons, marched towards Temeſwaer, with deſign to ſurprize ſome Turks in the Villages thereabouts, but meeting with none, they proceeded until they came in ſight of the City; leaving the greateſt part of their Troops in Ambuſcade at ſome diſtance from them: Upon their Approach, the Turks ſallied out with Horſe and Foot, and poſted themſelves in a hollow Way, where the Germans, under the cover of a Miſt or Fog, attacked them, the Huſſars falling upon their Horſe, and the Dragoons on the Janizaries, with ſuch bravery, that they put them to flight; after having killed above 300 on the Place, and taken ſeveral Priſoners, and having only four Men killed, and nine wounded, they retired back again to Lippa.

The Tartars barbarous Uſage of the poor People.

About this time 50 Soldiers having deſerted the Service of Tekeli, took the Oaths of Fidelity to the Emperor, and were ſent to Priſſina to recruit the Garriſon of that Paſs, conſiſting of ſome Imperial, and Raſcian Troops. Theſe Deſerters gave Intelligence to General Veterani, that Sultan Galga the Tartar, was deſigned in a few Days to joyn with Tekeli, and to make an Invaſion into Tranſilvania; upon which, Orders were given to work on the Fortifications on the Frontiers, with all diligence: And now Advices came to Niſſa, That the Turks had burnt Uranic, with all the Villages round that Place; as alſo Coſſova, and the adjacent Places near to Priſſina; but ſome little time before this piece of Execution was performed, the Turks had allured the poor Peaſants, with their Wives and Children, to return from the Woods and Mountains, to their own Dwellings, where they promiſed them Quietneſs, Protection, and Safety; but the Tartars not having been concerned in this this Guaranty, the poor People were no ſooner returned to their Habitations, but they were barbarouſly attacked by the Tartars, who killed all the Old Men and Women, and carried away the Young of both Sexes into Captivity: After this unhamane Butchery Sultan Galga retreated with moſt of his Hords to Sophia, and thence by way of Nicopolis he made all the haſte poſſible to return for Budziack, becauſe he had received Advices, That the Moſcovites with a very numerous Army, were on the Frontiers, ready to Invade his Country; but his March was not ſo haſty, but that he had time, after the Tartarian Faſhion, to deſtroy the Province of Schnepoli; and to kill, and aſſaſſinate all the Country People that they met; and tho' this Retreat of the Tartars was Unfortunate to theſe poor Wretches, yet thereby General Veterani was delivered from his Apprehenſions for Niſſa; which was howſoever labouring under great want of Ammunition, and Proviſion of all ſorts; and how to ſupply them was not as yet reſolved. For tho' the Country of Schnepoli had engaged to furniſh Niſſa with a good quantity of all ſorts of Proviſions, yet being now burnt and deſtroyed by the Tartars; and the remainder of what was left pillaged by the Turks, there could be no expectation of any ſupply from thence: And as to what was to be conveyed to them from Belgrade, by reaſon of the Winter Weather, Snows, and tired Cattle, came ſo ſlowly over the Mountains, that General Veterani, and the other chief Officers, had Abandoned the Place, had not ſome Horſes at the very inſtant arrived at Niſſa with 50 Waggons, all laden with Proviſions and Ammunition, together with four Pieces of Cannon which had been taken out of the Fort of Jagodina, and great Quantities of Flour, and Oats, much more of which was daily expected, by which Stores, tho' Niſſa was abundantly relieved, yet the Fortifications proceeded more ſlowly than was fit for a Frontier Garriſon, expoſed to the main and chief Power of the Enemy.

They return to Budziack.

Niſſa in want of Proviſions.

February.

Caniſia inclining to capitulate.

Thus things ſtood at Niſſa, when the Blockade of Caniſa was ſo narrowly watched and obſerved, that the Garriſon began to be reduced to the utmoſt Extremity; ſo that the People would have forced the Paſha to Capitulate; but he remaining reſolute to endure the laſt Extremity, perſwaded them with Preſents, and fair Words, to a longer Patience: But the Inferiour and Subaltern Officers not enduring longer, diſpatched a Meſſenger, (without making the Paſha, or Janizar-Aga privy to their Deſign) with Letters to the Grand Vizier, deſiring that he would either take ſome Meaſures for the Relief of the Place, or to ſend his Orders to the Paſha for the Surrender thereof; but this Expreſs was not got far from the Town, before he was overtaken, brought back and Executed; but ſuch was the Miſery in the Town, that he who could eſcape, got out, amongſt which was a Turkiſh Imaum, or Prieſt, and an Arabian Jew, who reported, That about Palm-Sunday, the City would Capitulate, which afterwards proved true accordingly.

Places taken and burnt.

In the mean time the Croats made an Invaſion into Boſnia, burnt Kazaraz, and took ſome Hundreds of ſmall and great Cattle: Howſoever in their Retreat being purſued by the Turks of Bannialuca, and Attacked by them near the Save, ſome of the Cattle were recovered, ſeveral of their Men killed, 15 Priſoners, and five Horſes taken.

And about the ſame time the Governour of Novi having gotten together a ſmall Body of Men drawn out of that Garriſon, and that of Zim, made an Incurſion into the Enemies Country, where he burnt Oſtrovitz, Ztergarick the Little, and the Great Badick, with Houſes belonging to Gentlemen in the Country, in which Expedition they killed about 200 of the Enemy, took 76 Priſoners, 100 Head of Cattle, 32 Horſes, and much other Booty, and all this with the loſs of one Man killed, and 10 wounded.

March.

In revenge hereof, the Turks of Novi-Portu, Attacked with a ſtrong Party, ſome German Horſe, as they were Foraging abroad, but were ſo warmly received by Brumati the Governour of Leſcoviza, and with ſuch Valour, that the Turks were put to the Rout, and forced to fly, leaving 20 of their Men dead on the Place.

Whilſt Matters thus paſſed with various Succeſſes, there were ſome Fears of the Conſtancy and Steadineſs of the Raſcians towards the Emperor, but thoſe Apprehenſions were ſoon taken away by Antonio their Captain, who being ſent by General Veterani, to take a View of all the Paſſes round about, reported at his return, That he had met within the Paſs of Priſſina, with one Haram Baſſa, who in the Name of all the Inhabitants of Coloſſi, Moloch, Letaner, and Gaas, had aſſured him of the Faith and Allegiance of thoſe People to the Emperor, having refuſed the Protection of the Turks, which had been offered to them: And hereof they ſoon gave a Teſtimony by an Aſſault they had made on a Party of 500 Turks, under the Command of the Paſha of Oſtrolub, in their March towards the Caſtle of Zwetſey, ſituate in the Paſs of Boſna, of which they killed 60 Men, took four Priſoners, and 90 Horſes, of which 30 were laden with Flour, beſides a great Booty of other things. On the other ſide Mahomet Paſha roved round about the Country of Novi Paſſar, burning and deſtroying all the remaining Villages, killing the Country People that they met with, and acting all the Cruelties that Fire and Sword could execute.

But what was of moſt importance at this time, was the Surrender of the ſtrong City and Fortreſs of Caniſia, having been reduced thereunto by Famine, after a long and ſevere Blockade, by which being brought to ſuch Extremities, that not being able to ſupport themſelves any longer, the Paſha on the 16th of March, ſent out two Aga's to the Chriſtian Army to treat with the Commanders of the Blockade, who were Count Adam Bathiani, and Count Stephen Zitchi: to whom being conducted by Lieutenant Colonel Piſterski, after the uſual Complements had been paſſed on both ſides, the Turks deſired that four Weeks might be granted them to make their Surrender; offering in caſe no Succours came to them within that time, they would then reſign the City into the Hands of the Emperor's Generals, with all the Cannon and Ammunition therein, (four Guns only excepted) which they pretended to carry with them: But in regard it was then late in the Evening, when theſe Offers were delivered, the Meſſengers were kept all Night in the Camp, and well treated; and the next Morning a Council of War being called, an Anſwer was returned them to this Effect. ‘That it being well known, that neither in four Weeks, nor in four Years, any Relief, or Succour could be expected for them; and that tho' their Extremities were ſo evident, that they were certainly aſſured they could not ſubſiſt any longer, yet that they might taſte of the Grace and Clemency of the Emperor, they promiſed them their Lives, (provided they ſhould Surrender themſelves in the ſpace of 24 Hours:) With which Anſwer the two Aga's returned back to the City, on which ſome Conſultation being there had on the 19th, three Turks were ſent out again to the Chriſtian Army, declaring to the Generals, in the Name of the Paſha and the Garriſon; ‘That tho' they were ſtill furniſhed with four Months Proviſion in the Town, yet they would no longer refuſe the Clemency of His Imperial Majeſty, but deliver up the City unto him. And for the further management of this Treatiſe, they propoſed, That three German and Hungarian Officers might be ſent into the Town for Hoſtages, in lieu of five Turks, who ſhould be employed to Capitulate in the Army. The Chriſtians having aſſented hereunto, the three Meſſengers were next Day returned with this Anſwer. ‘That the Clemency of His Imperial Majeſty was ſuch, that he never deſired to ſhed the Blood of his Enemies, when they implored his Mercy; and that the General Bathiani had full Power to pardon them, which he was ready to do, on Condition that they Surrendred the Place in the ſpace of 24 Hours. With this Anſwer the Turks returning to the Town, they deſired a third Conference on the 21ſt; the which, after a long Diſpute, was granted, and agreed, That five Turks, of which the Janizar-Aga ſhould be one, ſhould come into the Camp; and that in the Place of them, a German and two Hungarian Officers ſhould be ſent for Pledges into the City. This being performed on the 22d Day, theſe following Capitulations were agreed and ſigned.

‘III. That all the Inhabitants of the City, and Strangers, ſhall have liberty to march out with their Arms, Moveables, Cloaths, Servants, Children, Horſes, and all other Cattle, who ſhall have ſafe Paſſage, and Conduct into the Ottoman Dominions, but without Flying Colours, or Sound of Drum: Notwithſtanding which, in caſe any of the Raſcians who are in pay of the Turks, ſhould freely deſire to come over to the Chriſtians, they ſhall not be hindered, either on the Score of Debt, or any other Pretence whatſoever.

‘IV. All Chriſtian Renegadoes, who ſhall be deſirous to return unto their Ancient Faith, ſhall have liberty to do it, and no Chriſtian Children be privately conveyed away.

‘V. A ſufficient Number of Waggons, ſhall be allowed to the Turks to carry them to the Water-ſide, and from thence Boats to Tranſport them into the Turkiſh Dominions.

March.

‘VI. That ſo ſoon as theſe Capitulations ſhall be Signed, the Imperialiſts ſhall immediately be put into Poſſeſſion of the Palanca, our Out-work, called Baſchlar Kapæſi; in which the Turks ſhall have liberty to ſell what they pleaſe of their Goods, or to carry them away.

‘VII. That ſo ſoon as the Imperial Ratification ſhall be returned, the Turks ſhall immediately quit the City, and begin their Journey.

‘VIII. The Turks ſhall deliver to the Imperial Commiſſaries all the Tax-Regiſters in Caniſia, with ſuch Books as concern the Military Sallaries paid from Boſnia, and other Diſtricts depending on Caniſia, with the Teſter, or an account of ſuch Revenues which the Janizaries uſually Pay, and Receive out of the Homage, and Tributary Countries.

‘IX. That the People of Caniſia ſhall be Convoyed with a ſufficient Number of Officers and Soldiers, unto the firſt Turkiſh Fortreſs, leaving howſoever behind them the Hoſtages at the laſt Chriſtian Fortreſs, until the return of the Convoy.

‘X. That during the March Proviſions ſhall be furniſhed to the Turks at moderate Prices.

The Emperor ratifies the Treaty.

April.

With theſe Capitulations, the Imperial Councellor of War, called Pozo, the Aga, and two more Turkiſh Officers, were on the 24th diſpatched to Vienna to have the Capitulations Ratified and Signed with the Imperial Firme; they arrived on the 30th, and the next Day had an Audience of Count Staremberg, Preſident of the Council of War, to whom they delivered the Capitulation; and on the firſt of April it was returned back again to them Signed by the Emperor, who was graciouſly pleaſed to make a Preſent therewith unto the Aga, of a Watch ſet with Diamonds.

The Town ſurrendred.

With this Ratification the Aga being returned, which was on the 3d of April, it was reſolved by the Paſha, and other Officers in the Divan, immediately to put the Chriſtians into Poſſeſſion of one of the Gates of the City; the which by the 12th, they fully quitted; and the next Day the Paſha being on Horſeback, attended with ſome Turks on Foot, delivered unto General Bathyani the Keys of the Town in a gilded Baſon hanging on a Gold Chain. The Paſha indeed expected, that the General ſhould have alighted from his Horſe to receive them, but the General refuſing to receive them in ſuch a manner, as a Condeſcention too inferiour to the Dignity of His Imperial and Victorious Maſter, the Paſha inſiſted no farther thereupon, but preſenting the Key, ſaid, I deliver unto you the Key of a Fortreſs, the like whereof there is none in all the Turkiſh Empire.

April.

This being done, the General went into the City to viſit the Fortifications, and afterwards entertained the Paſha, the Aga of the Janizaries, and Zorbagee Aga at Dinner, with ſome others. Then the Garriſon marched out, conſiſting of 600 Turks, which with the Inhabitants, made in all 4000 Souls; the which were conducted into the Dominions of the Turks, according to the Capitulation.

The Cannon and Ammunition and Proviſions taken therein.

It ſeems that this ſtrong City was ſurrendred rather by Diviſions amongſt themſelves, than for want of Proviſions: On the Walls were mounted 56 Braſs, and 10 Iron Cannon, the moſt part of them made in the time of the Emperors Maximilian I. and II, and of Charles V, and Ferdinand I. In the Magazine, or Store-houſe under the Governor's Palace, were found 1540 Muſquets, and in the Arſenal 2200 more, with much Lead, Cannon, and Muſquet-Bullets, Swords, Granadoes, with all ſorts of Arms and Warlike Inſtruments in great abundance.

The Situation of Caniſia.

Caniſia, or Caniſa, is ſituate on a River towards the Frontiers of Styria, near the Drave, and not far from the Fort Serin; it is ſo environed on all ſides with a Moraſs, or Marſh, that no Army can lie near it, which renders the Town almoſt impregnable, and inacceſſible, notwithſtanding it was taken by the Turks in the Year 1600.

The next Year following Mathias Arch-Duke of Auſtria Beſieged it in the Month of September, but was forced to retire after a Siege of two Months.

In the Year 1664, at the beginning of it, in the Month of January, Count Serini, by favour of the Froſts, which gave him ſome Footing on the Moraſs, after he had taken Quinque Eccleſiæ, and ſome other Places, and had burnt Sighet, he beſieged Caniſia, which he had infallibly taken, if they had ſent him the Succours which were promiſed him; but as I have related in my former Hiſtory, ſo great a Faction was againſt him at the Imperial Court, that they were not willing to ſee him proſperous, but choſe rather to Sacrifice the Publick Welfare to Private Animoſities; but the expected Recruits not arriving at the appointed time, and the Year coming on, the Ice was Thawed, and the Great Vizier advancing with a Powerful Army, the Count Sereni being under all theſe Diſcouragements, ments, was forced to raiſe his Siege and be gone.

General Veterani in the mean time whilſt things were thus acting at Caniſia, being much ſtreightned for want of Proviſions, ordered the Garriſons of Leſcowitz and Pyroth, to make Incurſions into the Turkiſh Territories, which they performed ſo effectually, that they returned back with more than 1000 Head of Cattle; the which being divided amongſt the Regiments, ſuch as were fit for the Slaughter were killed, and the reſt employed for drawing the Waggons laden with Ammunition and Proviſions.

Incurſions made into ſeveral places.

On the other ſide the Turks ſurprized a Village near Belgrade, which they Plundered and Burnt, killing, or carrying away Captives all the Inhabitants of the Place.

Some Skirmiſhes.

But the Garriſon of Pyroth being much animated with their late Succeſs, made another Incurſion, as far as within three Leagues of Philippopolis, burning the Villages, and killing the Turks which they met in their way; but at length being purſued by 1000 Turks, they drew themſelves up into good order, and poſting themſelves advantageouſly on the riſing of a Hill, they engaged the Enemy for two Hours ſpace; during which time, 30 Turks were killed, and many wounded, and 28 Priſoners taken, with which and ſome Hundreds of Cattle, they returned ſafe to Pyroth. In like manner 100 Germans and ſome Huſſars belonging to the Garriſon of Zolnock, encountred a Party of 160 Turks, and Male-contents, which belonged to Giula, and having engaged them, they killed 20 of them, took 60 Priſoners, of which 16 were of the Male-contents, the remainder throwing themſelves into the River, were for the moſt part drowned.

The Turks worſted.

During this Seaſon of the Year, before the Graſs was ſufficiently grown, no other Actions paſſed, but only by Parties ſent abroad to ſurprize Cattle, and burn Villages. Amongſt the reſt, a Party of Raſcians having roved over the Country of Schnepoli, returned back to Niſſa with a Booty of ſeveral Hundred Head of Cattle, and ſome Yoaks of Oxen, taken near to Sophia; the which Succeſſes ſtill attending the Imperial Arms, the Country People on all ſides offered to embrace the Imperial Party, and implore their Protection ſo ſoon as the Chriſtian Army ſhould take the Field.

On the other ſide Mahomet Bagavitz Paſha, who had ſome time quietly Quartered at Poza, (having left 1500 Men for Garriſon in that Place) he marched out with a Party of about 4000 Men, towards the Paſs of Boſnia, but having in his March received Intelligence, That Captain Antonio attended him in the way, and was ready to receive him, returned and marched towards Bagnia, from whence alſo by reaſon of the great Snows, he was forced to retreat back to Poza, without any Action.

1690. April.

Little more was acted now, as we have ſaid but by Parties, of which Kathana Paſha commanding one, he made an Incurſion therewith into the Neighbourhood of Pyroth, where he took ſeveral ſtraggling Huſſars. Another Party of Hungarians to the Number of about 20, commanded by that Valiant Hungarian Captain, called Baudi, which had made a bold Incurſion, and roved about 14 Days beyond Sophia, near to Philippopolis, were at length attacked by a ſtrong Body of Turks, with which having fought for a conſiderable time, were at laſt overpowered, and all of them cut off, (two only excepted) who made their Eſcape to Niſſa.

Several ſmall Parti engage.

On the other ſide a Party from Belgrade ſurprized a Body of Turks, the moſt of which they killed, or took Priſoners. Likewiſe a Party of Raſcians made an Excurſion as far as Bagnia in Boſnia, where they killed 20 Turks, and took 12 Priſoners, with 400 Head of Cattle: Beſides which, thoſe who guarded the Blockade of Great Waradine, beat a Party of the Enemy, brought home 11 Heads, and eight Priſoners. Another Party of 500 Huſſars, and 40 German Dragoons, made a Sally out of Sclavonia under the Command of Lieutenant Boniau, and paſſed the Save; and having in their way an Information that the Turkiſh Garriſon belonging to the ſtrong Fortreſs of Teockzach was ſallied abroad, having only left eight Men, and 15 Women therein; they attacked and entered the Fort early in the Morning, with the loſs of ſix of their Men killed, and eight wounded; of the Turks, four of the eight, with the Women, ſaved themſelves in a Tower, from whence the Women threw Fire, and Stones, and hot ſcalding Water, but at length were forced to ſurrender, and leave the Place to the mercy of the Enemy, in which they found a good Booty of Turkiſh Horſes, and other rich Goods, and therewith repaſſed the Save, having left four Troops of Heydukes for defence of the Place.

May.

The Seaſon of the Year being now far advanced towards the Summer, and things preparing for greater Action; the German Officers were very intent, and ſtudious in what manner to conſerve Niſſa; for which they had great reaſon to be apprehenſive, for that according to the Reports of all thoſe who lately came from Adrianople, and of ſuch Deſerters who came out from the Turkiſh Quarters; the Turks were become much more numerous than the laſt Year, and were marching on purpoſe to make Niſſa the firſt Atchievement and Deſign of their their Conqueſt. But what could be done for Conſervation of that Place, was not omitted; all the Old Works were repaired, and ſeveral New ones compleated; and the River Morava being with much Expence and Labour made Navigable, great Quantities of Proviſions, and Materials neceſſary for War were brought down by that Water to Niſſa, ſo that nothing was wanting for Conſervation of the Place, unleſs a greater Garriſon within, and a more numerous Army without.

About this time a ſmall ſort of Venomous Flies ſwarmed about Niſſa, which killed many Horſes, Cattle, Camels, and Mules. I remember in a Journey I once made through thoſe Countries in the Month of May, that we were much infeſted with this ſort of Animals, which was the ſmalleſt Fly that ever I did ſee, covered with a thin Fluff, or Down; the which would not touch the Fleſh of a Man, but Horſes, Camels, Mules, &c. were killed by them. Whereſoever they fixed on the Sides of a Horſe, or any other Part, they would draw a Bliſter as big as an Egg; and entering into the Noſtrils, immediately poiſoned the Brain, which cauſed a ſudden Death to the Beaſt; but hereof I have diſcourſed more at large in a former Hiſtory, to which I refer the Reader.

Small poyſonous Flies

Tho' the great Armies were not as yet in the Field, yet Parties were roving in all Parts and Places, the Weather becoming moderate according to the Seaſon, and the Graſs grown; the Turks encamped near Gradiſca, where they ſtaid a while in expectation of ſome Troops to joyn with them, and therewith to paſs the Save into Sclavonia, with no other Deſign than to ruine and ſpoil the Country; but Baron Koniſeck having Advice thereof, marched from Brod, with all the Huſſars, and Heydukes which were Quartered in the adjacent Villages unto a Place where the River is fordable, and therefore the moſt likely place where they might deſign to paſs; by which not only the Paſſage of the Turks was obſtructed, but News coming to them that the Croats were fallen into their Country on the other ſide, they quitted their firſt Deſign, and marched to oppoſe the Croats, who were too quick for them, having taken great Booty, and committed a vaſt Spoil before the Turks could come in to the Succour of their Country.

About the ſame time one Herlniovich, a Dalmatian Captain, marched ſix Days Journey beyond Niſſa into the Enemies Country, which he Surprized and Plundered, and returned back with the Heads of ſeveral Turks, and ſome Priſoners. The ſame Captain ſoon afterwards having recruited himſelf with ſome more Troops, fell upon Berkowitz, in which was a Garriſon of about 127 Turks, provided with all things neceſſary for defence of the Place, being fortified on a very advantageous Situation, but coming upon them by Surprize, the Place was taken, and all the Men put to the Sword, except ſome few, who made their Eſcape; the Booty was conſiderable, beſides 90 Turkiſh Women, four Standards, and two pair of Kettle-Drums.

1690. May.

Berkowitz taken by a Captain of Dalmatia.

In like manner a Captain of the Garriſon of Pyroth roving abroad, and ſeeking his Fortune, met near to Sophia with 20 Horſes laden with Nails, Iron, and ſeveral Warlike Inſtruments, he ſeized them all, and killed 19 Turks, and took one Priſoner alive, who in the Night making his Eſcape, gave Intelligence thereof to Sophia, from whence a Party being commanded out, they overtook the Germans, and fought with them, but the Germans behaved themſelves ſo well, that they forced the Turks to leave them, and ſuffer them to eſcape with the Booty they had gained.

Sea Robbers Land.

At this time alſo ſome Sea Robbers landed in the Bay of Vola, and made an Incurſion into the Territories of Macedonia near Monaſſir, burning and ſpoiling all the Country; whilſt another Party of them, to the number of about 600 Men, made a Sally towards Stippo, where they ſurprized 500 Turks, and put them all to the Sword, without Quarter given to any one; but the Inhabitants they carried away Priſoners, and made uſe of them for Slaves in the Hills and Mountains.

Nor were things more quiet in Hungary, where ſeveral Skirmiſhes happened to the Loſs and Damage of the Turks; and particularly the Soldiers of the Garriſon, and thoſe of the Blockade had an Encounter, and the latter returned Victorious, with 16 Priſoners, 22 Heads, 49 Horſes, and ſome Cattle.

Moreover Count Corbelli ſent out a Party of 500 Horſe, which met, and ſurrounded a Party of Turks, of which they killed three or four of the Chief Commanders, with 70 private Soldiers, took 10 Priſoners, and many Horſes; in which Action 12 Men were ſlain and wounded, and 22 Horſes killed.

Moreover 3000 Raſcians under the Command of Captain Antonio, and 200 Germans under Rusbach, a Captain of Hanover, arrived one Morning about Break of Day near Bernia; from which a Detachment being made of five Troops of Raſcians, with ſome German Muſqueteers; having their Van-Guard led by Artuſſer Adjutant-General of Piccolomini, and three Lieutenants, puſhed forward into the City without any Halt or Heſitation, or regard to the Troops which followed, with ſuch

Courage and Valour, that the Turks being ſurprized, not having time to gather themſelves into an Orderly Body in the open Market-place; and ſeeing the Enemy already in the City, and more Troops following them, the Paſha, with about 200 of his beſt Horſe, fled out of the oppoſite Gate, leaving the remainder of the Garriſon with the Inhabitants, which conſiſted of about 3000 Men to their own Fate, which ended with the Death of about 1700 of them, moſt whereof were killed Sleeping on their Beds; the Booty taken, was very conſiderable, beſides much Cattle, and 500 good Horſes, with the loſs only on the Chriſtian ſide of ſeven Germans, and 17 Raſcians, who were killed.

The Grand Vizier marches to the Camp at Nicopolis.

It being now towards the end of May, which is the uſual Seaſon for Armies to take the Field, News was brought to Niſſa, that Kuperlee the Grand Vizier, was decamped from before Adrianople with 20000 Men, and on his March to joyn with 40000 more, which were Encamped at Nicopolis with intention to attack at one and the ſame time both Niſſa and Widin; and whereas the Turkiſh Army was in great want of Artillery, by reaſon of the many Cannon which they had loſt during this War, the French furniſhed them with 100 Pieces, which were brought from France, and Landed at Galata, and thence conducted on Carriages to the Army.

June.

The Palanca of Bellanaſch ſurprized and taken.

But the Seaſon not being as yet come for pitched Battles, or Siege of Towns, the Armies not being gathered into a Body, General Corbelli, who Commanded the Blockade near Great Waradine, detached 220 Germans and Hungarians, with deſign to attack the Palanca of Bellanaſch, where coming to it before Break of Day, and finding no Centinels to obſerve their Appearance, all the People being aſleep with the greateſt Security imaginable, the Soldiers climbed the Walls, and unperceived entered the Place without any oppoſition whatſoever, killing Men, Women and Children, without any diſtinction; ſome Turks howſoever eſcaped, and ſaved themſelves in the Caſtle; which General Corbelli being deſirous to take, by reaſon that the People of Great Waradine had been frequently relieved from thence, he ſent for 500 Men more to reinforce his Troops; but before theſe could come up to joyn, the others laden with Booty and Spoil, were departed, and gone to ſecure what they had gained.

1690. June. A Deſign on Noviporto diſcovered.

Theſe two late Succeſſes by Surprize, animated the Governour of Leſcawitza, and Count Montecelli Captain of Horſe in the Regiment of General Hoffkirchen, to attempt a third, and joyning with them a Party of Germans and Raſcians, they marched to Noviporto, with intention to ſurprize it, in the ſame manner as the others had been; but ſome of the Raſcians having Friends and Relations in the Place, gave information to thoſe within; upon which they all retired into the Caſtle, which was well defended with a ſtrong Tower, and a good Wall, and with Proviſion ſufficient for ſome Weeks, and ſtood upon their Guard; ſo that the Party finding their Deſign defeated, fell upon the Cattle which were feeding near the Place, and carried away ſome of them, to the Number of 6000 Sheep, and 2000 other Cattle; but the Turks of the Country gathering themſelves into a Body, purſued after them in ſuch Numbers, that attacking the Raſcians in the Rear, they recovered moſt of their Cattle, and took ſome of their Horſes; howſoever the Raſcians carried off about 1000 Head of Cattle, and ſome Priſoners, with the Heads of 15 Turks, which they had killed.

The Germans ſtill continued to rove about the Country with Parties, returning moſt commonly with Succeſs; one of them ſurprized and took Ubicza and Dobran, two ſmall Palanca's, killing all that they found alive therein.

Radimir abandoned by the Turks.

Likewiſe Captain Schenchendorff with 800 Germans, and ſome Hungarians, paſſing near Radimir, a Turkiſh Garriſon, in hopes to ſurprize it, found the Turks vigilant and ready to receive him; upon which being forced to make a Retreat, the Turks ſallied out upon them, but were repulſed with the loſs of 50 of their Men killed, and three taken Priſoners, upon which the Turks being put to flight, the Germans purſued them ſo cloſe, that they entered with them into the Suburbs, which conſiſting of about 400 Houſes, they burnt all to the Ground, and then retired towards Pyrith; but in their way meeting with 400 freſh Hungarian Horſe, they joyned with them, and returned again towards Radimir; but in their March having received Advice, That the Turks had abandoned the Town, and laden their Wives, Children, and Goods, on 130 Waggons, and ſent them farther into the Country, a Party of Huſſars was commanded to purſue them; which they did, and ſoon came up with them, and took all the Waggons, People, and Goods that were in them; but they were not ſo eaſily carried off, as they were taken; for a Body of about 1200 Turks from the Frontiers, coming in to their Aſſiſtance, they not only retook all the Booty from the Huſſars, (the Captain Schenchendorff being at too far a diſtance to relieve them) but alſo forced them to fly, leaving ſome of their Companions, who were the worſt mounted, unto the Mercy of the Enemy; after which, the Turks purſuing farther, fell in with Schenchendorff, who finding himſelf over-matched, made a handſome Retreat to a convenient place, where taking his Advantage, made Head againſt the Turks, and killed above 100 of them, took ſeveral of their Horſes, and much Cattle, which they carried off with them.

A Sally made out of Great Waradin.

General Corbelli who commanded the Blockade before Great Waradin, made an Incurſion with 2000 Men, and ruined all the Corn and Fruit of the Field, ſo near the City, as was within reach of their Guns: Upon which Approach the Garriſon ſallied out, but were repulſed with great loſs, and amongſt the reſt the Chiaus-Baſhee was killed: The Defendants terrified herewith, above 40 Families eſcaped out, and at their Requeſt were Baptized.

The Caſtle of Bellanaſch ſurrendred.

July.

In the mean time a ſtricter Watch than ever was kept in the Blockade about the Caſtle of Bellanaſch; and the Stream of Water which ran at the Foot of the Palanca, and Caſtle, by which both were ſupplied, being cut off by the Chriſtians, and the Currant turned another way, the Defendants were reduced to great Extremities, and more eſpecially they began to be affrighted, when they ſaw a freſh ſupply of Horſe, Dragoons, and Huſſars, ready to attack the Place, and that two Batteries were already raiſed, which continued firing for two Days without intermiſſion, they at length inclined to a Surrender, and in order thereunto ſent out two Aga's to make their Capitulations, which were ſoon concluded, and agreed, That the Garriſon conſiſting of 150 Men, beſides their Wives and Children, and other Inhabitants, ſhould the next Day be conveyed to Giula, which was accordingly performed on the 4th of July.

The Turks Attack Strahina.

Whilſt theſe Matters went on, the Parties from Niſſa, were always Plundering and ſpoiling the Countries, and Captain Strahina, the famous Partiſan, who was continually on Parties, made his Inroads near to Philippopolis, and ſurprized the Turks in ſeveral Places of that Neighbourhood, with much Spoil and Damage: The Turks alarm'd hereat, got into a Body, and purſued after Strahina, and having overtaken him, attacked him with great Fury and Bravery; but were as reſolutely repulſed, and their Teſtiſh Paſha killed in the Action; 200 of their Horſe taken, and much Booty, with the loſs only of five Raſcians: The like Succeſs Strahina had againſt Kathana Paſha, who meeting on the Road, whilſt one Party was returning to Sophia, as the other was to Niſſa; the Turks were beaten, and put to Flight, and the Paſha, with his Men that eſcaped, were forced to take Refuge in the Mountains, ſcattered and diſperſed, whilſt Strahina, and his Men, with their Booty, returned ſafe to Niſſa.

And now to conclude the Succeſſes of the many Parties which roved abroad in divers Places, the Captains Schenchendorff, Strahina, and Wildenham, with one Lieutenant Funck, ſallied abroad with 100 Germans, and 1500 Raſcians, with which having ſtormed Pernich in three ſeveral Places at the ſame time, they entered the Fortreſs, and cut down all the Turks in the way, only 50 of them got into a Tower, and refuſing to take Quarter, Fire was put to the ſame, and then the People too late cryed out for Mercy; after which the Town was Plundered, and the beſt of the Goods, with 3000 Head of Cattle, were carried off ſafe to Pyroth.

Tekeli declared Prince of Tranſilvania.

But to make way to greater Actions, the French Ambaſſador at the Ottoman Court, after a long Sollicitation, had procured for Tekeli a Baratz, or Commiſſion, whereby he was declared Prince of Tranſilvania, and to publiſh the ſame, he diſpatched his Circular Letters to all the Cities and Provinces, written in the Latin Tongue: The Contents whereof were as followeth:

‘THAT whereas God Almighty, and the High and Mighty and always Flouriſhing Ottoman Empire, had created, and ordained him Prince of the Hereditary Countries of Tranſilvania, belonging to the Ottoman Empire, with an expreſs Clauſe, That he ſhould enjoy the ſame, with ſuch Power, and in the ſame manner, and with as high and ample Privileges as had been given to Bethlem Gabor; for which Cauſe and Reaſon, having ſent Greeting to all the People and Subjects of that Country, he did ſtrictly forbid, and inhibit all Perſons to give any Succour or Aſſiſtance whatſoever unto the Germans, but on the contrary, to put themſelves into a readineſs to give Aſſiſtance unto him the ſaid Tekeli, as alſo the Grand Vizier, and the Tartars, who were now coming in great Numbers very ſpeedily into the Field, to deliver their Country of Tranſilvania from the Terrible, and Unjuſt Oppreſſion of the Germans.

Now follows Tekeli's Declaration in Latin joyned hereunto.

Nobili Domino Judici Coronenſi, Notario, vel cuicunque ex Magiſtratu Dominis amicis meis trandantur.

By the many Troops of Tartars which were already entred into Valachia, and by the Increaſe of Tekeli's Forces, which were become much more numerous and formidable, by the Sums of Money which he had received from France, the Imperial Generals were greatly alarm'd, and fearing leaſt they ſhould Invade that Country, all the Forces in and about Tranſylvania, were ordered to march under the Command of General Heuſler towards the Paſſes which lead to Walachia; and as they marched, to ſpoil the Ways, and render them as impracticable, and difficult as was poſſible.

By this time News was come to Niſſa, that a great Body of Turks was aſſembled near Nicopolis, and that the Grand Vizier was actually on his March to joyn with them; whereupon General Veterani, having provided the Garriſons with neceſſary Proviſions and Ammunition drew all the Troops he was able unto Niſſa, where he remained at a Gaze to obſerve the Motions of the Turks, and to afford his Aſſiſtance unto any Place which ſhould be diſtreſſed, or in danger.

The Seaſon of the Year was now advanced to the middle of July, when Advies came by way of Walachia, that Sultan Galga was marching with ſome Thouſands of Tartars towards Bulgaria; and that Budack Commander of the Tartarian Fleet was with four Gallies, and many Frigats, armed with ſome Guns, and laden with Ammunition and Proviſions, coming up the Danube: And moreover that the Grand Vizier was with a very ſtrong Army come as far as Sophia, and pitched in thoſe Plains, and cauſed vaſt Stores of Corn, and all other Proviſions, to be laid up in the Magazines of that City.

The Tartars retire from Widin.

Some few Days after which the Tartars appeared before Widin with their four Gallies, and about 60 Veſſels, on which 5000 Men were Embarked, and immediately began to fire on the Town; the which News being brought to General Trautmanſdorf, he marched immediately with the Troops under his Command, to the Relief of the Place, and was followed by ſeveral Veſſels laden with Proviſions, Convoyed by Boats armed with Muſqueteers; which coming in ſight of the Turks, they fired inceſſantly upon them, until ſuch time as the Cannon planted by Trautmanſdorf, on the ſide of the Danube, forced them to quit their Station, and retire farther down the Stream, to the other ſide of the River; after which, the General having provided the Town with a ſufficient Garriſon, and all ſorts of Proviſions neceſſary, conducted the Veſſels ſafely back, and marched farther towards the general Rendezvous at Jagodina.

Corbelli reinforces the Troops in Servia.

And becauſe the whole force of the Ottoman Empire under the Command of the Grand Vizier, was marching from Sophia againſt the Germans, who were very weak in Servia, and not able to keep the Field againſt the Turks in thoſe Parts; Count Corbelli who Commanded the Blockade before Great Waradin, received Orders to march with ſuch Troops as could be ſpared from the Blockade, to reinforce the Army in Servia, the which was performed accordingly, leaving the Care and Charge of the Blockade to Count Schlick.

Auguſt.

The Arnouts, who had before taken part with the Germans, obſerving the Weakneſs of the Chriſtian Troops and the Strength of the Turks, joyned againſt their Inclinations to ſave themſelves with the latter; with which the Grand Vizier being reinforced, a Detachment was made under Command of the Seraſkier, to joyn with Tekeli in Walachia, whilſt another Paſha was employed to Beſiege Widin both by Land and Water; and the Vizier marched in Perſon with the groſs of his Army towards Niſſa, with 100 Pieces of Cannon, and 12 Mortars.

Upon this News General Veterani ordered all the Commanders of the ſeveral Poſts and Paſſages leading towards Niſſa, to leave their Guards, and retire with their Men, Ammunition, Proviſion, and Cannon to the City; which having furniſhed with a ſufficient cient Garriſon of 3000 Foot, and 500 Horſe, he marched back with the remainder of the Army towards Alexin, and there formed his Camp.

In the mean time the Grand Vizier on his March to Niſſa, at which he aimed, took Pyroth in the ſpace of three or four Days, upon Capitulation with the Garriſon, which conſiſted of no more than 150 Men, to be conducted ſafely to Niſſa, but the Vizier purſued them ſo cloſe at the Heels, that on the 14th of Auguſt he Inveſted the City with his whole Army, and on the 17th began an Attack at Bergele, compaſſing one half of the City, on that ſide; and on the ſame Day he ſent a Chiaus with Letters to ſummon the Place, the which Colonel Jorger returned back again unopened, with this Anſwer, That there was none there who could read Turkiſh.

Upon return of this Anſwer, the Grand Vizier cauſed ſome Cannon to be ſhot into the City; and on the next Day the Trenches to be opened, after which the Turks fired without ceaſing, both with their Cannon and Mortars; and becauſe it was believed, that the Town would not hold out for any long time, the Turks plied their Buſineſs very cloſe, and made their Attacks with wonderful Courage and Bravery.

A Sally made from the Town.

On the 19th General Staremberg, who now Commanded in Niſſa, in the Place of Colonel Jorger, who was fallen ſick, ordered a Sally to be made by 100 Granadiers, and 200 Fuzeleers, ſuſtained by a Battalion of German Foot, and at the ſame time all the Horſe of the Garriſon made a Sally on the other ſide of the Town, which ſucceeded ſo well, that above 1000 Turks were killed on the Place, moſt of which were ſlain in their Trenches; beſides thoſe, who upon the Retreat of the Chriſtians, purſuing them to the Paliſadoes of the Town, were killed by the Cannon, and Muſquets from the Redoubts, and Outworks. In this Sally the Beſieged had 20 Men killed, and 60 wounded.

Whilſt the Siege of Niſſa proceeded in this manner, the Seraskier having joyned his Troops with thoſe of the Tartars, of the Prince of Walachia, and the Forces alſo of Tekeli, (under whom were nine Paſha's) their whole Army conſiſted of 16000 Horſe, 2000 Janiſaries, and 500 Talpats, with which Tekeli marched towards a certain Paſs called Terezwar, being diſtant about three Leagues from Cronſtadt, where General Heuſler lay encamped with four Regiments of Horſe, conſiſting in all of about 1700 Men, together with 5000 Tranſylvanians, called Zecklers from the Province ſo named, under the Command of General Tolecki. Tekeli not knowing well how he might with Advantage attack Heuſler, paſſed his Forces over Mountains, and untrodden Ways, being conducted by the People of the Country, until they came within ſight of the Germans; who nothing diſmayed at the appearance of ſo formidable and unequal a force, marched with the right Wing directly againſt that of the Enemies left, and charged them ſo furiouſly that they put them to a ſhameful Flight, and had that Day gained a moſt entire Victory; had the Zecklers ſeconded this good beginning; but inſtead thereof, they moſt baſely fled without firing one Muſquet; ſo that then the whole force of the Enemy falling upon General Heuſler, and his Men, having quitted their former advantageous Poſt, they were ſo over-powered by them, that after a long and bloody Fight, they were put to the Rout: In this Action General Nordquermes, Tolecki, Von Wald, Springſelt and Winckler, with ſome Captains, and 500 common Horſemen were killed: General Magni eſcaped, and ſaved himſelf in the Church of a Village called Hansberg, where a Peaſant killed him with a Pitchfork, and buried him under a Dunghill: General Heuſler having his Horſe killed under him, was taken Priſoner by Tekeli's Men, and Marquis Doria, and Major Fisker by the Tartars: Lieut. Col. Rainin, with ſeveral Captains, Lieutenants, and Enſigns, and 32 common Soldiers were made Priſoners by the Turks. The Enemies alſo gained four Pieces of Cannon, 29 Standards, and three Waggons with Ammunition, but loſt 3000 of their Men in this Action; the remainder of the German Horſe being about 1200 Men, with 13 Standards, retreated under Hermanſtadt. After the Fight was ended, Count Tekeli being deſirous to reſcue as many Priſoners as he could out of the Hands of the Tartars, he bought Marquis Doria for 60 Rix-dollars, and many other Officers for a ſmall Matter, and afterwards ſent away the Marquis Doria with the following Letter to his Lady at Vienna, written in Latine.

GOD Almighty comfort thee, and alſo me with a more happy time. After many Miſfortunes, I have been comforted with a Victory over my Enemies; having had the good Fortune to make General Heuſler my Priſoner, and Marquis Doria, which with ſeveral other German Officers, have hunted after my Life. This Accident may give an occaſion for thy Releaſement; to which end I have ſent the ſaid Marquis unto thee (for whom General Heuſler remains Security) and with him I have ſent my Servant Michael for a Companion; to the end that he being an Eye-witneſs of my State and Condition, may render thee a true Account and Information thereof. God grant that he may bring me good News from thee. Live well.

Yours Emericus Tekeli.

1690. August. This Letter being delivered to the Princeſs by the Hand of Marquis Doria, an Anſwer was returned in Latine, as followeth.

The Princeſs's Anſwer. I Wiſh thee Health, and all Bleſſings from God, (whoſe Name be praiſed) for giving me the happineſs to ſee the proper Hand-writing of my beloved Husband, and therewith his remembrance of me. Marquis Doria hath acquainted me with the Love which thou profeſſeſt towards me. I doubt not but Marquis Doria will inform His Imperial Majeſty with the Anſwer I have returned to thy Letter, viz. That I depend on Almighty God's Providence, and the Emperor's Clemency, and as to other Matters, I am ready to give ſufficient Security, that if leave ſhould be permitted me to go and meet my Emericus Tekeli, according to my Nuptial Duty, that I will return again at the time appointed; as to what the Imperial Court will do about the Priſoners, the Marquis will acquaint you; to accept or reject the Conditions, will depend much on your Affections towards me. The Marquis having earneſtly ſollicited his Buſineſs, hath gotten an early Diſpatch; he ſays as much in ſhort as is enough, and you may believe him. I have ſpoken with your Servant, who hath been ſick, but now is better. Perhaps my Emericus thought me to be ſome Lady in a Nunnery, becauſe he gives me not the Name of his Wife, perhaps it might be to try me, whether I deſire to be ſo called. Gold is tryed in the Fire, which Tryal I willingly ſuffer from my Beloved, expecting impatiently another Letter. God deliver the Priſoners, and comfort all afflicted Minds, which I heartily wiſh, Amen.

Your Dutiful Wife,

From Vienna, Septemb. 24. Helena Zrinin.

But let us here leave Marquis Doria returning with his Anſwers to Tekeli, whilſt we diſcourſe a while concerning what the Turks are farther acting before Niſſa in Servia, now ſtraitly beſieged by the Grand Vizier himſelf. An Attempt was made at the ſame time on Widin, by the Turkiſh Fleet, which they expected ſhould take the Place without any Land Forces; but they being beaten off, and four of their Ships ſunk, the Vizier commanded that the Place ſhould be Beſieged both by Land and Water; accordingly the Lines were finiſhed, and the Batteries raiſed by the 24th of Auguſt. In like manner the Germans had perfected a Fort which they had raiſed on an Iſland near Orſoa, called Carolina, after the Name of the Emperor's ſecond Son; and therein a Garriſon was put of 400 Germans, and 1000 Raſcians, with 24 Pieces of Cannon, and all other Neceſſaries required for maintenance of the Place.

1690. Auguſt. Pr. Lewis at Jagodina.

Whilſt things were in this doubtful Condition, and the Chriſtian Army commanded by General Veterani, lying at Jagodina, under ſome Diſcouragement by reaſon of the near approach of the Grand Vizier, Prince Lewis of Baden arrived to the great Joy of the Camp, bringing with him a Regiment of Huſſars. The Prince had taken a view of the Camp, and entered into a Council of War, touching what was to be done, when the unhappy News arrived of the total Defeat of General Heuſler in Tranſylvania, which altered all the Meaſures before agreed; and new Reſolutions were taken to march thither with the greateſt force of the Army, of which General Aſpremont was to lead the Van by way of Semendria, where care had been taken to erect a Bridge for Paſſage of the Troops; and for the better ſecurity of the Ships laden with Proviſions, and with Sick and Wounded People. The Horſe remained on an Eminence, until all were Embarked; and Orders were ſent to the Governor of Craſſowitz to demoliſh that Fort, and with the Germans National Troops, and the Country People who were with him, to march towards Belgrade.

Niſſa ſtraitly Beſieged

By this time all Intercourſe with Niſſa was cut off, the Vizier having encompaſſed the City on all ſides with an Army, as was reported of 30000 Foot, and 50000 Horſe, beſides 15000 Tartars daily expected; the appearance of which, was enough to have affrighted the Place to an immediate Surrender, as was expected by the Grand Vizier; but contrary thereunto he met with a moſt vigorous Reſiſtance, to the great loſs of his Men; and a ſecond time, which was the laſt of Auguſt, they made another more violent Attack with freſh Troops, and were ſtill repulſed with greater loſs: At length the Turks for ſaving their Men, made a trial of ſome Mines, which they ſprang in divers Places, but moſt commonly they reverſed to the greater Damage and Miſchief of the Turks themſelves.

And Attacked.

Septemb.

The Grand Vizier having underſtood, that Prince Lewis was on the Retreat, and had withdrawn his Forces from Widin, and Semendria, detached a part of his Army to Widin; the which Garriſon conſiſting of no more than 800 Men, it was not probable, that they ſhould be able to withſtand any long Siege, and therefore being ſenſible, that no Succour was to be expected, they rendered themſelves up to the Enemy on the 29th of Auguſt, before any Breach was made, or the Enemy advanced within 40 Paces of the Walls; deſpair of Succour put them upon this Reſolution, whereby they gained ſuch good Conditions, that they marched away, and joyned with the Army of Prince Lewis, the 11th of September.

Hanc porro victoriam trecentorum illis, non amplius militum jactura ſtetiſſe: unum tantum alicujus nominis cecidiſſe præfectum Turcici exercitus Cerkiſium Achmetem. Ex eodem nuncio accepimus, Turcarum, Tartarorum, Walachorum, & Tókólianorum conjunctas copias vix xv millia militum expleſſe. Tókólæus captivos majores minoreſque duces cunctos penes ſe retinet, tranſmiſſis tantum viginti ſignis ad Vizirium: quæ ille èveſtigio eopſe, quo accepit die una cum expugnati intra ſextum diem Viminatii nuncio ad magnum Sultanum miſit.

Vizirium aiunt ſcripſiſſe Tókólæo de mittendo ad ſe Heiſlero: at illum reſpondiſſe, eo ſibi imprimis opus eſſe cum ad ſubjugandam Tranſylvaniam, tum ad recuperandam conjugem ſuam Principem Ragotzki. Idem, quem dixi, Fonducus in Cerkiſii Achmetis locum Copiarum Turcicarum dux ſuffectus eſt.

Hic autem Princeps cum Kiamankiſeo, aliiſque duobus Turcicis præfectis a. d. viii. hujus menſis Semendriam oppugnatum abiit, comitantibus duobus Turcarum millibus, avectiſque ſecum decem tormentis campeſtribus.

Valachorum Principi, quique ex ejus comitatu, novem itidem conſimiles veſtes miſſæ ſunt.

'Poſtquam præſidium oppido digreſſum eſt, interpreti Gallico imperatum, ut Gallos, quorum aliquot centeni erant ad tranſitum in caſtra Turcica invitaret: verum quindecim tantum tranſiere; quorum quinque religionem Chriſtianam Turcica mutarunt: reliqui Conſtantinopolin profecti. Quod autem gentem hanc attinet, bona fide Væ. Excæ. affirmare poſſem, fraternam ipſos Turcis fidem, operamque præſtare.

Niſſa ſurrendred.

The News of the Surrender of Widin, cauſed the Vizier to haſten the taking of Niſſa, that he might have time afterwards before the Winter to take in Belgrade; to which end he furiouſly aſſaulted the place on all ſides, and continually both by Day and Night fired with Cannon and Bombs into the City; by which the Garriſon being diminiſhed from 3 unto 2000 Men, and the Counterſcarp taken, and no hopes of Relief, General Staremberg the Governor thereof was forced to a Capitulation, and Surrendered on the 8th of September on very honourable Terms: Namely, That the Garriſon ſhould march out with Bag and Baggage, Trumpets ſounding, and Drums beating, Colours flying, and with all their Arms, and to be conveyed in ſafety to the Morava. But the Turks did not faithfully obſerve this Agreement, but robbed and diſarmed many of them. The Tartars alſo purſued after them as far as Semendria, with intent to cut them all off; of which Count Staremberg having Advice, he ſpeedily paſſed the Danube, and ſo arrived in ſafety at Belgrade. The Turks found 90 pieces of Cannon and Mortar-pieces in Niſſa; after the taking of which they marched directly towards Belgrade, and took Semendria in their way, of which Lieutenant Colonel Weingartler, a ſtout and valiant Soldier, was the Governor; but having no more than 500 Germans, and 400 Raſcian Soldiers in all, for defence of the place, they ſuſtained a Storm from all the Turkiſh Army; but being overwhelmed with Numbers, the Governour with all his Soldiers were put to the Sword and periſhed; and the Turks became Maſters of the place, in which they found a good Booty with quantity of Proviſions.

Semendria taken by Storm, and the Garriſon put to the Sword.

In the mean time Prince Lewis continued his march towards Tranſylvania, and having paſſed the Danube at Culitz, a place ſomething below Semendria, he arrived at Karanſebes with the Horſe on the 16th, but the Foot and Baggage came not thither until two days afterwards. And here it was that the Prince received Intelligence how that Tekeli's Lieutenant-General was marching againſt him with ſome thouſands of Horſe, by way of the Valley of Hadegger, leading to that place, which is called the Iron-Gate, with intent to hinder the Prince's paſſage into Tranſylvania; but the Germans were beforehand with them, and with a Party of Horſe took poſſeſſion of the Paſs before Tekeli's Men could reach it; which they maintained for two or three days before the Army could come and enter into it; and having paſſed it about the 21ſt, they drew into Battalia according to the ſituation of the Ground, and encamped near the Ancient Romana Colonia Vulpia Trajana, the Ruins of which do ſtill appear, where they remained until the 24th, before which time their heavy Baggage could not arrive at the Camp.

P. Lewis in Tranſilvania.

The German Army being thus entered into Tranſylvania, many of the Nobility of that Country applied themſelves to the Prince for Safe-Conducts, or Protections, to live quietly and to ſave their Goods; whilſt in the mean time, the Raſcians were entered into Walachia, where they plundered, burned, and put all to the Sword with as much Cruelty as enraged Men can exerciſe one againſt the other. But Prince Lewis marched with his Army in three Lines, until they came within an hours diſtance from Huniad, and here the Army reſted for a while.

The Turks, as we have ſaid, having taken Semendria, and killed all that were it, the Grand Vizier marched with all his Forces towards Belgrade; of which, News being carried to the Imperial Court, the Duke of Croy was immediately diſpatched to Belgrade, to take upon him the Command of that City.

October
The Grand Vizier inveſts Belgrade.

The Duke was ſent away on the 1ſt of October, which was the Day that the Grand Vizier inveſted Belgrade, and encamped in the very ſame Places and Poſts which the Chriſtians had ſet out and marked two years before; And on the 2d he had ſurrounded the City from the Danube to the Save; and from that Day to the 8th they fired continually with their Cannon and Bombs without ceaſing, and ſtormed the Palliſadoes with ſuch Rage, without fear or wit, that the Defendants wondered to ſee them run on ſo deſperately before any Breach, or the leaſt opening was made to favour or prepare for an Attack.

The Duke of Croy at Belgrade.

The Steeple of the Caſtle takes fire.

Again on fire and blows up.

A great ſlaughter thereby.

On the 8th, The Duke of Croy arrived in the City by Boat, and immediately applied himſelf to take a View with General Aſpremont, and Officers of the Artillery of all the Works and Fortifications, as alſo of the Enemies Trenches, which were already advanced within 12 Paces of the Palliſadoes; which done, he retired to his Lodging; and that night, the Beſieged diſcovered and emptied one of the Turks Mines juſt ready to be Sprung: Next Morning the Duke of Croy being deſirous to ſend a true account to the Emperor of the State and Condition of the Place, a Draught thereof was drawn and ſubſcribed by General Aſpremont, and Officers of the Artillery; which whilſt the Duke, after a ſmall Breakfaſt, was preparing to diſpatch away, giving an Account withall, that there were not above 3200 Men in the place fit for Service, an outcry was made, That the great Blue-Steeple of the Caſtle began to burn; upon which Alarm the Generals and others applying themſelves to extinguiſh the Fire, it was ſoon put out. But no ſooner were the Generals and People returned to their Homes, and buſily employed in their Diſpatches for Vienna, which were to be carried by the Count Archinto; but by ſome unknown Accident; or as it is rather believed, by the Treachery of a Turk diſguiſed in a German Habit, or by the villainous and traiterous Practice of ſome French, who had been employed to work in the Magazines, and had that Morning Deſerted, and gone over to the Turk; the ſaid Blue-Steeple, about three or four a Clock in the Afternoon (which was the principal Magazine for Powder in all the City) took Fire, and blew up, with ſuch Violence, that the Duke was not only wounded, but half buried in the rubbiſh of his own Lodgings, and diſ-interred as it were by a Page of General Aſpremont. This blow over-turned the great Bulwark, which defended the Caſtle, together with its Walls, Guns, and other Defences, opening ſo large a Breach for the Enemy, that they might have entered the Town with whole Squadrons: And ſo extraordinary and fatal was this blow, that it deſtroyed a thouſand Men of the Garriſon, which were drawn up on the place of Arms and on the Walls; ſo that when the Generals ordered new Men to ſupply the Places of thoſe who had been killed by this fatal Clap, and defend the Breach, they could not find a ſufficient number to withſtand the Enemy, then ready to take advantage of this dreadful blow; howſoever, they made the beſt reſiſtance poſſible, until their remaining Magazines and Store-Houſes took Fire, and blew up one after the other, in ſuch a diſmal manner, that for Fire, Powder, Smoak, Stones, and Duſt, one Man could not ſee, much leſs know the other; and in this Confuſion, not only the greateſt part of the Garriſon periſhed, but even a thouſand Turks ſtorming at that time the Walls, and entring the City, were alſo loſt; and ſuch as remained alive were forced to retreat back to the Camp; at which time it ſeemed, as if a Ceſſation of Arms had been made during this gloomy and diſmal Interval; but ſo ſoon as it had cleared up a little, the Turks obſerving the great Conſternation in the City, ſo that thoſe who remained alive, could make no reſiſtance, they rather entered the Walls than Stormed them; And being come within the City, they found very few Chriſtians living, or Houſes ſtanding, and the very Boats in the River were ſunk by the weight of the Stones and rubbiſh which were fallen into them; ſo that thoſe who eſcaped, ſaved themſelves for the moſt part by Swimming. ſome over the Danube, and ſome over the Save; on which occaſion, howſoever ſome few Boats remained, by which many paſſed over, and amongſt the reſt, the Duke, and General Aſpremont, with ſome of their Servants; but no Man could ſave more than what he carried about him.

Count Aſpremont being blamed for this Action, was cleared by this following Copy.

Louis Margrave de Baden de Sa
Majeſte Imperiale Lieutenant
General, Marechal de Camp,
Raab.

And thus every Man ſhifting as well as he could for himſelf, the Duke rallied about 400 Men in all, with which he arrived at Titul, and afterwards marched with them to Peter Waradin; but the Duke remained not long here, before he departed, and took his march for Eſſeck, emptying all the Garriſons by the way, ſuch as Illock, Sabaz, and Brod, and joyning all the Forces he was able to Conſerve that important place; it being conjectured, that after having rendred themſelves Maſters of Belgrade, the Turks would not ſtop there, but following the air of their good Fortune, would endeavour alſo to take Eſſeck: But the Seaſon of the Year being far ſpent, it was believed that the Grand Vizier would think he had done enough for this Summer, and therefore would conclude the Campagne with an Action of ſo much Glory; but the Grand Vizier reſted not here, but having left 10000 Men for a Garriſon in Belgrade, and recommended the repair of the Breaches to the Care of ſome French Ingeniers that followed the Army, and leaving ſome of their Horſe Cantoned near the City; the greateſt part of their Cavalry was ordered for the Upper Hungary; upon the News of which, the Germans were ſo Alarm'd, that they quitted the Blockade before Great Waradin, and with other Troops which were in the Neighbourhood, they marched towards the Tibiſcus, to ſecure the paſſage of that River.

The Germans quit the Blockade of Great-Waradin.

In the mean time the Paſha of Boſnia was Commanded by the Grand Vizier to take Eſſeck, whilſt he himſelf, with a ſtrong Army of Turks paſſed the Danube; whereupon the Germans quitted Lugos, and Caranzebes, and the Vizier marched directly to Lippa; which place having been attacked with much Reſolution, and continual Storms, and in want of all Proviſions, was forced to Surrender, but on very honourable Capitulations, being permitted to march out with Bag and Baggage, Drums beating, and with Colours flying: The Beſieged loſt but ten Men, but the Turks 800 in this Action.

P. Lewis continues his march.

Whilſt Matters ſucceeded in this manner with the Vizier's Army, Prince Lewis of Baden continued his march by way of Weiſſenburg and Mullenbach, and arrived the 3d of October at Hermanſtadt, where for want of Proviſions he was forced to remain for ſome days; but being at length ſupplied with all things neceſſary, they decamped, and came to Medies, where they attacked, and beat ſeveral Parties of the Enemies, whoſe Heads they brought with Triumph into the Camp: For as to Tekeli, and his Troops, they never ſtood their Ground, but as Prince Lewis advanced, they always retreated, keeping at leaſt ſix Leagues diſtant from the German Army. At length he came to Czick upon the Borders of Walachia; where to encourage and keep his Followers together, he boaſted of great Succours coming from the Turks: But this Report would not ſerve his turn; for the Prince of Walachia having received Intelligence that the Raſcians did much Infeſt and Ruin his Country, he was the firſt to deſert the Army, and return home to defend and preſerve the ſame. Soon afterwards, the Zecklers and Tranſylvanians following the Example of the former, left the Army, and returned to their Homes; the which Misfortunes were ſoon ſeconded by the ill News, That 200 of his Men, who blocked up the Caſtle of Terezwar, had been ſurpriſed, and cut to pieces by the Germans. After which, the Prince purſued Tekeli towards Czick, from whence likewiſe he decamped, and fled through the whole Country, being hunted from one place to another; but ſeeing that Tekeli could be fixed in no place, the Prince ſent back all his Baggage to Medies; and having alarm'd Tekeli on every ſide, he cauſed all the Roads into the Georgian Country to be ſtopped up, and rendered unpaſſable; and being in a full march, and freſh purſuit after him, he almoſt ſurprized him, and had certainly taken him, had not the Prince been diſcovered in his paſſage over the River near Marienburg; at which Tekeli

And beats ſeveral Parties of the Enemy.

Tekeli flies from place to place.

He flies into Walachia.

keli was ſo affrighted, that he betook himſelf to flight, and with great Confuſion retired through the Paſs of Bozz in Walachia; but being ſtill purſued by ſome German Horſe, they overtook ſeven or eight Waggons with Baggage, which they ſeized with ſeveral Priſoners; But Tekeli ſtaid in no place, but rode Poſt away until he came as far as Tergovitz in Walachia. And thus ending the ſhort Reign of this Tranſylvanian King, the Emperor became a ſecond time the Maſter of that Principality; the Care and Preſervation of which was committed to the Charge and Government of General Veterani, who with eight Regiments, and a good part of the Army, returned back to Zatmar.

Effeck ſummoned.

According to Orders received from the Grand Vizier, Chuſacin Paſha of Boſnia, appeared on the 29th of October, with Muſtapha Paſha, and one Beg or Lord of that Country, before Effeck, with 12 or 15000 Men; and the day following ſent a Summons to the Duke of Croy, to Surrender up the Fortreſs unto the invincible Power of his Sovereign, the Ottoman Emperor, and in failure of a ready Compliance herewith; he threatned to deſtroy the whole Garriſon, Man, Woman, and Child, and not ſo much as to ſpare or give Quarter to Infants in the Womb of their Mothers.

The Anſwer to the Summons.

Hereunto the Duke returned for Anſwer, That the Germans did not uſe to be terrified with high and menacing Words; That they had not a Woman in the Town, and conſequently no Children to be concerned for who were unborn; but they ſhould find Men there who were reſolved to defend the Town to the utmoſt of their power.

The Turks repulſed.

Upon this Anſwer, the Paſha immediately ſtormed the Counterſcarps, which were without any Parapet, and provided only with ſome ſmall Palliſadoes: Howſoever, tho' the Garriſon conſiſted only of 2000 Men, the Turks were repulſed with great loſs and ſlaughter. The Paſha finding himſelf miſtaken in his Meaſures, and that the place was reſolved to make a better reſiſtance than he expected, he began to form an Attack in good Order, opening Trenches, and raiſing Batteries, which was performed with ſuch diligence, that on the 2d of November, two Batteries were finiſhed, from whence with eight Guns, and two Mortar-pieces, they fired continually into the Town. The Duke one Evening walking with ſome Officers through the Palliſadoes to take a view of the Enemy, was diſcovered by them, and thereupon a whole Volley of ſhot was poured upon them; amongſt which, one Musket-ſhot took of the Hat and Perriwig of the Duke, and grazing on his Forehead, took off the Skin for the breadth of a Finger, without other hurt or miſchief.

1690. Novemb.

A Salley made from the Town.

On the 4th about Noon the Duke cauſed a Salley to be made by 200 Foot, 30 Granadiers, and 100 Horſe, which ſo well ſucceeded, that the Turks were beaten out of their Trenches, having 200 of their Men killed on the place, and five Standards taken, with the loſs only of two Men killed and about 30 wounded: Had the Lieutenant who commanded the Horſe, done his Duty, and advanced as he ought to have done, to cut off the Enemies Retreat, above 40 Colours had been taken, and not one of them had eſcaped out of their Trenches; for which Default the ſaid Lieutenant was ſeized, and arreſted.

On the 5th, The Turks had advanced within 15 Paces of the Palliſadoes, and Counterſcarp, and had ſo battered, and ruined the Houſes within the Town, eſpecially that in which the Duke had his Quarters, that very few were ſtanding, and ſcarce any place to remain or abide in. The Turks likewiſe began again to appear in great numbers, threatning a general Storm; But the Duke, and the other Generals, providing to make the beſt Reſiſtance, and moſt vigorous Defence they were able, entered into the Counterſcarps with undaunted Reſolution; but the Enemy attempted nothing, as if ſome ſtrange fear had poſſeſſed them. In the mean time, the Duke being returned to his Lodgings; the Huſſars brought to him three Turks; who being in Examination, demanded for what Reaſon the Enemies had made ſo violent an Aſſault without Trenches or Earth to cover them; it was anſwered, That there being a Report in the Army, that the Chriſtians were coming with a powerful Army to relieve the Town; it was reſolved to take the place, if poſſible, before the Succours came; for which reaſon they endeavoured to carry all at once, by dint of Sword, or force of Arms.

A Stratagem to deceive the Turks.

The Duke, and General Staremberg having received this Information, ſent out by Night all the Drums and Trumpets, and Bag-Pipes which were in the Town, to the Regiment of Hoſkirchen, and ſome Huſſars, which were quartered on this ſide of the Drave, with Orders and Inſtructions, that when the Evening was come, they ſhould under the Obſcurity of the Night, march to and fro, cauſing the marches of Muſqueteers, and Dragoons, at convenient diſtances to be beaten, and Trumpets and Kettle-Drums to be ſounded from ſeveral Places; which being exactly performed according to Orders, cauſed ſuch an Alarm in the Turkiſh Camp, as ſtruck all with Fear and Confuſion, believing that the Succours, which they feared, were now arrived, which cauſed ſuch a Conſternation in the Turkiſh Camp, that they quitted all their Trenches in the Night with a confuſed Precipitation, making what haſte was poſſible for Boſnia.

It ſucceeds to the terrour of the Turks.

The Turks raiſe the Siege by a pannick fear.

Of this the Beſieged knew as yet nothing, but perceiving towards ſix a Clock in the Morning, that not the leaſt noiſe was heard in the Turkiſh Trenches, the Duke gave 50 Dollars to a Musketeer to adventure out, and take a view of the Camp and Trenches; the which having done, he returned, and gave a Report, That not a Turk was remaining, either in one or the other. So ſoon as the Day-broke, the Garriſon ſallied out, and entered the deſerted Camp, in which they found great Spoils, three pieces of Cannon, 100 Bombs, and other warlike Inſtruments which the Turks had left behind in their affright, which poſſeſſed them with ſuch pannick Fear, that they ſtopped not, or looked behind them, till they had paſſed the Bridges at Walcowar, where they ſtayed no longer than only to break them down to ſecure their flight.

The Story hereof was pleaſantly related by a certain German, who had three years before been taken by the Turks, and had for his skill in the Turkiſh Language, been received into Service of the Paſha's Secretary: This Man during the flight had thrown himſelf into a Cock of Hay and Straw, where he lay hidden until the Turks were gone, and then creeping out, eſcaped to Eſſeck, and there told the Duke; That the Paſha was a dull, old, timorous Fellow; who when he heard all the Drums beat, and the Trumpets and Bagpipes ſound, he was ſtruck with ſo much Fear, that he trembled, his Hands and Feet ſhook, his Knees knocked one againſt the other, and his Legs were not able to ſupport his Body: and he farther ſaid, That the Paſha had been ordered by the Grand Vizier, that ſo ſoon as he had made himſelf Maſter of Eſſeck, that he ſhould not ſtop there, but ſhould make Excurſions round the Country, ruining and deſtroying all with Fire and Sword; but this Stratagem ſo well ſucceeded, that the People and Country were freed of the Turks, and the Ruin which they threatned.

Joy at Vienna.

The Siege being thus raiſed, Lieutenant Colonel Lyon was diſpatched with the News to the Imperial Court; which ſo much rejoyced the Emperor and the whole City, that all the former ſiniſter Succeſſes of the Campagne ſeemed forgotten, and ſwallowed up in the Joy of this Action; for which the Duke of Croy, and General Staremberg were ſo cryed up, that never any thing ſeemed comparable to this Stratagem, and gained them not only the Fame of valiant, but wiſe Generals: This News was the more wellcome, becauſe it was ſurprizing, and unexpected; for the Town was ſo ill fortified, that the Soldiers would never have been perſwaded to hold out, had not the Duke liberally diſtributed his Money in the Garriſon, and treated the Soldiers plentifully at the Rate of a Pound of Fleſh, and a Quart of Wine for every Day; And indeed there was a neceſſity thereof in that moiſt Country, which is nothing but marſhy and wet Places, and in that Seaſon of the Year, ſubject to Rain, Fogs, Froſt, and all extremities of the Weather.

Thus this Siege being happily raiſed, Te Deum was ſung in Eſſeck; and all the Trenches of the Enemy being levelled, the Duke committed the Command of the Town to General Staremberg, and returned himſelf to Vienna.

P. Lewis complimented by all the States of Tranſylvania.

In the mean time, Prince Lewis continued his march for Zatmar, where he arrived the firſt of December, having been Complimented all along in his march by the States of Tranſylvania; particularly at Enget, where Thanks were particularly returned him, for having delivered them from the Tyrannical Government of Count Tekeli: Which poor Prince, after many Difficulties, being come into Walachia, 300 Zecklers which had followed him did then Deſert him; but marching home without leave, were purſued by ſome of his Troops, and cut down in ſuch manner, that none of them eſcaped. The Walachians alſo, unwilling to have their Country ruined by the Raſcians, who deſigning to make their Winter-quarters there, cauſed great Fears, ſo that he laboured under perpetual Troubles and Hardſhips.

C. Tekeli in a ſad Condition.

At Zatmar, Prince Lewis was forced to continue for ſome Days for Refreſhment, both of his Soldiers, Horſes, and Mules, the which were ſo extreamly tired by their long Marches, eſpecially the Beaſts which had carried the Baggage, that they would not ſtir nor riſe, until they put fire under them.

In the mean time the Turks under the Command of the Grand Vizier's Son, continued to over-run and ſpoil all the Country on the other ſide of the Theyſſe, and ſent a Summons to the Governor of St. Job to Surrender the place to them; but he anſwered, That the Place being a Fortreſs belonging to the Emperor, of which General Nigrelli had the Keys, he was not capacitated to comply with their Deſires.

1690. Decemb.

P. Lewis prepares to fight the Turks.

The Turks return with loſs to Temeſwaer.

Hereof News being brought to Prince Lewis at Zatmar, who had not with him above 2000 good Horſe; the Enemy being 15000 ſtrong, did not think himſelf in a Condition to fight them, but ſending to Colonel Schick, who with his Regiment was quartered near Zolnock, and to the Huſſars who were in thoſe parts, to joyn as ſpeedily as they could poſſibly with him, and to put themſelves into a poſture to meet and fight the Enemy. Whilſt things were forming and contriving for this Action, a certain ſtout Fellow, who uſed to go out upon Parties, named Kis Ballad, had a Rencounter with the Tartars in the Parts adjacent, of whom he killed 100, and took 50 Priſoners. Of this Body, thoſe that eſcaped carried News to the Turks and Tartars, that the Prince had quitted Tranſylvania, and lay encamped near Zatmar; upon which Advice, 12000 Turks made an Excurſion into that Country: But Prince Lewis having now got together 4000 good Horſe, adventured to ſeek the Enemy; and on the 20th of this month came to Clauſſenburg, where two Days before the Turks had been, and ſummoned the place to make a Surrender; but the Summons being rejected, the Turks having burned the Suburbs, returned to Enget, and in their march paſſing in ſight of Clauſſenburg, they burnt and deſtroyed all Places in their way, and attacked the Foragers, and advanced Guards; took ſome few German Priſoners, with the loſs only of about 50 of their Men, and ſo marched directly towards Temeſwaer: But Prince Lewis having been joyned by General Nigrelli with 2000 Horſe, by which and his own he made a Body of 4000 well armed and accoutred, he purſued them ſo cloſely at the Heels, that the Enemy entirely quitted Tranſylvania, with the greateſt haſte and confuſion imaginable; and falling in with their Rear, cut down about a 1000 of their Men, took three pieces of Cannon, with a great many Camels and Horſes, and moſt of their Baggage; and haſting away with all the ſpeed poſſible, more in the Nature of a Flight than a Retreat, they at length arrived at Temeſwaer, but with much diminution of their numbers, cauſed by toilſome and long Marches, and the exceſſive Colds in the Night, whereby ſome were frozen to Death, and others ſeized by Catarrhs and Rheums, which made them uncapable of farther Service.

Orſoua ſurrendred to the Turks.

After this, the Iſland of Orſoua ſurrendred to the Turks for want of Ammunition; the Governor upon the Articles granted, deſired to be conducted to Belgrade, not knowing but that it remained ſtill in the hands of the Germans; and tho' the Turks told him the contrary, yet not believing them, he ſtill perſiſted ſo earneſtly to be Convoyed to Belgrade, that the Turks at length carried him and his People thither, conſiſting of 600 Men, beſides Women and Children; but this miſtruſt of the Turks words coſt them dear, for arriving there, they were put for two days into a Fort of the City; and afterwards commanded them to bring out their Arms, and lay them upon Waggons, on promiſe of ſending them for Eſſeck, which being done, they commanded them to come forth two by two, that they might be the better counted. After which, they drove them back to the Fort like Cattle, and chained them there with Iron-Chains, where they kept them in ſo ſevere an Impriſonment, that moſt of them died with Want and Hunger, except ſuch as were under 20 years of Age, whom they Shaved and Circumciſed, and made Turks; but the Women and Children they Sold, and pillaged all the Goods, which they brought out with them. In this Iſland the Enemies found 23 great Guns, 15 Field-pieces, and three Mortars, but the Bombs and Powder were thrown into the River: And thus ended this Year, which proved the moſt unfortunate to the Emperor of any, that had happened ſince the beginning of this War.

In Their WAR againſt the
TURKS,
In the Year 1690.

1690. WE concluded the Venetian Succeſſes of the laſt Year's Expedition, with the Triumphant, and Glorious Entry of that Illuſtrious Prince Franciſco Moroſini Cavalier, Captain General, and Elected Doge of Venice, to whom his Country teſtified as much Honour and Glory as could be contrived and expreſſed; the Particulars of which are long and not neceſſary to be inſerted in this Hiſtory; only it may not be improper to recount in ſhort ſome of the Exploits of this Great Man, with that Applauſe which is due unto his Memory.

This Franciſco Moroſini deſcending from the moſt Ancient Patrician Family in Venice, was Born in the Year 1618. He was in his Infancy dedicated by his Parents to the Service of his Country, and educated in all Martial Exerciſes; and riſing by degrees and ſteps to ſeveral Offices, both Military and Civil, he at length arrived at the Supream degree of Government in that Republick, being elected Doge during the time that he was fighting abroad in defence of his Country, he was at firſt made a Noble Commander of a Gally, which is the firſt ſtep and degree which a Noble Venetian takes, then he was made a Vice-Admiral and Governour of a Galleaſs; next Captain of the Golf, Proveditor-General of the Arms in Candia, and then Captain General, in which Office he continued a long time until the Year 1661, behaving himſelf with incomparable Valour; in which Year he fought a Battle with the Gallies of Barbary, under the Fortreſs of Valona, he took a great Ship called a Sultana, richly laden from Egypt, near the Iſland of Milo, he defended the Breaches of Candia, and took another great Sultana, the Captain of which was called Admiral Nicolo of Nadalin Furlano, and made him Priſoner; he laid the Captain Paſha's Gally Aboard, and almoſt entirely ruined it; he took the Gally of the Paſha of Cyprus, together with the ſeveral Fortreſſes of Calamo, Egena, Volo and Megara; and having made himſelf Maſter of thoſe Seas, he deſtroyed 13 Galleots under the Fortreſs of Preveſa. He made many Sallies from Candia in the Face of the Enemy, deſtroying many of their Works and Intrenchments; he ſubdued the Fortreſs of Calamata, and made himſelf Maſter of two Turkiſh Gallies commanded by Hali Paſha; he alſo took the Fortreſſes of Toron, Chiſme, Caſtel-rugio, and Schiato, putting them and other Iſlands under Contribution. He alſo took the Caſtle of Capricorno, and deſtroyed the Forts of Calogero, Sancta Veneranda, and Calami, which commanded the Fortreſs of Suda. He likewiſe took two Ships bound from Alexandria, laden with Soldiers and Proviſions, with another Convoy bound from the ſame Place for Conſtantinople, under which were divers Ships and Veſſels.

The Atchievements of Franciſco Moroſini.

In fine, after all theſe Succeſſes and Triumphs, being returned to Venice, he was made Proveditor of Friuli to oppoſe the Incurſions of the Turks, who at that time threatned thoſe Countries very much; but thoſe Fears being blown over, he was ſent back a ſecond time to Command both the Seas, and the City of Candia, then ſtreightly Beſieged by the Grand Vizier Kuprogli, with the main force of the Ottoman Empire; the which Siege having continued for the ſpace of almoſt three Years, the Turks were concluded to have loſt 128000 Men before it. During which time this Hero behaved himſelf with all imaginable Wiſdom and Bravery; and tho' at length he was forced after many Conflicts, and various Succeſſes (which we have diſtinctly recounted in our Hiſtory of the Lives of the three laſt Emperors,) yet the fame of that renowned Defence, accompanied with an enſuing Peace,

The Praiſe of Moroſini.

Peace, will much more immortalize his Fame than any other of his Martial Succeſſes, it being the moſt memorable Siege that ever happened in the World.

Finally in the Year 1683, when the Grand Vizier Kara Muſtapha appeared before Vienna with an Army of 200000 Men, he was then appointed Proveditor-General of Friuli, to oppoſe the vaſt Inundations of the Turks, which had happened to all thoſe Countries, had the Succeſs of that Vizier anſwered the Expectations of ſo mighty a Power.

After which he was ſent a third time in quality of Captain-General againſt the Turks in the Morea, where in the ſpace of five Years, he performed all thoſe great Actions which have been before recounted; by which he acquired ſuch immortal Honour and Fame, that he was by the Death of Contareno, exalted to the Supream Throne of that Victorious and Renowned Republick; where we ſhall now leave him employed in the exerciſe of the Sublime Dignity, and ſo proceed to recount the Actions of that Noble General the Cavalier and Procurator Girolamo Cornaro, who when the Doge, about the latter end of the laſt Year, returned to Venice, was left in the Command before Malvaſia, of the Blockade, which continued during the whole Winter paſt.

The Venetians reſolve to beſiege Napoli di Malvaſia.

But the Summer coming on, and the Army and Navy reinforced conſiderably with Men, Proviſions, and Money, diſpatched from Venice under ſeveral ſtrong Convoys, and being joyned with the Pope's and the Malteſe Gallies, it was propoſed to convert the Blockade into a Formal Siege. It was now full 17 Months, that the Beſieged had with much patience ſtood out in defence of their City, ſo that it was believed, that they were reduced to the utmoſt Point of Famine, and Penury; the which Opinion, the Turks were willing to confirm in the Minds of the Beſiegers, that they might take them off from the Attempts of Attacking, Bombing, or other Methods for forcing the Town. But the Captain-General having diſcovered, that the Defendants were ſtill provided for a longer Subſiſtence, and able to hold out for ſome Months, reſolved on ſome more expedite means, than by the dilatory ways of a Siege, and the lazy Formalities of a Blockade; for tho' it was moſt deſirable for ſparing the effuſion of Chriſtian Blood to take it, by ſafe and certain Proceedings; yet when it was made known, that the Victuals, and all ſorts of Proviſions, did not fail; it came to a final Determination, to take them by a lively and vigorous force: To which end the Engenier Baſſignani, with the Count St. Felice Sergeant-General, was ordered to take a Survey of the Town on the Lands ſide, and to deſign, and draw out the Trenches, and Platforms for Battery, the which in a few Days, by the encouragement which the Preſence of the Captain-General gave, was performed and perfected; ſo that they began on all ſides, with the advantage of two Palanders, to batter the Town, and with their great Guns from the Ships and Gallies, to thunder in ſuch a terrible manner, that the Inhabitants diſmayed, and diſ-ſpirited by their long Sufferings, and the unexpected Attacks of their Enemies, cauſed their Drums to beat a Parly, and ſent forth a Cadi, with two Aga's, to make Offers of Surrender on theſe Conditions, viz.

The Town battered.

They Capitulate.

'That they might carry off all their 'Cannon, and have 20 Days given them 'to make a Surrender.

But theſe Propoſitions appearing unreaſonable, they were without farther Diſcourſe, or Expoſtulation diſmiſſed, and ſent back to the City.

The Inhabitants tired with the long Blockade of 16 Months, and fearing now a forcible Aſſault, after ſome Conſultation held amongſt themſelves, they reſolved to deliver up the City, and returned the ſame Meſſengers with theſe more reaſonable Conditions,

The Articles agreed.

I.

'THAT the City ſhould be Deli-'vered.

'II. The Soldiers and Inhabitants ſhould 'go forth with their Goods, and Baggage, 'in the ſpace of 10 Days, and ſafe Convoy 'given them to be Tranſported to Can-'dia.

'III. Liberty given to the Inhabi-'tants, either to remain in the City, or 'depart.

In vertue of theſe Articles, 1200 Souls marched out of the City, a great part of which were Men. In the Town they left 78 Pieces of Cannon, part of Braſs, and part of Iron, with great Quantities of Bisket, and with other Proviſions, and Ammunition, ſufficient for ſeveral Months.

The People having quitted the City, and Tranſported as was agreed to Candia, the Captain-General entered into it with much Pomp and Triumph on the 12th of Auguſt, where the principal Moſch being dedicated to God under the Invocation of the Bleſſed 1690. Virgin of Carmen, was delivered up to the care of the Franciſcan Fathers, and a ſufficient Garriſon being put therein, the Command thereof was committed to the Government of that Noble Venetian, Vicenzo Gritti of St. Alviſe, in quality of Proveditor. Many Gentlemen ſignalized their Valour and Conduct in ſubduing this Fortreſs, namely the Duke of Guadagni, Chabrillan General of Malta, with ſeveral other Noble Perſons, and Subaltern Officers, worthy of immortal fame. In this laſt Action, 400 Men were killed and wounded.

The Venetians deſign upon Valona.

Septemb.

By the Fall of this City of Malvaſia, taken the 12th of Auguſt, the Turks were entirely beaten out of the Morea, and the Venetians became abſolute Maſters thereof: But to loſe no farther time, the Captain-General Cornaro having given ſome time for the Refreſhment of his Troops, ſet ſail from Malvaſia with the whole Armata, towards the Gulf; and being on the 11th of September come within ſight of Valona, the Turks had time to form a Body of 7000 Foot, and 1500 Horſe; and having taken poſſeſſion of the moſt advantageous Poſts, and Paſſes, they endeavoured vigorouſly to diſpute the Landing of the Venetians. But things were ſo well ordered, that nothing could give a ſtop to the Reſolution of Men accuſtomed to Succeſs and Victory.

They Land.

The firſt that ſet Footing on Shoar, were the Malteſes, which were followed by the Pope's Militia; but the Venetians were the firſt to attack the Enemy under Command of Major-General Spaar; which they perform'd with ſo much Bravery and Reſolution, that having repulſed the Enemy from the Shoar, they purſued them to the Fortreſs of Cannina, which is ſituate on the top of a high and craggy Rock, about four Italian Miles diſtant from Valona; theſe were ſeconded by the Duke of Guadagni, and ſeveral other Auxiliary Troops, together with ſome Venetian Troops commanded by Sergeant-General Borri; in this Action the Turks loſt ſome Men, and the Venetians about 8 or 10, amongſt which the Count of St. Felice was ſhot in the Head by a Musket-Bullet.

The Army being alſo joyned with a Body of Cimarriotes, and Albaneſes, and conſiderably increaſed thereby, advanced ſo far, as to lodge that Night in the Neighbourhood, deſigning next Morning to attack the Suburbs of the Town, whilſt Lavettin, General of the Deſcent, was taking a Survey of its Situation, he was grievouſly wounded with a Musket-ſhot; and in the mean time the Turks making a Sally with 2000 Men, were repulſed, and forced to retire into their Houſes fortified with Stone, barricading up their Streets, and in many Places opening Trenches to give a ſtop to the advanced Troops of the Enemy, by which the Captain General foreſeeing that length of time might be advantageous to the Enemies, which in a ſhort time expected new Forces; the Cannon, Bombs, and other Warlike Inſtruments, were ſent for from the Fleet, which was performed with ſo much diligence, that in the ſpace of 24 Hours, the great Cannon was brought, and ſome Batteries raiſed, to the great Admiration and Terrour of the Enemy, againſt the Fortreſs of Cannina; in the expedition of which Work, all the Ciurma, that is, the Slaves of the Gallies and Galleaſſes, were greatly ſerviceable, by mending and breaking the Ways to make them paſſable for the Artillery; but whilſt the Batteries were playing very hotly on Cannina, a ſtrong Party of 3000 Foot, and 400 Horſe, were detached under Command of General Spaar, to attack the Enemy, who had made a Retreat, after the late Repulſe upon the Sea-coaſts, into ſome fortified Houſes and Places of Retirement. Spaar having marched for the ſpace of 10 Miles through Woods, and Mountains, and difficult Places, came at length in ſight of the Enemy, who were poſſeſſed with ſuch Fear and Conſternation, that tho' at firſt they made an appearance of Fighting, yet upon a more near Approach, they turned their Backs, and fled with Shame and Confuſion.

The Turks overthrown in the Field.

The Fort of Cannina capitulates

In the mean time whilſt General Spaar was in purſuit of the Enemy, General Borri, with ſeveral others of the chief Officers, made an Attack upon the Fort, without any fear or regard to the continual Fire which was made from thence, and being ſeconded at the ſame time by the Duke of Guadagni, together with the Malteſes and the Troops of the Religion, and of the Papalins, or the Pope's Forces; they all in their ſeveral Stations aſſaulted the Places appointed to them, and in this general Storm the Auxiliaries forced into the middle of the Town, ſeparating the Defendants on the Right Hand from thoſe of the Left, who finding themſelves diſtreſſed on all ſides, ſpread a White Flag, demanding to Capitulate; the which being granted, ſome Perſons came forth demanding ſuch exorbitant Terms, as were not thought fit to be granted. At length all was reduced to theſe Particulars; namely,

'That they ſhould, without further de'lay, Surrender the Fortreſs into the 'Hands of the Venetians, and march forth
'immediately with their Families, Bag and 'Baggage.

Thus

1690. Septemb. Cannina ſurrendred.

Thus was the Fortreſs of Cannina delivered up to the Will and Pleaſure of the Captain-General, out of which came forth about 3000 Souls, beſides 546 of the Garriſon, and were with ſafe Convoy conducted to their Camp: The loſs on the Venetian ſide was not conſiderable as to the Numbers, but for the Quality of the Perſons killed and wounded, amongſt which Alviſe Sagredo was wounded with a Muſquet-Bullet in the Thigh; and General Borri through the Body, of which he died, to the great Sorrow and Lamentation of the whole Army; likewiſe Monſieur de Moroglie, Lieutenant General of the Forces of Malta, whoſe Place was ſupplied by Sergeant-Major de Broſſie, a Perſon of approved Valour, and prudent Conduct.

Perſons of Quality killed.

The Captain-General not being willing to loſe the favourable advantage of the preſent Conſternation the Enemy was in, their Army being beaten in the Field, and put to flight, and the Fortreſs of Cannina delivered, and the Cannon for ſeveral Batteries playing upon the Town of Valona, it was thought fit to make an appearance of the whole Army before the City, and to affright them the ſooner into a Surrender; a threatning Summons was ſent them, with Menaces of giving no Quarter in caſe of Refuſal; but hereunto no Anſwer was returned by the Turks, ſo that nothing but an obſtinate Reſiſtance was expected, all things being ſilent and quiet in the Town, during the whole Night: At length in the Morning the like Quietneſs and Silence continuing, it was diſcovered, that the Turks had privately in the Night conveyed themſelves away, and cowardly abandoned the Town to the Pleaſure and Will of their Enemies, on the 18th of September 1690.

The Turks abandon Valona.

In the Fortreſs of Cannina, and in the Town of Valona, 134 Pieces of Cannon were taken of ſeveral ſorts of Metal, as well of Braſs as of Iron.

And in this manner this Enterprize ending, to the great Glory of the Venetian Arms, Te Deum was ſung in Venice with much Joy and Triumph, and greatly to the Honour and Praiſe of the Captain-General Cornaro, who with equal Valour followed the Footſteps of his fortunate Predeceſſor Moroſini.

The Paſha of Arzigovina, deſigns on the Greeks

Nor were the Venetian Arms leſs ſucceſsful under the Command of General Molino in Dalmatia, where Zenalee the Paſha of Arzigovina, had a deſign with a Body of 3000 Horſe and Foot, to attack the new Subjects lately conquered by the Venetians, the which being for the moſt part Chriſtians of the Greek Church, it was reſolved to ſurprize them in the Eaſter Week, when they were more attentive to Devotion, than to the Exerciſe of their Arms; but this Deſign was not ſo ſecretly managed, but that it was diſcovered, and brought to the knowledge of Pietro Duodo, Proveditor Extraordinary of Cataro, who upon the News, immediately diſpatched by an Expreſs, an Information thereof to the People of Nixichi, adviſing them to be watchful againſt the Surprizes of their Enemy. Accordingly at the time appointed, the Paſha moving from Neviſſigne, entering into the adjacent Parts of Nixichi, began to execute all Acts of Hoſtility, burning Houſes and Villages, making Slaves, and taking a conſiderable Booty. The News hereof being brought to the Churches, where the People were aſſembled and intent at their Devotions, they all ran out of their Churches, and betook themſelves to their Arms, with ſuch wonderful Celerity and Reſolution, that they unexpectedly aſſailed the Turks, and after a ſharp Conflict routed them, and put them to Flight. The Paſha endeavouring to ſtop their Career, killed two of his affrighted Officers with his own Hand; but Fear and Conſternation had ſo poſſeſſed their Minds, that nothing could give a hindrance or ſtop to their Courſe; for all being in Confuſion, they trampled one on the other, and in the Purſuit 400 Foot, and 300 Horſe were cut to pieces; the Slaves which they had taken, were ſet at liberty, and the Booty recovered; many Priſoners were taken, amongſt which were ſome principal Turks, with the Paſha himſelf, who being put into Chains, offered 3000 Zechines, with two Veſts of Sables for his Ranſome, with ſome fine Horſes, and Arms of conſiderable value; but the People of Nixichi were too generous to accept of a Ranſome, and rather choſe to carry their Priſoner in Triumph unto Cataro, than to accept of any Preſent whatſoever in lieu thereof. From Cataro, by order of General Molino, the Paſha was on a Gally tranſported to Spalatro. And leaſt the Turks of Arzigovina being hereby incenſed, ſhould be provoked to take a Revenge with greater force, the General Molino, for better ſecurity of that People, ordered the Commander of that Diſtrict to march with a Body of 300 Men to their aſſiſtance, and to put all People into Arms; that taking advantage on the preſent Conſternation with which the Turks were affected, they might with more eaſe enjoy the laſting Fruit of the preſent Victory.

He attacks Nixichi.

Is beaten off.

The Paſha taken Priſoner.

Filiporich taken.

With like happy Succeſs was the ſtrong Fortreſs of Filiporich ſituate in the Neighbourhood of Glamoz in Dalmatia, taken and deſtroyed, by order of Molino directed to the Proveditor of Knin, who accordingly executed the ſame with ſuch Prudence, and 1690. and Vigour, that having dis-ſpeeded 500 Men, to a Place called Dervis, their fortune was to take 60 Turks, which kept the Towers, Houſes, and Moſchs within that Precinct, together with four ſmall Guns, ſome Muſketoons, Colours, and other Arms of the Turks, as alſo a conſiderable number of Cows and Sheep; they alſo burnt three great Villages belonging to the Turks, conſiſting of 500 Houſes, and took 32 Slaves.

Thus had all the Adventures of this Year anſwered the Expectations of the Venetians at Land, better than thoſe of the Germans had done at the Court at Vienna; but yet an unhappy Encounter at Sea, gave the Turks ſome cauſe to rejoyce, and not a little tempered the Triumph of the Venetians; the which happened in this manner.

A Sea-Fight.

About the opening of the Campaign on the 22th of March of this Year, the Captain-General gave Orders to Admiral Valier Commander of the Ship St. Iſeppo, carrying 44 Braſs Guns, that taking with him for his Conſort, the Ship called the St. Mark; he ſhould ſail to Milo, there to collect the uſual Charaeh, or Tribute of that Iſland, being about 10000 Dollars a Year: And being towards the Evening come near the Iſland, a ſtrong Gale of contrary Winds, put them off from the Shoar, driving them towards Candia, and ſo continued until Midnight, when the Wind abating, and the Weather becoming more favourable, they directed their Courſe towards the Iſland.

The two Ships, St. Iſeppo, & St. Mark, attack'd by 10 Turkiſh Veſſels.

Upon Break of Day 10 Ships were diſcovered ſo near, that they were eaſily known to be Enemies; at which Alarm the Matches were lighted, and the Ships fitted, and all prepared for a Fight: Theſe 10 Ships proved to be Soltano's, Commanded by Mezzo Morto, a famous Pyrate belonging to Algier, of which he became Dey and Captain, which having carried the uſual Preſent to the Sultan, was ſome time afterwards Captain-Paſha of the Grand Seignior's Fleet.

The St. Mark blown up.

Now returning back to Algier, and unhappily meeting with theſe two Ships in their way, ſix of them inveſted the St. Iſeppo; and the other four undertook the St. Marco, a Ship of 60 Braſs Guns: After ſome Hours Fight, an unlucky Shot from the Enemy entered the Powder-Room of the St. Mark, with which the Ship blew up, and thereby the Soldiers and Seamen, with all the Equipage were loſt, and that brave Ship entirely periſhed. Hereupon the whole Number of the 10 Ships uniting together, fell upon the St. Iſeppo, which ſuſtained the Conflict valiantly for the whole Day, and making a running Fight, was in hopes, by the ſound of the Guns, to call out ſome help from the Fleet, which lay then at Napoli di Malvaſia; but no Succour coming, Admiral Valier entered the Line into the midſt of the Enemies, where by ſome unlucky Shots, the Maſts and Helm, or Rudder were ſhot away. In this diſtreſſed Condition was Admiral Valier, when ſtill fighting with his Sword in his Hand upon the Quarter-Deck, he called to him his Lieutenant, Captain Petrina, and made him ſwear, That whenſoever he was dead, he would blow up the Ship, rather then render it up into the Hands of the Turks; then he threw Overboard all his Publick Letters, Orders, and Inſtructions, as alſo all the Flags and Colours in which the Lion and Arms of St. Mark were deſcribed, that nothing which belonged to the Republick, might fall into the Hands of the Enemy; and conſequently he cauſed both the Pumps to be unfixed, that the Veſſel might ſink, and not fall into the Hands of the Turks. And afterwards ſeeing two of the Enemies Ships preparing to come Aboard, he called to thoſe few of his Men, who were left alive, and coming on the Quarter-Deck, animated them to ſtand by him, and whenſoever thoſe two Ships were aboard, to give Fire to the Powder, and periſh with the Enemies on either hand: But whilſt Valier was giving theſe Inſtructions, he was taken off by a Cannon-Bullet, and immediately, as he had ordered, his Body was caſt into the Sea, having proteſted, That neither Alive, nor Dead, would he fall into the Hands of the Enemy.

Valier killed.

Valier being dead, and his Lieutenant, Captain Petrina grievouſly wounded, and very few Soldiers and Seamen remaining alive, or unwounded, and the Ship after a whole Days fight, entirely diſabled to make any longer reſiſtance; the Turks howſoever durſt not adventure to come near the Ship, but at length diſplaying White Colours, they adventured to lay the Ship aboard with their Long-Boat, where being entered, they enqured firſt for the Admiral, and his Lieutenant, and being informed, that the firſt was killed, and his Corps thrown Overboard, and the latter mortally wounded, they made Priſoners of all thoſe remaining alive in the Ship; and having demanded of Petrina the reaſon why he had with ſuch obſtinacy fought againſt 10 Ships? He anſwered, That it was not accuſtomary to ſuffer the Ships belonging to the Republick, to fall into the Hands of the Enemy; and that in caſe he had not been wounded, he would have blown the Ship up, rather than have ſeen the Turks become Maſters of her: In fine, whilſt the Turks were Aboard,

Pilla-

The St. Iſeppo ſinks.

Pillaging and Plundering what they could find, about four Hours in the Night the Ship ſunk with all the Cannon; only ſome few Seamen and Soldiers getting the Skiff, when it was very Dark, made their way for Milo, where finding a French Tartana, they were thence tranſported to the Armata. This Fight, tho' unfortunate, was yet Glorious to the Venetians; and for that reaſon, tho' it happened at the beginning of the Year, we ſhall yet in honour to that Republick conclude their Campaign with this glorious Action, and proceed to the next Year; in which we ſhall find the Imperial Forces much more fortunate, and crowned with Glory and Succeſs, than in the preceeding Year.

The Turks deſpiſe a Peace.

THE Turks having the laſt Year regained Niſſa, Widin, and Belgrade, with ſome other Advantages, began to recover their Courages, which before were ſunk very low, and would gladly have accepted any tolerable Conditions of Peace whatſoever; but now as there was no ſpeaking thereof on leſs Terms, than a Surrender of all that the Emperor had conquered and gained from the Turks in Hungary; ſo this Reſolution was heightned and confirmed in them by the Mediation which the Ambaſſadors of England and Holland had offered and preſſed upon them; wherefore the War going forward, the Grand Seignior returned to paſs his Winter at Conſtantinople, where, and in the Black-Sea, ſix or eight great Ships were put on the Stocks, to ſerve the next Summer againſt the Venetians, on the Coaſt of Morea, with which addition to their Naval Force, they hoped to overmatch the Venetian Fleet, and do great Feats on the Coaſt of Morea.

The Engliſh Trade in a bad condition.

In the mean time the Engliſh Trade in Turkey was in a moſt unhappy and unfortunate Condition; for it had not been long ſince the terrible, and affrighting Earthquake, which had about two Years before, (as we have already related) deſtroyed the whole City of Smyrna; and by an irruption of Fire, conſumed vaſt quantities of Goods belonging to the Engliſh Levant Company; and what was of great Conſideration, the Books, Accounts, and Papers of the Merchants periſhed with them. After this amazing Judgment of God, the War breaking out between England and France, the Navigation for Merchant-Ships, both in the Mediterranean Seas, and in the Ocean, became very hazardous, eſpecially for Ships of ſo great a value, as thoſe from Turkey, which were ſufficient to open the Eyes, and tempt the Avarice of the French at the Expence of a ſtrong Fleet to lie in wait, and watch for them, of which the Intereſted were ſo ſenſible, that ſome of the Ships lay two Years at Smyrna, before they could take the Courage and Reſolution to adventure on ſo hazardous a Voyage; but Neceſſity having no Law, for they muſt either periſh in Port, or proceed, in which doubtful caſe they choſe the latter, and with the Bleſſing of God arrived ſafe at Leghorn; where having joyned a ſtrong Squadron of 16 Men of War commanded by Sir Francis Wheeler, they proceeded for England, and ſome of the Merchant-men being ſtout Ships, and of conſiderable defence, they eſteemed themſelves equal to any force the French could ſend againſt them: But whilſt they ſailed forward without fear of any danger from their Enemies, the French having had Advice of all their Motions, and of that great Treaſure they carried, thought it a Prize fit for their Royal Navy, and accordingly diſ-ſpeeded Monſieur Tourville, with all their great Ships out of Breſt, to cruiſe upon them, and ſo well timed their Affair, that they had certainly taken ſight of them, had it not pleaſed God to cover them with a thick Miſt, which laſted until ſuch time, as they were out of their reach, and having a proſperous Wind, arrived ſafe in England in the Month of July, to the great Joy and Triumph of the Merchants.

January.

The Prince of Hanover killed.

But to proceed to the Wars in Hungary: Count Tekely in the beginning of the Month of January appeared with a good Body of Men at the Paſſage of Terez, againſt whom the Prince of Hanover was detached with a ſtrong Party; but he being of a Valiant and a warm Spirit, natural to that moſt Illuſtrious Family, advanced ſo far with a few Men before his Troops, that unexpectedly he fell into an Ambuſcade which lay hidden and covered in Hedges and Buſhes; where receiving a whole Volley of Small-ſhot, he was with one of his Men, (who died by his ſide) pierced with ſeveral Bullets near a Village called Serniſt, and tho' the General followed cloſe afterwards with a ſtrong Body, yet he came too late to ſave this Hopeful and Gallant Prince, tho' not to repulſe the Enemy, who at the noiſe of his coming, fled with all the precipitate haſte they were able.

But Colonel Pohland was more ſucceſsful in his Undertaking; for he having given Orders to Antonio the chief Captain of the Raſcians, to drive away all the Cattle which were grazing about the Caſtle of Facket, and whilſt he was executing the ſame, the Turks ſallied out upon him with all their force, but with ſuch ill ſucceſs, that being beaten, and forced to retire unto their Caſtle; Pohland and his Men ruſhed in with them at the ſame time, and cut down 500 of their beſt well-mounted Spahees, beſides the Foot belonging to the Garriſon, which was ſurrounded with a double Ditch, and beſet with Paliſadoes; the which having plundered, they afterwards Burnt, and left it.

As alſo a Fort called Waradin.

This Succeſs was ſeconded by another upon the Palanca, or Fort called Waradin; in which was a Guard of 200 Men, the which they ſtormed and entered, killed all the Garriſon, and burnt the Fort, and treated it in the ſame manner as they had done Facket.

After this Excurſion Colonel Pohland having retired to his Quarters to refreſh his Men, the General of the Walachians gave a falſe Alarm near the Paſs of Fackau; but in reality marched with moſt of his Troops to a Place called Karanſebes, ſpoiling and deſtroying the Country round about; but Pohland having notice thereof, attacked them, and both he with his Dragoons, and Captain Antonio with his Raſcians, attacked the General ſo briskly, that he was forced to retreat with the loſs of 300 of his Men, and of all the Spoil and Plunder which they had taken.

In revenge hereof the Turks, and Tartars conſiſting of a very ſtrong Body, intended to break into Tranſylvania by way of the Iron-Gate, of which Pohland and Antonio having notice, they poſted themſelves in ſuch an advantageous place, that falling on them by way of Surprize, they routed them, and killed upwards of 1000 Men on the place, took more than 300 Priſoners, with much Baggage, Horſes, and Booty.

February.

In the beginning of the Month of February, continual Skirmiſhes happened with various Succeſſes, as if both ſides intended to practiſe and exerciſe themſelves againſt the time of the great Battle which was to be fought this Year at Salankement.

Some Turks of Great Waradin defeated.

In the firſt place the Garriſon of Great Waradin made an Excurſion towards Debrezin, and had the fortune to meet not far from thence, with a weaker Party of Germans and Hungarians, of which they killed ſeveral, and took 40 Priſoners; but they did not long enjoy the pleaſure of this Succeſs; for Count Nigrelli having notice thereof, detached Lucas Janos, a Lieutenant Colonel of Horſe, to purſue the Turks, whom he overtook and ſurprized in their Retreat, killed 200 of them, and releaſed the 40 Priſoners, with about 450 Horſe, which the Turks had taken in that Adventure. Some other Turkiſh Parties had paſſed the Tibiſcus upon the Ice, but were forced to retreat with great precipitation.

February: Several Skirmiſhes.

Likewiſe 400 Turks which had paſſed the Danube near Illock, were met by 300 Raſcians, under the Command of Captain Toſar, who killed about 140 of them, and took 40 more with three Standards, ſome good Horſes, and other Booty.

Novi delivered to the Turks.

In like manner the Turks appeared with a Body of Men before the Caſtle of Novi, which they forced to ſurrender upon Capitulations; but the Croats deſirous to regain it, marched with a Body of Men towards the place; which the Turks with a like Body of Men reſolved to oppoſe; whereupon a Fight enſued between theſe two little Armies, in which the Turks were worſted, 1000 of them being killed on the ſpot, many Priſoners taken, and amongſt them a Paſha, with ſeveral other principal Turks.

The Turks worſted.

The Croats encouraged with this Succeſs, proſecuted their deſign againſt Novi, and ſtormed the place; the which being provided with a ſtrong Garriſon, and freſh Troops marching for its relief, the Croats retired with their Priſoners and Booty, in very good order.

The Garriſon of Lugos make a ſally.

The Turks more active, than fortunate, ſallied out again this month from Lugos to paſs the Maroſch, and by the way upon the Ice, to make an Excurſion into Tranſylvania. Colonel Pohland having notice hereof, deſigned with his 400 Dragoons joyned to the 1000 Raſcians under Command of Antonio, to ſtop them in their march; and being advanced ſo far as Dobra, intelligence was given him, that the Enemy was returned to Lugos; upon which, being deſirous to try his fortune, Pohland drew up his Regiment of 400 Men in view of the place, placing his Raſcians in a certain Ambuſcade, well covered and undecerned; The Turks ſeeing ſo ſmall a number drawn up before them, detached from the Town a Body of 700 Spahees, and 100 Tartars, to take a view of them: Upon appearance of this Party, the Dragoons retired to the Ambuſcade, into which the Turks unwarily purſuing them, unhappily were fallen; and ſeeing their danger, betook themſelves to a precipitate and diſorderly flight towards their Forts; but being cloſely purſued, the Raſcians and Dragoons, entered the Palanca together with the Turks, cutting down and killing all that were before them. In this Confuſion, many of the Turks betook themſelves to the Caſtle, but with ſo much haſte, that they had not time to draw the Bridge up after them; ſo that the Raſcians paſſing thereon, cut down one of the Caſtle Gates with their Battle-Axes; and being come to the laſt Gate, the Turks hung out

In this place of Lugos, four Braſs Guns, and one Mortar piece were taken with 15 Standards. After which 700 Raſcians, and 100 Dragoons, were left for a Garriſon in the place.

The Garriſon of Bech makes a Salley.

The News of this Succeſs encourageing all the Imperialiſts round about, the Hungarians in the Garriſon at Beche, about eight Leagues diſtant from Segedin, ſallied out with a Party of Horſe and Foot, and met a Party of Tartars, not far from Zatmar, pillaging and robbing the Country, the which he having attacked with great vigour, they returned with 200 Heads, together with two of their Captains Priſoners, and 300 Horſes. Another Party of Hungarians of the Gariſon of Zento, met with a Party of 60 Turks, of which they killed 20, and made 40 Priſoners; and in their return they took the Palancha of Gariawiez, and killed all the People, and found a rich Booty in it.

The Garriſon of Segedin ſurprize Chonad.

The Garriſon of Segedin being informed of all theſe Succeſſes of their Neighbours, were reſolved not to ſit idle, but to try their fortune in the ſame manner; and accordingly by break of Day, attacked the City of Chonad, and entered it by ſurprize, before the Turks knew that their Enemy was near them: All in the Town were killed; and thoſe in the Caſtle being terrified by the Flames round about them, abandoned the place the night following.

These frequent Misfortunes of the Turks made them more cautious and circumſpect in all their Motions for the future, retiring and keeping themſelves cloſe in their ſtrong Holds, and Fortreſſes. On the other ſide, the Imperial Court took all poſſible care to reinforce their Army, and make it more ſtrong and numerous than it had been the laſt year: To which end, Orders were given to repair and ſtrengthen the Fortifications of Buda and Eſſeck; and eſpecially the latter, where the Counterſcarps were enlarged, and two whole, and two half Batteries were raiſed; and the Ice of the Danube, (for it was now the month of March) being thawed, the River was open to bring all neceſſary Materials for the Fortifications, whereby that work went on with all Diligence. This Employment did not hinder the Governor of Eſſeck from making ſome Attempts on the Turks; the which he proſecuted with ſome vigour, for having given Orders to a Captain of Walkowar, Percilia by Name, with 400 Huſſars and Heydukes, to fall into the Dominion of the Turks: He accordingly ſurprized Irrick, burnt and plundered, and put all to Fire and Sword: He deſtroyed alſo the Neighbouring Villages, and cut down all the Turks and Tartars who had their Quarters in thoſe Parts: In this Action Percilia got ſo conſiderable a Booty, that he laded 70 Waggons with the Spoil, beſides a conſiderable number of ſtately Horſes; only 40 Turks of Note and Quality were made Priſoners; and ſeveral Standards, as a ſignal of Victory, were ſent to Vienna. With this Booty, a great quantity of Copper-Money was taken for payment of the Turks and Tartars, together with 12000 Ducats in Gold, and 3000 in Silver, with Clothing for the Souldiers, and rich Habits belonging to the General Officers. The Report of this Action being noiſed abroad, a Paſha of that Country, called Kathana Muſtapha, with 200 Horſe purſued and overtook them; but finding them too ſtrong for him, and preparing to attack him, he retired and ſaved himſelf in a Caſtle not far diſtant from thence. Nor was this all; for Percilia, meeting with another Party of Tartars, cauſed his Trumpets to ſound a Turkiſh March: In anſwer to which, the Tartars called, and ſpoke to them in the Turkiſh Language, which Percilia returned with good Blows, falling on them ſo ſuddenly, that they entirely routed them, took all their Colours, and a good Booty, and releaſed many Chriſtians which had been enſlaved by the Tartars; in which Action, and in the former, they killed 1200 Turks and Tartars, and ſo returned ſafe with all their Priſoners and Booty to Walkowar and Eſſeck.

A like Exploit was done by Antonio, Captain of the Raſcians, who having joyned with 600 Heydukes, and 400 Huſſars, attacked a Caſtle, called Karakowar, a place ſituate on a high Rock, and by a Stratagem took it, and found therein great quantities of Corn; the which he diſtributed amongſt his Men; only he put a Garriſon into the place, and left with

Tho' the Turks had the laſt year been more ſucceſsful than they had been any time during the War; yet by their long and tedious Marches, and by the Loſſes they had ſuſtained in ſmall Parties beforementioned, they could not put themſelves into a poſture of taking the Field until the middle of the month of July: Howſoever, in the mean time, they made great preparations both by Land and Water; ordering their Troops from the remoteſt parts of Aſia to march for Hungary; ſeveral of their Ships laden with Ammunition and Proviſions arrived at Widin, with deſign to tranſport the ſame to Belgrade, where the Magazine of Stores was to be made. Antonio, who was now made a Colonel, had notice hereof, and ſuffered two of their ſmall Ships to paſs by, without interruption; herewith the Turks being encouraged, ſent 10 more; but theſe Antonio attacked, and took two of them, and two more of them were taken by the Raſcians near Modava, the reſt returned back to Widin.

May. Theſe great Preparations made by the Turk obliged the Emperor to do the like; and accordingly a great Train of Artillery, with vaſt quantities of Ammunition, Bullets, Bombs, and Carcaſſes, were ſent down the River to Buda and Eſſeck; at the latter of which places the General Rendezvous of the Imperial Army was appointed.

The Turks on the other ſide began to draw ſome Troops out of their Garriſons of Great Waradin and Temeſwaer, conſiſting of 200 Foot, and 1000 Horſe, carrying ſome great Guns with them in their march, ſeeming, as if they intended an Attempt upon Lugos, with hopes to ſurprize it; of which Antonio having had ſome intelligence, happily met with them; and having a ſtronger Body of Horſe and Dragoons, fell on the 200 Foot, and defeated them, killed 61 of them on the place, took ſome Priſoners, the reſt ſaving themſelves in the Marſhes and Woods adjacent: By ſome of theſe Priſoners, Antonio received Information, that the 1000 Horſe were marched towards Lugos, and accordingly directing his Courſe thither, he ſurprized and took ſeveral of them who were ſeparated from the reſt; and cauſing all the Raſcian Drums, Trumpets, and Kettle-Drums to ſound, they ſtruck ſuch a Terrour in the Turks, that they fled from their ſeveral Quarters with ſuch Confuſion, that diſperſing themſelves, many of them were taken, and amongſt them, an Aga, with many other principal Turks.

1690. June. The time now approaching near for Action, Count Guido of Staremberg drew out ſeveral Troops which were quartered in the Neighbourhood, into a Body; the other Troops which lay about Peſt, where they had had their Winter-quarters, were drawn over to the oppoſite ſide, where joyning with thoſe of Buda, they encamped at Souſeberg: Whilſt theſe Troops were drawing together, a Party of Raſcians ſurprized and took Titul, in which they found 400 Turks, and put them all to the Sword. In this interim, General Veterani received Intelligence, That 300 Ships laden with Proviſions, under the Convoy of 4000 Men, were ſpeedily deſigned from Widin to Belgrade, for ſubſiſtence of that place; and hereupon the General ſent Orders to the Colonels, Pobland and Antonio, to intercept them in their paſſage. Theſe two Braves having joyned their Forces, making together 4000 Men, lay in wait for the Enemy about two days, and on the third, ſeeing them begin to appear, they drew their Forces ſo cloſe together, that they ſeemed not to make above 400 Men in all: The Turks contemning ſo ſmall a number, detached a Party of 1000 Janizaries to attack them; which running upon them with fury and precipitation, were ſo rudely treated by the Raſcians, that the Turks were forced to ſend a ſtronger Party to their aſſiſtance; the which alſo were ſo bravely received, that above 1000 Turks were killed on the place, and many drowned in their retreat; but the Ships betaking themſelves to the other ſide of the River, were ſaved.

Nor were the Raſcians leſs fortunate, ſome days afterwards having taken 400 Waggons laden with Ammunition and Proviſions in their paſſage from Belgrade to Temeſwaer, beſides ſeveral Priſoners, amongſt which were three Turks of good Quality.

Another ſtrong Party of Raſcians making an Incurſion near Mitrovitz, attacked Kathana Muſtapha, and killed 1500 of his Men on the place, took ſeveral Priſoners, four Guns, and all his Baggage; upon which the Turks quitting Mitrovitz, the Raſcians entered and poſſeſſed themſelves of it.

Theſe Succeſſes being the Preludes to the enſuing Campagne, were good Omens of a happy and glorious Victory, the truth whereof will ſpeedily appear, by what is to follow before the Concluſion of this Year.

By all the Miſfortunes which had attended the Turks in this War, it was believed not only at Vienna, but concluded as well in England, as in all parts of Germany, many, that the Turks were become weary of the War, and that there was nothing now wanting to beget a Peace, but a good Mediator acceptable to both the Emperor and the Sultan. The Turks had already given Proofs of their Inclinations to a Peace by the Ambaſſadors, which (contrary to the Cuſtom of the Turks, and which had never been practiſed before) had ſent their Ambaſſadors in a manner to ſupplicate Peace with the Emperor, and who remained ſtill in the Imperial Dominions, tho' confined to the Caſtle of Puttendorf, in the nature of Priſoners; the which was excuſed by the Auſtrians, by the conſtant practice of the Turks, who had for the moſt part Impriſoned Ambaſſadors, or put Guards upon them, at all times when their Negotiations ſucceeded not; or that Propoſitions were offered not very pleaſing to the Grand Seignior.

But be it how it will, it being now evident, that both Parties had need of a Peace, no Princes appeared capable of the Office of Mediation, but only William King of Great Britain, and the States General of the United Provinces, being both Friends to the Port, and to the Emperor and his Allies.

About that time, Sir William Trumball, ſent by King James II. to reſide Ambaſſador at Conſtantinople, being recalled, Sir William Huſſey, one of the Members of the Turky Company, was Elected by that Company, according to their Privileges, to reſide Ambaſſador at the Ottoman Port: And being afterwards preſented to His Majeſty King William, to receive His Royal Conſent and Confirmation, he was accepted by His Majeſty, and received his Commiſſion and Inſtructions accordingly; by which he was appointed in the Name of King William and Queen Mary, to Offer unto the Sultan Their Majeſties Mediation.

Sir Will. Huſſey choſen Ambaſſador for Turky.

For better effecting of which, Sir William Huſſey was appointed to take a Journey by Land to the Ottoman Port, and in his way to call at Vienna, there to receive ſuch Directions about Treating this Peace as ſhould be delivered him by the Emperor, the King of Poland, and the State of Venice, then in an Alliance together.

Sir William Huſſey not leaving England until the latter end of the year 1690. and having his Lady, with her Women in his Company, he arrived not at Vienna until the beginning of the Winter; when the Danube being frozen up, and no paſſage without great danger by Land; and the Inſtructions according to the ſlow Motions of the Imperial Court not formed, nor delivered to the hands of Sir William Huſſey until towards the Spring; he arrived not at Adrianople till the Month of June, where the Grand Vizier was ſtill remaining, and preparing for his march with the Army towards Belgrade. But before he departed, he firſt gave Audience to Sir William Huſſey the Engliſh Ambaſſador; at which, little paſſing beſides Ceremony, no Judgment could be made of the Viziers Inclinations to a Peace, whoſe Thoughts were taken up with the Contrivances for the War; for the Turks being reſolved to try the fortune of the, following Campagne, would not much hearken to Propoſals of Peace, eſpecially being offered with an Uti Poſſidetis, that is, to make ſhort work, That both Parties ſhould be contented with what they had in Poſſeſſion, and ſo an Amneſty to paſs. What the Vizier had in his Mind, he was not willing to declare; but by the Sequel it appeared, that he reſolved to Fight, and to adventure his own Life with the Fortune of the Ottoman Empire, on the hazard of a Battle, eſteeming it more glorious to die in the Field, than poorly and meanly in a private Chamber by a Cord applied to his Neck by the Hands of two Executioners: With theſe thoughts the Grand Vizier proceeded to Belgrade to Head the Army, which was full of Hope and Aſſurance of Victory, under the Auſpicious Conduct of this Kuperlee, Son of Old Kuperlee, and Brother to that Prudent and Moderate Vizier, who ſubdued Candia, and put an end to the Venetian War, which had laſted for 27 or 28 Years; for the Turks attribute more to the Fortune of a Man, and of his Family, and the Stars under which he is Born, than to his Wiſdom, Conduct and Experience: And for this reaſon, the Turks ſo often change their Miniſters, doing as Gameſters do with their Dice and Cards, throwing them away, in hopes by this Change, to change their Fortune.

The Grand Vizier not inclined to a Peace.

The Turks in hope of Victory under this Grand Vizier.

In this manner, as we ſaid, the Grand Vizier marching haſtily away to the Frontiers, the Buſineſs of the Mediation went not forwards, but this great Work being at a ſtand, Sir William Huſſey proceeded to Conſtantinople, which hath for many Years been the uſual place of Reſidence for the Engliſh Ambaſſadors.

The Engliſh Ambaſſador haſtens to Conſtantinople.

On the 18th of this Month of June, Sir William Huſſey made a Solemn Entry into the City, being met on the way by at leaſt 50 of the Engliſh Nation, all well and bravely mounted on Horſeback, with rich Furniture and Cloathing. Moreover, to make this Solemnity the more ſplendid, the Holland Ambaſſador the Heer Colliers, ſent his two Brothers with the Officers of his Court, to make up the Train, and in this man-manner the Engliſh Ambaſſador was conducted in great Order and Triumph to his Houſe at Pera.

The Death of Sultan Solyman.

Much about the time, or perhaps the ſame Day that Sir William Huſſey departed from Adrianople, being the $\frac{12}{22}$ of June, Sultan Solyman died at that place; the News of which being known and divulged every where to the People in the ſpace of five Hours afterwards; the Mufti, Caimacham, Kadileskier, Nakib Effendi, and all the other great Men then preſent at Adrianople, aſſembled together, and without any delay proclaimed Sultan Achmet, Brother of the Depoſed Mahomet, and Deceaſed Solyman, for Emperor of the Ottoman Empire; and having firſt ſet him on the Throne, and kiſſed the Hem of his Veſt in token of Obedience, he was carried to St. Jub, as accuſtomary, on Horſeback; where having his Sword girt to him by the Mufti, he was reconducted back to the Seraglio amidſt the Throngs of People, who attended him through the Streets with Prayers, and loud Acclamations for his Proſperity and long Life: And ſolemn Prayers were publickly made in two ſeveral Moſchs, which continued from Break of Day, until five a Clock in the Evening, all loudly praying for the Proſperous and Auſpicious Inauguration of the new Sultan, and alſo for the Soul of the Deceaſed Solyman.

Sultan Achmet, Brother of Solyman, proclaimed Emperor.

Sultan Achmet being thus exalted to the Throne, the common People began to expect a change of Fortune, conceiving higher thoughts of this Prince, than they had done of the late Solyman, who merited no other Character than what we have already given him at the beginning of his Reign. The former was dull and heavy, ſtudious, and given to Books, and much of the Behaviour of a Dervis; but this preſent Achmet was more lively, free, and jocund in his Humour; he was both a Poet, and a Muſician, made Verſes, and ſang them, plaid well upon the Cittern, and Coloſſeo, after the Perſian manner.

The Character of Sultan Achmet.

In his Jovial Humours he would ſometimes make Viſits to the Diſconſolate Mahomet his Brother, ſinging and playing before him with his Inſtruments, bidding him be Merry, and telling him that he ſhould not lament his Fortune. I have been (ſaid he) a Priſoner for 40 Years, during which time you were Sultan, and did what you pleaſed; now my time is come, and yours may return: And then he would take his Inſtruments and play, and ſing, ſaying, Brother you have let me live, and ſo ſhall you, and be merry: And in this good Humour he would often paſs his time, to the great comfort of his Depoſed Brother.

The Body of Solyman deceaſed, was embalmed, and brought to the Royal Moſch, built at Conſtantinople by Solyman the Magnificent, and there Interred.

1691. June. Solyman interred.

So ſoon as Sultan Achmet came to the Throne, and the Ceremonies, and Solemnities paſt, he immediately called the Mufti, and gave order to diſpatch away with all expedition two Capugi-Baſhees, the one to the Grand Vizier with a new Seal, a Scimetar ſtudded and ſet with Jewels, and a Coſtan, or Veſt lined with Sables, as an encouragement and evidence of his Confirmation in the Office of Prime Vizier: In this manner another Meſſenger was diſpatched with the like Preſent to the Tartar Han, with Orders forthwith to march unto Belgrade, and join the Grand Vizier with his Forces, which having been divided into three Bodies, the Han could not ſupply the Vizier with more than 8000 Men for the preſent Campagne

The Grand Vizier confirmed.

Theſe Forces with ſeveral Aſiatick Paſha's, amongſt which there was a conſiderable Body of Curds, or Gordi; and another of 2000 Arabs paſſed over to the Vizier's Army; with which, and with an Army of 12000 Albanians, the Turkiſh Army was ſo increaſed, that it was eſteemed to amount unto 100000 Men; and in reality, and according to a moderate Computation, it did not amount unto leſs than 80000 good experienced, and diſciplin'd Soldiers: Beſides which 10000 Men were ordered for Great Waradin, under the Command of Topal Huſaein, Paſha of Siliſtria, and Seraskier, for Reinforcement of that Garriſon.

The ſtrength of the Tur*kiſh Army.*

In the mean time Tekeli being fallen under the jealouſie of the Port, he was forbidden to enter into Tranſylvania, where the People having a deſire that the Son of Apaſi ſhould be placed over them, rather than Tekeli; the latter was commanded not farther to meddle in the Affairs of Tranſylvania, but only in the Concernments of the Upper Hungary.

At this time ſome Mutinies happened amongſt the Soldiers of the Turkiſh Army, upon Pretence and Demand of Donative due to the Militia at the Inauguration of every new Sultan, which, according to ancient Cuſtom, was ſix Dollars to every Soldier, beſides the conſtant Pay; but this amounting unto a vaſt Sum, which was not at preſent to be found, the Soldiers were forced to content themſelves with fair Words of being paid at the end of the Campagne, and at their return home; in which matter, that real Compliance might be made with the Soldiery, when time ſhould come, the Chriſtians were taxed over all the Empire at four Hungarian Ducats a Head; that is, Men of ſome Eſtate, and two Ducats for thoſe of Inferiour Conditi-

Campagne, and at their return home; in which matter, that real Compliance might be made with the Soldiery, when time should come, the Caftans were tax'd over all the Empire at four Hungarian Ducats a Head; that is, Men of some Estate, and two Ducats for those of Inferiour Condition; on; as alſo in like manner the Armenians and Jews were taxed; from which, it was believed, that a vaſt Sum of Money would ariſe.

Principal Men in Aſia put to Death.

The Grand Vizier, that he might ſecure his Government the better, during his abſence in the War, had before his departure cauſed ſeveral of the principal Governours in Aſia to be ſtrangled, and amongſt them, a Seditious Mutinous Fellow, called Charachehaia; who might have been the Author of Dangerous Commotions; howſoever there ſtill remained a deſperate Rebel in Aſia, who with 1000 Men, roved over all the Countries of Sivas, or Sebaſte; but that being a Country far diſtant from the Port, gave little care or apprehenſion of danger to the Vizier, or Grand Seignior. But that which adminiſtred moſt of fear at Home, was the Commotion of the Common People, caus'd by the Copper Money; which having been permitted to paſs for Currant by the Government, was yet refuſed to be received in Payment by them; the which cauſed ſuch Confuſion in Trade, and eſpecially in buying Proviſions at the Markets, that there ſeemed a Dearth or Famine almoſt in the Countries; upon which many bold Complaints and Menaces were carried to the Caimacham, who was forced to give the People good Words, aſſuring them that Silver Money was Coining, and that the Copper Money, by Hatteſheriff of the Grand Seignior, ſhould be no longer Currant; the which for the preſent gave a ſtop to the Murmurings, and prevented a general Inſurrection; tho' the great ſcarcity of Corn, and all Proviſions, both in Conſtantinople, and Adrianople, made the People very uneaſie, and apt to break out into Mutinies.

The Copper Money the cauſe of trouble.

Auguſt.

It is the Cuſtom in the World, that when a Prince comes firſt unto the Throne, for the People to be inquiſitive concerning his Humour, Temper, and Abilities for the weight of Government.

The Character of Sultan Achmet.

The Character of this Sultan Achmet being now the common Diſcourſe, he was repreſented to be much more lively, briſk, and quicker of Apprehenſion than his Brother and Predeceſſour Sultan Solyman, who (as we have ſaid) was as dull and as heavy as an Oxe; a weak, ſimple Man, more fit to be a Dervis than an Emperor; but this Achmet was ſaid to delight to ride on Horſeback, and to throw the Gerit, a Sport uſed by the Cavaliers, and mettled Sparks and Soldiers amongſt the Turks. Farther, he was ſaid to love Juſtice, and to be rigorous in the execution thereof; an Enemy to Tyranny, and Oppreſſors of his People; but a great Admirer of the Fair Sex; which Qualities were thought very laudable, and for them, whether true, or falſe, he was had in high eſteem with the People; and particularly becauſe he was entered into the Project of Coyning Silver Money, and debaſing the Copper to half the value of what it lately paſſed for in ordinary Payments.

The forces of the Turkiſh Army.

But the important Affair of all was the Succeſs of a Battle, which the Grand Vizier reſolved to adventure, both in confidence of the ſtrength of his Army, and his numerous Troops, which now were ſaid to amount unto 87226, Horſe and Foot, as they were counted by faithful Perſons, whom the Grand Vizier had appointed to tell them, as they paſſed the Bridges over the Save; beſides 3000 Seamen, and ſome Spahees from Aſia, which lagged behind, and the Rabble which attend Armies.

The French Ambaſſador perſwades to a Battle.

This great Force, with the encouragement which the French Ambaſſador gave the Grand Vizier to put the Diſpute to the Deciſion of a Battle, promiſing him undoubted Victory, prevailed very much with the Vizier, who conſidering the Applications which the Engliſh and Dutch Ambaſſadors made for a Peace, was an Argument both to him and all the Turkiſh Officers, that the Emperor was in a dangerous condition, and unable to maintain the War: Howſoever when the French Ambaſſador was inſtilling this Conſideration into the Mind of the Chimacham at Adrianople, and that as his Maſter had already brought great Ruine and Deſtruction into the Dominions of the Emperor, ſo he would aſſiſt and ſupport the Grand Seignior in his Wars both with Men and Money. To which the Caimacham made this Anſwer. That if it were true, what the Ambaſſador alledged, the Imperialiſts could not be in ſuch a condition as at preſent to come down upon the Ottoman Armies, and be able to overmatch them both in Numbers and Valour: What diverſion then (ſaid he) hath be given to the Power of the Emperor? If he hath Wars with the Engliſh and Hollanders, what is that to us? We believe nothing but what we ſee, nor eſteem of any thing, but what brings us immediate and maniſeſt relief.

Sir William Huſſey at Conſtantinople.

Sir William Huſſey the Engliſh Ambaſſador, as we have ſaid, being arrived at Conſtantinople, was admitted three Days afterwards to an Audience with the Caimacham, who received him with great State and Pomp, and in a Friendly manner demanded of him the Particulars of his long Journey, and aſſured him of the Protection of the Port, both for his own Perſon, and ſecurity of his Nation; after which, and that the uſual Ceremonies were performed, the Ambaſſador and his Followers were veſted with 22 Coſtans, which was as many as at any time time were given to the French Ambaſſadors at other times, 18 or 19 were beſtowed on the Engliſh; but now the Number was made equal, to ſhow that the Eſteem they made of the Engliſh Nation, was equal with that of the French.

The Friendſhip between the Turks and French.

But how civil ſoever was the Behaviour of the Chimacham towards the Engliſh Ambaſſador, the Grand Vizier ſeemed to be of another Temper; for he not only neglected the Addreſſes of the Engliſh, but privately gave the French Ambaſſador to underſtand all that had paſſed between him and the Engliſh; and this Confidence between the Turks and the French was much increaſed at that time, by the arrival of a skilful Engineer from France, well practiſed in all Military Exerciſes and Arts, relating to Mines, Sieges, Encampments, &c. and with him came 22 French Officers, who were all cloathed in good Green Cloth, after the Turkiſh Faſhion; and with theſe, Monſieur Darmans a famous French Phyſician, was recommended by the French Ambaſſador to the Vizier, who took this Offer the moſt kindly of any thing; for as the Turks have very few Phyſicians of their own, they highly eſteem thoſe who come from the Parts of Chriſtendom; ſo that the Grand Vizier took this Doctor with him, and kept him always near his own Perſon.

Count Marſigli.

The Ambaſſador, Sir William Huſſey, having continued ſome few Days at Conſtantinople, to ſettle the Affairs of the Turkey-Company, and his own Domeſtick, and private Concernments, Count Marſigli arrived from Vienna, bringing a Chiaus with him: This Marſigli had the Title of Secretary to Sir William Huſſey, appointed by the Emperor to aſſiſt in the Matters of Peace, being a Perſon well practiſed in all the Treaties relating to the Emperor and the Turks. The ſame Day that Marſigli arrived, both he, and Sir William Huſſey had a Conference with the Dutch Ambaſſador, Heer Colier; at which it was reſolved to take a Journey to the Grand Vizier at Belgrade, and there again to preſs the Reaſons and Arguments for a Peace.

Accordingly the two Ambaſſadors departed from Conſtantinople the 11th of Auguſt, and entered into Adrianople the 16th of that Month, with intention to proceed to Belgrade in a few Days, had not the News of the total Defeat of the Turkiſh Army in a Battle given near Salankement, with the Death of the Grand Vizier, put a ſtop to their Journey for a while, until a new Vizier ſhould be created; the which was ſoon performed, for immediately one Ali Paſha, formerly Kahya of the deceaſed Vizier, and late Paſha of Scio, was conſtituted in the Place of his Maſter; and he being commanded to proceed in 10 or 12 Days, the Ambaſſadors reſolved to accompany him to Belgrade, there to attend his Motion, and thoſe Overtures which might open a way to a Treaty.

A new Vizier made.

Now ſince this great Defeat given the Turks, in all appearance might cauſe an Alteration, and Change in the Affairs of Chriſtendom, and be improved to a happy Agreement between the Chriſtians and the Turks; it is moſt neceſſary, and natural to this Hiſtory, to give a ſuccinct Relation thereof.

The March of the Chriſtian Troops, to the place of Rendezvous.

The greateſt part of the Month of July, was ſpent in the Marches of the Armies towards the Field of Battle: The Troops under the Command of the Count de Souches, deſigning their Marches towards Eſſeck, they came to Pax, where they joyned with five Companies of Houchins, and five of Amenzaga's Regiments, and at Mohatz they were reinforced by 6000 Brandenburgers; about the middle of the Month of July, Prince Lewis arrived in the Camp, being welcomed with all the Cannon of Mohatz, and the ſame Day he took a View of all the Troops, at that Place, commanded by General Souches, and the next Day of the Brandenburgers; which having done, he ſent Expreſſes to the Army which was behind to haſten their March to Eſſeck; to which Place the Prince in Perſon riding Poſt, he arrived the 17th of July, where having been received in the ſame manner as at Mohatz, he took a View of all the Fortifications of that Place, and of the ſeveral Regiments which were encamped near thereunto: In the mean time the Cavalry of Count Souches, having paſſed the Drave, arrived in the Army, and were next Day followed by the Infantry of that Body; and the Day after that by the 6000 Brandenburgers: So that now the whole Imperial, and Brandenburg Forces being joyned; Orders were ſent to the General, Count Averſperg, to ſend down towards Segedin, all neceſſary Materials for Bombing the Places down the River; ſo that on the 20th of this Month, the Army decamped from the ſide of the River Drave, and marched as far as Bonce, where News being brought that part of the Turkiſh Army had paſſed the Save, a Lieut. Colonel was immediately detached with 150 Germans, and all the Raſcian Foot, and commanded to Embark on Boats, and haſten down the Stream to take their Station at Peter Waradin; and for farther Reinforcement of that Garriſon, the Hungarian Heydukes of Illock, were commanded forthwith to joyn this Officer at Peter Waradin; ſo as on all occaſions to be in a readineſs to oppoſe the Enemies Excurſions into thoſe Parts.

The Forces joyn.

The great Army on the 20th joyned with the Regiment of Staremberg at Walkowar, which was eſteemed the beſt in all the Army: On the 24th they came to Bachin, and there joyned with five Companies of Foot of the Regiment of Archinto, and with the Regiment of Horſe of Baſſompierre: On the 26th the Army encamped under Illock, and there reſted that Day, when News was brought, That the Grand Vizier was arrived at Belgrade, and having laid two Bridges over the Save, he had begun to paſs the River with his Army, which conſiſted of 100000 Men, extending it ſelf from the Mountains on the ſide of the Danube, as far as to the Iſland of Zigan in the Save.

Titul ſurrendered to the Turks.

Beſides which numerous Army the Turks had a vaſt number of Ships and Gallies, 190 of which, under the Command of a Paſha, were ſent to attack Titul, with which coming before the Place he immediately inveſted it; the Town was commanded by Captain Thos, the Garriſon of which conſiſted only of 120 Germans, and 200 Raſcians, and with them he defended the Place for three or four Days; but conſidering that for want of Ships, he could not be relieved by Water, nor by Land, by reaſon of the vaſt Deluge of Rains which had filled all the Marſhes, and made them unpaſſable for the intended Succours; Captain Thos capitulated on Conditions, that the Garriſon ſhould be ſafely conducted to the Army of Prince Lewis; but this Capitulation was not well obſerved by the Turks; for as the Garriſon was marching out, the Lieutenant of the Paſha would not ſuffer the Raſcians to paſs, ordering them all to be put to the Sword; but Captain Thos not allowing this piece of Treachery, and Breach of Faith, he came to high Words with the Paſha; upon which, the Paſha in a Fury drew his Scimetar; but Captain Thos being more ready than he, killed him with one of his Piſtols, and with the other ſhot another Turk dead, who ſtood next to him: Hereupon the Quarrel growing high beyond all Reconciliation, or means of Agreement, Captain Thos cauſed his Men to fire upon the Turks, who were then 4000 Men ſtrong; yet this handful of Men, armed with Deſpair, ſtoutly defended themſelves, until being overpowred with Numbers, they were all put to the Sword, except ſome few who were made Priſoners, and ſix Raſcians and one German, who made their Eſcape from this Bloody Action; the which howſoever coſt the Turks dear, for they loſt 500 of their Men, who were killed on the Place, and as many wounded.

The Turks falſifie their Faith.

Peter Waradin fortified.

Prince Lewis continuing his March, arrived the 28th of this Month at Peter Waradin with the groſs of his Army, attended with all the Ships and Veſſels, which carried the Proviſions, Ammunition, and other Neceſſaries; This Place being very advantageous for its Situation, was ordered by Command of the Prince to be fortified; and here it was that a Regiment of Horſe of the Duke of Newburg, and a Battalion of the Regiment of Huſchin, with 19 Field-Pieces joyned the Army.

August.

On the 30th of this Month of July, a Raſcian Peaſant, or Country-fellow, was taken, ſent by the Vizier for a Spy, to take a view of the Chriſtian Camp; whom the Prince would not ſuffer to be puniſhed; but returned him back to the Grand Vizier, to give him notice, that he was marching towards him with his whole Army; the truth of which was verified ſoon after by the enſuing Battle, which, as we ſhall ſee, was given on the 12 of the Month of Auguſt.

Preparations for a Battle.

This interval of time, between the laſt of July, and the 19th of the following Month, was taken up in recruiting the Forces, and other Preparations for that great Day; ſo that on the beginning of this Month, 6000 Raſcians, and 2000 Hungarians were added to the Army, under the Command of General Batthiani, beſides 2000 Bavarian Foot commanded by Colonel Zacko; ſo that now the whole Imperial Army conſiſted of near 66070 Men; with which Body the Prince marched as far as Carlowitz, where the Army having reſted ſome few Days, they marched to Salankement, and there encamped; and in the mean time the Turks blew up Titul, making their Eſcape by Water to Belgrade.

The Turks hearing of this Advance of the Chriſtian Army, ſent 4000 Spahee's under the Command of Kathana Paſha, to recognize, or take a view of them in their March; but a Party of Huſſars commanded by Raab, and Badiani being ſent out againſt them, the Turk withdrawing, they retreated back to the Army, and with them a Chriſtian, who having been a Slave, made his Eſcape, and reported, That the whole Turkiſh Army had already paſſed the Save; ſo that the Prince reſolving now to meet them, continued his March to Semblin, a Place near to Belgrade; between which two Places, nothing but the River intervenes.

The Turks being much ſtronger in Shipping than were the Chriſtians, they were always paſſing up and down the River, ſo that all the Ships attending the Imperial Camp were forced to remain at Peter Waradin; from whence, with great inconvenience, all Proviſions and Ammunition were brought by Land to the Camp; until ſuch time as General Dunewaldt being come to the Army, had diſpatched 300 Germans, and 200 Hungarians, back to Salankement, to cover and ſecure 300 of the Chriſtian Veſſels, which were arrived at that place laden with Proviſions; which was of great Relief to the whole Army.

Skirmiſhes in Parties.

The two Armies being now very near to each other, Parties were daily detached on both ſides to make Diſcoveries, and bring Intelligence; one of which from Prince Lewis on the 8th of this Month, had an Encounter with ſome advanced Guards of the Turks near Semblin, which upon appearance of the Chriſtians, immediately retreated; and a Fog covering the whole Turkiſh Camp on a ſudden, that Party returned without being able to give other Informations.

In like manner the Grand Vizier on the 10th of this Month, came in Perſon with all his Horſe to take a view of the Chriſtian Camp; upon which the whole Army was drawn out into Battalia; and ſome Volunteers, and other Troops, advanced ſo far on the Turks, that being attacked by great Numbers of them, they were repulſed, and droven back with ſome loſs, until the left Wing of the Army (in which Prince Lewis was in Perſon) came in to their Succour; howſoever 20 of them were killed, and the reſt were purſued to the very Camp; but in revenge the Turks were alſo beaten back, ſeveral of them being killed in their Retreat.

The ſame Day the Imperial Army advanced two Leagues farther towards Semblin, where they poſted themſelves in ſuch a manner, that the Danube was on their Backs, and the left Wing guarded with Chevaux de Frize, which are a kind of Turn-pikes to keep off the Horſe from breaking into the Foot.

The Armies near.

On the 12th the Army advanced in order of Battle, within Cannon-ſhot of the Turks Retrenchments, near to Semblin; being attacked on all ſides by many Hundreds of the Enemies Horſe, which never ſtood any Ground, but retreated to their Camp, which was ſo poſted on a riſing Hill, or Eminence, that the Generals judged it not to be attacked without great diſadvantage.

On the 13th, whilſt the Army reſted, a certain Page to the Major of the Regiment of Piccolomini, who had been taken Priſoner formerly by the Turks, made his Eſcape, and informed Prince Lewis, that the Turks had certainly made an Attack on the Chriſtian Army, had they not been diſſwaded by the French, who adviſed them not to loſe the advantage of their Trenches, but to remain in them in expectation of being aſſaulted therein by the Enemy, or at leaſt until they could draw out into a more advantageous Ground, or until the arrival of the Tartars, which were hourly expected.

During this time the Officers and Soldiers of the Imperial Army, kept themſelves in a readineſs to receive the Enemy; not ſtripping themſelves of their Cloaths, for ſeveral Nights.

Pr. Lewis marches back to Salankement.

That Evening it was concluded at a Council of War, not to engage the Enemy on that Ground, but to return back to Salankement, becauſe that there being a neceſſity to bring all the Proviſion from thence for the Army; the Convoys could not eaſily be defended from the Enemies Horſe, which in great and ſtrong Parties lay in continual wait for them: So that on the 14th in the Morning, by Break of Day, the Trumpets and Drums were ordered to give warning to the Army to prepare for a March, the Baggage being ſent before, and in the mean time, until nine a Clock in the Morning, the Army ſtood in view of the Enemy, who moved not out of their Trenches, ſending only a Party of Tekeli's Men to obſerve their motion.

The Turks repulſed.

On the 15th the Army lay ſtill, and ſo did the Turks; and the next Day Prince Lewis marched an Hour nearer towards Salankement: And on the 17th proceeding one Hour farther, the Turks imagined that this Motion was a Flight, little thinking that it was only in deſign to Encamp about Salankement, where they remained near to their Ships laden with Proviſions, and where they could chooſe the moſt advantageous Ground for a Battle. The Turks encouraged with this Imagination, marched after the Chriſtian Army, and fell in the Rear of them with ſeveral Thouſands of Horſe; but Count Stirum General, and Count Hoffkirken Major-General of the Horſe, charged them ſo briskly, beſtowing ſome Shot amongſt them from their Field-Pieces, as cauſed them to retire with loſs, and to remain more quiet for a while. Howſoever about Midnight a great Number of the Enemies Horſe, Camels, and Mules, having been ſtung by a ſort of Venomous Fly, had broke their Halters and Bridles, and with their Sadles, and Harneſſes, came running into the Chriſtian Camp, which gave an Alarm to the whole Army: But that being over, it was expected, that the next Day a Battle would enſue, which both the Imperial Officers, and Soldiers, did heartily deſire. But the Grand Vizier following the Advice of the French, who were about him in great Numbers, would not adventure that Day to attack the Army; but inſtead thereof, that they might cut off all Communication between the Germans, and

An Alarm given.

Peter

1691. Auguſt.

Peter Waradin, they marched half a League beyond them, and there poſted themſelves with ſuch haſte and diligence, that in 24 Hours they had fortified their Camp with Regular Walls of a Man's heighth, and Baſtions on which Cannon was planted, leaving only a narrow Paſſage for coming in, and going out from the Camp.

The Germans in danger.

By theſe means the Turks had almoſt cut off all Correſpondence between the Imperial Army, and Peter Waradin, and ſo hindered the paſſage of all Proviſions, that the Germans had infallibly periſhed in this unfortunate occaſion, had not God Almighty viſibly aſſiſted them by His Omnipotent Hand.

Count Bucquoy's Regiment cut to pieces.

The Chriſtians loſe all their Proviſions.

To this another Misfortune happened, the News whereof was brought by a French Deſerter from the Turkiſh Camp; how that the Regiment of Dragoons of Count Bucquoy, Commanded by their Major, Count D'Arco in all 1000 brave and well mounted Men, together with 400 others, ſent for Recruits to the Regiment of Caprara and Hoffkirchen, contrary to the Order of Prince Lewis, were fallen into the Hands of the Enemies; the occaſion whereof was, that theſe Soldiers preferring the ſecurity of their Baggage before that of their Lives, reſolved to take that with them; and ſo marching very ſlowly, they came to ſtop about two Hours in a Place, diſtant about a German League from the Imperial Army; where being attacked, and ſurrounded on all ſides by the Turks, they defended themſelves with much Bravery for the ſpace of two Hours, but at length they were all cut down, not above 30 eſcaping of the whole Number of 1400; the Major only was taken Priſoner, and the next Day after the Battle, was found Chained Hand and Foot in the Enemies Camp.

Beſides this the Turks took 250 Waggons carrying Proviſions to the Imperial Army, with a 100 Ships belonging to the Sutlers of the Army; the Men whereof for the moſt part were ſaved, for joyning themſelves with the Rabble of the Army, they fought ſtoutly for their Lives, killing great Numbers of the Turks.

This great Loſs was very ſenſible to the Chriſtians, who having loſt all their Proviſions, without hopes of any other Supply, found no other Deliverance and Safety, but in their Arms, and ſo reſolved on a Battle: The Turks on the other ſide growing Arrogant, and bold on theſe Succeſſes, began now to contemn their Enemies, and to look only on them as ſo many loſt Men, whom they now condemned, and ſentenced to Deſtruction, reſolving to give them no Quarter in the Field.

1691. Auguſt. 19th.

The Chriſtian Soldiers thus armed with Deſpair, on the 19th of this Month of Auguſt, by Break of Day in the Morning, having put themſelves into poſture of Battle, marched directly towards the Turks; and about Noon both Armies being drawn up, they faced each other at a ſmall diſtance. The Prince of Baden Commanded the right, and Count Dunewaldt the left Wing.

The Diſpoſition of the two Amies.

The Turkiſh Army conſiſted of about 100000 Men, of which 60000 were the beſt Soldiers in all the Ottoman Empire, beſides 15000 of the beſt, and moſt experienced Janiſaries; all which Force was advantageouſly poſted, having the Danube on their Back, and in their Front a deep Ditch, with Earth thrown up behind them; but their left Wing was not ſo well fortified, but that it lay ſomething more expoſed to the Chriſtians, whoſe Army was likewiſe drawn up in a Martial Poſture.

The Battle of Salankement.

The greateſt part of their Infantry being divided into 20 Battalions; that is to ſay, The Regiment of Erneſt Staremberg four Battalions, of Souches three, of Chizzola one, of Guido Staremberg three, of Salm one, of Beck one, of Otting two, of Brandenburg three, of Caunitz one, of Vaudemont one; the which were flanked with the two Regiments of Horſe of Nieuburg and Holſtein, with the greateſt part of the biggeſt Cannon: The reſt of the Army was drawn up after the uſual form of Battle in a right Line oppoſite to the Enemy; and in this Poſture upon firing a Bomb, which was the Signal given, they all marched in an equal Line, until they came within 200 Paces of the Enemy; and then the Cannon on each ſide began to play: At the firſt it was intended to attack the Enemies left Wing, before the right, to give room for the Foot, which was placed on the riſing of a Hill oppoſite to the main, and ſtrongeſt Intrenchment of the Turks, which was fortified with 80 Pieces of Cannon; and alſo to charge the Enemies Horſe, which were drawn up below the Hill in the Plains, with deſign that having Overthrown them, to force through the Camp, unto that part where the Enemies were leſs fortified and ſecured. It ſeems that the right Wing was ſomething too forward, and began to engage before the left could come up, being hindred by the high Graſs and Buſhes; howſoever here was no ſtaying or retreating for the right Wing; but, on they went, looking on the Enemy before them, and proceeded to their very Ditches and Intrenchments; but the Janiſaries having a good Parapet, or Breaſt-work before them, fired ſo furiouſly from thence, that many both of the Chief, and Subaltern Officers were killed and wounded; and here it was that General Souches upon a numerous Sally ly of the Enemy, was forced to give way, until the Foot came up, which was not far behind; but in the mean time being ſuſtained by the four Regiments of Nieuburg, Holſtein, St. Croix, and Darmſtadt under the Command of the Dukes of Holſtein and Aremberg, they advanced to the very brink of the Enemies Retrenchments, with which Example of Bravery both Horſe and Foot, being again animated, the Infantry made ſeveral Attacks on the Enemy, and tho' they were ſometimes repulſed, yet being relieved, and guided by thoſe brave Officers both of Horſe and Foot; the Fight was continued from three a Clock in the Afternoon, until it was Night, by which time all the Superiour Officers of the Infantry were killed, excepting only General Guido of Staremberg, and Prince Charles of Vaudemont, tho' both of them were alſo wounded.

Nor was the reſt of the Army in the mean time idle; for the Enemy attacking them in the left Wing, and in the Flank with great fury, were as bravely repulſed by the Brigades of Caſtelli and Hoffkirchen; but the Turks rallying all their Horſe into a Body, fell on with greater Fury, in deſpight of the ſmall and great Shot, and charged the Brigade of General Sarau, which was part of the Right Wing: And the Turks being very numerous on that ſide, they ſo over-powred this Brigade, that two of the Battalions were cut down on the Ground where they ſtood, in which Action, the Battalions of Otting, Beck, and alſo the Old Regiments of Staremberg, and Brandenburg, ſuffered very much; ſo that until that time being about ſix a Clock, Fortune favoured the Turks; and things had ſuch a diſmal and deſperate Face, that the Generals themſelves began to deſpair of ſaving one Man from this Bloody Action; for here was no Retreat, or Sanctuary, nor Place to fly unto for Succour: And thus both Officers and Soldiers armed with Deſpair, redoubled their Endeavours, and in contempt of Death ruſhed on the Enemies Squadrons; the which being obſerved by thoſe who attended the Baggage, and remained for Reſerves, how that their Companions were beſet on all ſides, and in a continual Fire, were aſhamed to be Lookers on, and Spectators of this Tragedy, came in to the Succour of thoſe who were ready to turn their Backs, and with their Cries and Prayers, gave a ſtop to their Flight.

Matters ſtanding in this deſperate State and Condition, the main Body of the Army under the Command of the Brandenburg Generals, Barfus and Brandt, came timely in to the Aſſiſtance of Count Sarau, who by theſe Succours rallied his Men, and defended his Poſt, until about an Hour before Night, when the Brigades of Hoffkirchen, and Caſtelli, with the left Wing, which at this time was Commanded by the Prince of Baden in Perſon, were advancing towards that ſide of the Turkiſh Army, which was not as yet Intrenched, and ſo furiouſly aſſaulted them, that by the Divine Aſſiſtance, and Arm of the God of Hoſts, viſibly appearing for them, they at laſt forced, and entred the Enemies Camp, driving them from the riſing Grounds where they had planted their Cannon; which when the Hungarians and Raſcians obſerved, they, who until then had been ſomething backward, and watched the time to Eſcape, came thundering down with renewed Courage, and furiouſly entered the Turkiſh Camp, cutting down all that preſented before them; by which means a Way was opened for the right Wing to advance; and ſo the Turks being brought into the middle, and attacked on all ſides in a narrow Ground between their Trenches and the Danube, were entirely ſubdued, and overcome, and began to fly. And tho' the Turkiſh Cavalry for the moſt part found a way to eſcape, through a void Interval laid open for the right Wing, howſoever the Foot continued to defend themſelves ſo furiouſly and firmly in their Trenches, that tho' the Field was yielded to the Chriſtians, yet here they received their greateſt loſs; for this Action coſt the Life of the Duke of Holſtein, with a Deluge of Blood, entirely to ſubdue the already conquered Enemy.

The Chriſtians enter the Enemies Camp.

The Anger, Rage, and Deſpair of the Turks on one ſide, and the Fury of the Chriſtians on the other, was ſuch, that the firſt ſcorned to accept Quarter, and the others not willing to give it; for which reaſon very few Priſoners were taken.

The remainder of the Turkiſh Cavalry, amongſt which was the Grand Vizier in Perſon, were forced to break their way through the narrow Paſſages, and Diſtances between the Lines, with their uſual Cries of Allah, Allah, which is a calling upon the Name of God: In this Paſſage many of them fell, and many were mortally wounded, ſo that the Roads, to the very Save, were filled with dead Bodies; and on the other ſide thereof, the Grand Vizier, with many other principal Turkiſh Officers, ended their Days.

In this memorable Battle, which was the moſt Bloody of any that hath happened in ſeveral Ages, the Turks loſt in all upwards of 25000 Men, and amongſt them the Grand Vizier; what Officers were killed on both ſides, or wounded, appears in the following Liſt. The Turkiſh Fleet, bringing their Veſſels cloſe to the Shoar, and as near as they could could to their Army, landed 5000 Men out of it, which might have turned the Ballance, had they come timely in unto the Aſſiſtance of their Brethren; but finding the whole Army in Confuſion, and all the Field in diſorder, they retired with much Precipitation Aboard their Fleet.

It would be impoſſible to deſcribe all the Circumſtances, Turns, Changes, Paſſages, and Chances of this Battle, which was fought on both ſides with admirable Reſolution and Courage; for which thoſe of the Chriſtian Army who were ſlain, deſerve for ever to be Chronicled in Hiſtory; and thoſe who ſurvive, are worthy of a laſting Fame, and Immortal Glory.

Much is owing by all Chriſtendom to the Valour and Conduct of that Noble General Prince Lewis of Baden; as alſo to the Marſhal-General Count of Dunewaldt, to Count Souches, General of the Artillery; to Count Stirum, General of the Horſe; and to Lieutenant-General Barfus of the Brandenburg Troops, beſides all the Sergeants, Generals, and Officers, who behaved themſelves with that Bravery, Conduct, and Zeal in the Cauſe of Chriſtendom, and of the Empire, that they merit to be mentioned with all Honour and Reſpect, whenſoever this Battle comes to be recounted in theſe preſent Days, or in future Ages: And ſo bloody was this Battle, that the French King, to comfort the Turks, ordered his Ambaſſador to tell them, That ſuch another Victory would ruine the Emperor.

After the Battle the Imperialiſts became Maſters of all the Enemies Artillery; namely, 154 Pieces of Cannon of all ſorts, great and ſmall, great Numbers of Enſigns and Colours; and amongſt the reſt of the Standard of the Grand Vizier, with thoſe of the Paſha's, and of the whole Spoil and Plunder of the Field, with all the Camels, and Mules, and Beaſts of Burden belonging to the Camp, which amongſt the Turks are vaſtly numerous: Alſo 10000 Tents, 10 Waggons laden with Copper Money, found in the Vizier's Tent; in the Treaſurer's 54 Trunks of Copper, and 12 with Silver, and 24 Cheſts of Kaftans. Moreover all the Standards and Colours belonging to the Regiment of Bucquoy, taken the Day before by the Turks; 24 Enſigns, and four Horſe-Tails were ſent to Vienna, and amongſt them the Grand Vizier's Standard, which the Emperor ſent to the Pope.

1691. August.

The Loſs the Turks have had in this Action, appears irreparable; for about 10 or 12000 of their beſt Diſciplined, and Veterane Janiſaries being killed, they have not as yet been recovered to this very Year of 1694; the which is evident, for of all the Army they could make in that Year of Turks and Tartars, with Thouſands of raw, and ill compoſed Troops, conſiſting of Plow-Men, and Cow-Boys, they could not make up an Army of 50000 Men; which indeed is wonderful, and ſhows the ſtrange Cataſtrophies of this unſtable World; and deſerves our ſerious Contemplation of the Uncertainty of Humane Affairs? For whereas the Ottoman Empire, which hath been famed in paſt Ages for Multitudes and Swarms of Men, by which, over-powering their Enemies by Numbers, rather than by Valour, made all their Conqueſt from Baſora, as far as Buda, are now dwindled to a Condition, which many of our ſmaller Princes in Chriſtendom are able to equal.

All which we are to attribute to the Almighty Hand of God, who commiſerating the wretched Eſtate of Chriſtendom, at a time when the Victorious Arms of France were employed in ruining and laying waſte one end of it, the Turks had Invaded the other, and threatned an entire Deſolation of all Germany.

Sir WILLIAM HUSSEY's Reception, and Negotiations at Belgrade, dated the 30th of April 1691. To Chancellor Straatman.

‘AMET Paſſa of Dierbekir, and Seraskier in theſe Parts of the Save, has deſired me for the Common Good of the Poor Chriſtians hereabouts ſo much oppreſſed, to write to your Excellency, and interpoſe in their behalf the good Offices of His Majeſty of Great-Britain, my Maſter; which I the more readily perform, as being purſuant to the Orders of my King (equally a Friend to both Empires) to contribute all poſſible Means, and apply my beſt Endeavours to the removing the pernicious Effects of this ſo long and Bloody a War, and changing it into an honourable laſting Peace.

‘Your Excellency may be ſenſible, that beſides the Obligations of Chriſtian Charity, 'tis my Intereſt alſo to correſpond and cheriſh (by good Offices) that Confidence and Eſteem which they here expreſs for the King my Maſter, and therefore I doubt not but your Excellency will comply herewith, as far as is in your Power, and likewiſe ſollicit the Court for more ample and poſitive Orders, to which Charitable Work my Lord Pagett (His Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary at Vienna) will (I am ſure) be earneſtly aſſiſtant.

‘I intreat your Excellency alſo to ſend this Original by a Staffettee to his Lordſhip, that he may underſtand how well I have been received here, and give an Account thereof to the King my Maſter.

‘As ſoon as I entred into the States of the Ottoman Empire, I was met by the Beg, or Commandant of every Place, attended by the Militia, who furniſhed me with all Neceſſaries both for my Journey and Subſiſtence: At Peter Waradin I was Complemented by an Aga, ſent from the Seraskier; and at the Mouth of the Theyſſe, was met by many Barks, guarded by Janiſaries, who conducted me to Belgrade, where I was preſently Complemented by the principal Officers of the Seraskier's Court, who ſent his own Horſes to convey me and my Family to the Tents, which were pitch'd on the Shoar, and appointed to receive me.

‘The next Day I was received by the Seraskier in full Divan, compoſed of all the Principal Officers both Civil and Military; where when I had given Thanks for the Honours received, the Paſſa anſwered me, That ſuch were the Ancient Cuſtoms of the Ottoman Empire, which they were reſolved to obſerve,and aboliſh the Abuſes introduced by the late Grand Seignior, and his Prime Vizier Muſtapha. Then the Seraskier, with much earneſtneſs, did exaggerate the Unjuſt Oppreſſion which was practiſed by Chriſtians to thoſe of the ſame Faith, who Inhabited the Country called Syrmium, ſituate between the Drave, Save, and Danube, who were barbarouſly ſpoil'd of their Cloaths, robb'd of their Cattle, and obliged to pay exceſſive Impoſitions againſt all Laws of Humanity and a regulated Government; whereas on the contrary, their Sultan ſent Money to be diſtributed among the Poor Subjects, to buy them Cattle and Seed, thereby ſhewing himſelf a Father of the Miſerable, and not a Tyrant; and this Charity (continued he) which ought to be natural to you Chriſtians towards one another, need not hinder the Hoſtility of Soldiers when they meet and encounter, leaving the poor Country-Men in Peace, who labour only for the Publick Good, and the Service of that Prince whom God ſhall place over them. I anſwered with applauding ſuch Pious Maxims, and that I hoped ſo good Diſpoſitions would incline them more favourably to hearken to what I was to propoſe in the Name of my King, towards the ending this Bloody War between the two Empires; and that as to the Particulars he mentioned, I being a Stranger knew nothing of them. He then proceeded to charge Count Chizzola (Commandant of Eſſeck) to have deceived him on ſeveral Occaſions after his Word given; a Crime (ſays he) which will be puniſhed by God; and if the Charity of my Emperor towards wards the Poor Subjects and Countrymen had not reſtrained me, what wou'd have hindred me this Winter to have made Excurſions even to Buda? But all I ſhou'd have gained, wou'd have been only the Tears and Curſes of the Miſerable: I anſwer'd with commending the generous Clemency and Mercy of the preſent Government; and our Conference ended with the uſual Ceremonies of Coffee, Sherbet, and Perfumes.

‘In the Afternoon I was call'd for by the Seraskier to a Private Audience, at which only his Effendi, and my Secretary (who was inſtead of an Interpreter) were preſent: I repreſented to him, that this perillous Journey I had undertaken, and by a way ſo unuſual to Ambaſſadors from England, was a Mark of the high Friendſhip and Affection which the King my Maſter bore to the two Empires of Germany and Turkey, who reſenting ſenſibly the fatal Conſequences of ſo long and bloody a War, commanded me to paſs by Vienna, there to receive the Orders and Inſtructions of the Emperor of the Romans, towards the amicable ending of it, to which good Work ſhou'd not the Grand Sultan and His Miniſters likewiſe correſpond, it might be juſtly feared, that the Miſchiefs and Deſolations hereafter enſuing, wou'd call down Vengeance from God upon the Muſſelmen. The Seraskier applauding the King's Generous Deſign, took notice that there never yet was between England and the Ottoman Empire, either War or any alienation of Affection, but always perfect Friendſhip, which he beg'd God wou'd continue: He commended the Wiſdom of the preſent Vizier, his Humanity and Treatableneſs, and approved my Solicitous Earneſtneſs to continue my Voyage, leaving it to my Choice, either to go by Land or Water. I told him, I reſolved to go by Water as far as Ruſgiuk, a Days Journey below Nicopolis, and to Travel thence by Land: He again renew'd the Complaints made in the Divan, in behalf of the Poor Inhabitants of Syrmium, and preſs'd me to Write to your Excellency to forbid the Plundering of Villages, and Excurſions of the Heydukes, who behave themſelves more like Thieves than Soldiers; and that your Excellency wou'd order, that they who are Peaceable and Diſarm'd, may continue not only in Repoſe, but alſo be protected to the Benefit of that Prince to whom God ſhall give the Government. He aſſured me further, That whatſoever Expedient ſhall be propoſed by the Imperialiſts, towards the preventing ſuch Violences, he will readily agree to, and cauſe it to be rigorouſly obſerved; and in this ſo Chriſtian a Cauſe, intreated me to interpoſe the good Offices of my King. I do therefore beſeech your Excellency to Correſpond herein with Amet Paſſa, either by Letter, or by Deputies on both ſides, to meet on the Confines, and to be pleaſed to inform me of your Reſolution herein, by an open Letter ſent to the Seraskier, with whom I alſo leave a Copy of this, as I will likewiſe do with the Grand Vizier, not deſigning to expoſe the Confidence they have in my King to the Hazards of any Accidents which might prove equally prejudicial to both Empires.

‘I took this Opportunity to ſhew my ſelf equally Charitable towards the Poor Chriſtians taken in Orſova, and made Slaves (as was reported) after they had Capitulated to have ſafe Conduct into the Emperor's Territories. I was anſwer'd, That they had Surrendred themſelves with condition, That if Belgrade were loſt, they would be Priſoners of War, and that the Grand Vizier was not capable of violating the Publick Faith ſo ſhamefully. I demanded concerning ſome other Priſoners, recommended to me by their Friends; but was anſwer'd, That they were all the Grand Seignior's Captives, and without his expreſs Order they could not treat either for their Ranſom or Exchange: He told me, That all Officers were well treated, and kept without Irons in a Chamber apart, with their Servants, at the Expence of the Grand Seignior. I left 100 Ducats of Gold to be diſtributed by Capt. Runkel, to the Pooreſt of them, which was all the Service I could do them, and of which I intreat your Excellency to give their Friends an Account.

‘A Courier being diſpatched to Conſtantinople, I have had Permiſſion to Write to the Grand Vizier, and Sir William Trumbal, giving Information of my Arrival; I purpoſe ſuddenly to continue my Voyage with full intention to do all the Service I can to both Empires, in execution of the Commands of my King, in whoſe Name I continue to preſs (as deſired) your Excellency, that ſome Means may be found out to prevent the Rapines daily practiſed upon the Poor Country People.

‘The incloſed ſhort Letter for my Lord Pagett, I intreat your Excellency wou'd tranſmit to him, as alſo this Original, that his Lordſhip being ſufficiently informed, may better know what to ſollicite from the Emperor, and what to acquaint the King my Maſter. I am, Sir William Huſſey's Letters to the Lord Pagett at Vienna.

Adrianople, May 25. 1691.

My Lord,

I Sent a full Account of our Arrival at Belgrade, April 30. S. N. From thence we came by Water to Ruſtick, two Days lower than Nicopolis, and thence in eight Days Land-Journey hither; whence we advanced forwards two Days, but met there by my Secretary and Interpreter from Conſtantinople, with Letters and Advice from Sir William Trumbal, that the Vizier was upon departure, and ordered us to ſtay his Arrival at Adrianople. We returned back two Days paſt: I have been received and treated in all Places with ſingular marks of Reſpect and Honour, equal to any in the ſame Character. I ſend this upon Fortune to inform your Lordſhip of our Arrival. As to our Negotiation, I muſt attend the Audience before I can give you any Account, ſtill in ſuſpence. God be praiſed we are all well, and my Secretary I brought from Vienna. The Turks pretend to have a great Army, and deſign chiefly towards Tranſylvania. If this meets a quick conveyance, I beg your Lordſhip to acquaint my Lord Nottingham of my Arrival. I have wrote to the Dutch Ambaſſador for his Advice and Conſideration, in reſpect to me, and his Stay, or Journey hither, ſince I cannot be permitted to attend him at Conſtantinople. How I ſhall proceed to Conſtantinople, ſtay here, or follow the Campaign, your Lordſhip muſt expect hereafter. My Secretary has added a few Lines, I incloſe to your Lordſhip. My humble Duty to all the Miniſters. Nothing ſhall be wanting which is in my Power. I am, &c.

Adrianople, June $\frac{3}{13}$. 1691.

My Lord,

T*HE Vizier made his Entrance firſt, with no great Train, nor in the Publick Streets, but paſt direct to his Tents; half an Hours diſtance, the Grand Seignior enter'd, on the 29th, with a fair ſhew to us, but to others very ſhort of former Splendour; he was in a Litter, one of his Court with him at the other end. The Vizier ſent his* [illegible] Chewſe, (the 2d in that Office) with eight more, the ſame Afternoon he entred, that he being in haſte, deſired me to be ready to come to Audience next Day. We were ſurprized, becauſe our Druggermen in good Manners thinking that Day due to his Repoſe, did not deſign to have carried my Complement, and to deſire leave of Audience till next Day; but I ſent them immediately to perform my Duty in congratulating his Excellency's Arrival, and to concert Matters for next Day, alſo to deſire it might be private, in regard I was without Equipage ſuitable to a Publick Appearance. The Chewſe Baſſa told the Vizier, in regard I had no great Retinue, his Perſonal Attendance might be wav'd, but he commanded him to come in Perſon: Accordingly on Monday Morning June $\frac{1}{11}$ about nine a Clock, we ſet forward in the beſt Accoutrements we could: I was in my Embroider'd Scarlet Coat, ſix Engliſh Footmen in my Engliſh Lac'd Liveries, ſix in red Liveries al modo Turcheſco, 18 Chewſes in Van, two Druggermen after them, then my ſelf with the Chewſe-Baſſa on my right Hand, and about 10 Gentlemen on Horſeback following me, ſome of my own Company, others that came from Belgrade with me, and ſeveral other Turks, that we made a large Train, and drew Crouds of Spectators. In half an Hour we arrived at his Camp; conducted into his Tents, we paſt one very large one, and through that into another; his Officers were all drawn in Lines; they brought me a Stool to ſit on, and immediately the Vizier enter'd, ſat down upon a Bed carpeted; his People made a Prayer at his Entrance; he bid me welcome, and I acquainted him with my Commiſſion, delivering him the King's Letter and its Tranſlation; after this was over, the Tent full of Officers, and his two Sons ſtanding on his right Hand, I ask'd his Excellencies leave now, or when he pleas'd, to ſpeak in private; he told me, after Sherbet, Coffee, &c. the Turkiſh Treat, the Company ſhould retire, and he being in haſte deſired it now, when we diſcourſed according to the Relation I ſend incloſed Veıbatim, as nigh as we four could remember, and to which we all put our Hands, viz. my ſelf, Senior Marſigli, Mr. Coke Secretary, and Senior Antonio Perrone chief Interpreter; there remained none in the Room but the Vizier, as before mentioned, and one Druggerman more. At Departure I was Veſted and 11 more, all that I had of Quality, and conducted back with ſome Reſpect. His Excellency was very courteous, and we had all the Marks poſſible of a very kind Reception, with as much Honour as any in the Character.

My Lord, The Point reſolved was, That his Excellency would not own the Turks at Vienna under any Publick Character, would neither write to them, or ſend any other; When I told him the Emperor had accepted the King of England and States of Holland to aſſiſt, and was well diſpoſed to a Peace, and if his Excellency did incline alſo, I hop'd there 1691. might be a happy iſſue; he reply'd, He was for Peace, but upon Terms of Honour, and if I had Power to treat, would call for Pen. I reply'd, It could not be expected I ſhould have full Authority before his Excellency's Mind had been known, and that Vienna was thought the propereſt Place, in regard there had been ſome Overtures already made, and Repreſentatives of all Parties preſent: That to arrive at an end, there muſt be a beginning; and that, if his Excellency permitted, I would ſend my Secretary to Vienna, to perſwade His Imperial Majeſty to impower his General, that ſo his Excellency being now upon departure for the Confines, they might treat there; and if his Excellency judged my Perſon and Preſence neceſſary to ſo bleſs'd a Work, I would wait upon his Excellency, and attend his Camp: He told me there was no occaſion I ſhould take ſo much trouble; but ſaid, Send your Secretary to Vienna, that the Emperor ſend a Perſon according to cuſtom, fully impowred to treat here, or elſe that we are as we are: And to this he added two or three Lines: To this there's no Reply.

My Lord, I ſpoke ſeveral times that the Commiſſion was to me and the Dutch Embaſſador equally; which I did, and now repeat to avoid all Thoughts, becauſe the Vizier when he ſpoke, ſaid, Let the Emperor ſend his Commiſſion to me, not naming the Dutch, and to this no Reply: 'Tis not an Ambition I deſire, nor ſhall I leſs communicate with the Dutch Embaſſador, whoſe Counſel I ſhall always deſire.

My Lord, I am very glad I have the Opportunity of returning Count Marſigli, who will ſupply by Parole what I may omit, or what is not convenient for a Letter, and that your Lordſhip will tranſmit it to my Lord Nottingham: 'Tis abſolutely neceſſary that the Emperor reſolves that he adjuſts the Points with the Allies, or treats without them, which the Turks would imbrace greedily; but ſince His Imperial Majeſty will not relinquiſh them, nor they able to defend, but muſt diſgorge, and be ſwallowed up if alone; 'tis I think very reaſonable that the Emperor requires them to poſitive and convenient Conditions. The Turks Nature is to do at once, and therefore conſidering well there muſt be a Power intruſted. I ſhall be very ready to give all the poſſible aſſiſtance I can, and if required, readily paſs to the Camp, or Confines, for obtaining ſo pious a Work, grateful, and moſt heartily wiſh'd by the poor Subjects of both Empires; and I hope I ſhall have the better fortune for the many hearty Prayers and good Wiſhes I have gain'd on both ſides. God Almighty proſper and direct you to compleat it. What you ſend to me, pray let be clear, to avoid Replies, and that Count Marſigli may be perfectly inſtructed, who knowing the poſture and humour of Affairs here, will, I hope, expedite their Counſels, and reſolve them. The Juncture ſeems very favourable, and the Allies, I believe, very preſſing; this Opportunity loſt, God knows the Conſequences. Senior Marſigli will tell your Lordſhip ſome things I have charged to his Memory, and deſire your Lordſhip to ſend to my Lord Nottingham. My haſte and length of Letters will not permit me to uſe Cypher at preſent: I have preſumed to write to His Imperial Majeſty, and moſt of the Miniſters, to acknowledge my Obligations and readineſs in their Intereſts, which I humbly beg of your Lordſhip to deliver; and if the Bearer, who goes directly to your Lordſhip be preſent, he can ſupply all that is deficient. God Almighty proſper your good Offices. I am with all Reſpect,

My LORD,

Your Lordſhip's Moſt Devoted Servant,

William Huſſey.

In the laſt Month of July we left the two Ambaſſadors Sir William Huſſey, and the Heer Collier at Adrianople, where having received the News of the total Defeat of the Turkiſh Army, with the Death of the Grand Vizier, a ſtop was given to their preſent Motion towards Belgrade, with intention to proceed with the New Vizier thither, and there to reaſſume the Mediation towards a Peace, for which the preſent Conjuncture ſeemed very ſeaſonable.

A New Vizier Ali Paſha.

The New Vizier was called Ali Paſha, had been Paſha of Scio, and Kahya, or Deputy to Kupriogli, the Grand Vizier now ſlain in Battle: But whilſt they were meditating of theſe Matters, and preparing to accompany the New Vizier in 10 or 12 Days, as was given out, unto Belgrade; it pleaſed God, that the Engliſh Ambaſſador, Sir William Huſſey, fell Sick, and Died the 14th of September after 15 Days of Sickneſs at Adrianople: He was a Perſon much lamented by all for his excellent Qualities and Experience in the Affairs of Turkey, of which he had learned much at Aleppo, and there gained a good Eſtate, with which returning for England, he Married the Daughter of that Worthy Perſon and Citizen, Sir John Buckworth; after whoſe Death he was choſen by the Levant Company, to be their Deputy Governour, in the Place of Sir John Buckworth, his Father-in-Law Deceaſed; in which Office having acquitted himſelf for ſome Years with much Honour, he was afterwards ſent by

The Death of the Lord Ambaſſador Sir William Huſſey.

King

1691. King William and Queen Mary, to ſucceed Sir William Trumball in that Embaſſy: His Excellent Lady reſolving to accompany him in all his Travels and Dangers, patiently bore, and ſuſtained all the Fatigues and Inconveniencies of a Journey over Land; which was never performed before by any other Engliſh Ambaſſador deſigned for Turkey; who were always Tranſported either in the Companies own Ships, or the King's Men of War, by Sea: But now things had changed their Face, and as it was dangerous, whilſt the French were Maſters of the Mediterranean Seas, to expoſe thoſe rich Ships to the danger of the Enemy; ſo it was thought moſt convenient to haſten the Journey of the Ambaſſador by Land; and that taking the Imperial Court at Vienna in his way, he might there receive ſuch Inſtructions from the Emperor and his Allies, the King of Poland, and the State of Venice, as were moſt proper at that time in order to a Peace with the Sultan, of which King William of England, and the States of Holland offered themſelves, by their Ambaſſadors, to be the Mediators: Upon this Occaſion Sir William Huſſey, with his Lady, remained ſome Months at Vienna, before he could procure his Diſpatches; and then the Winter coming on, when the Danube was frozen up, he departed not from Vienna, until the Spring, and arrived, as we have related before in the Month of June of this preſent Year. And whereas the Mediation of this Peace was of high Concernment to all Europe, we ſhall here inſert the Methods, Rules, and Inſtructions, which the Emperor and his Allies gave to the Engliſh Ambaſſador in this Matter.

The firſt Paper given to Sir William Huſſey at Vienna, was dated March 1691, and called, Informations for the Engliſh Ambaſſador, deſigned to be Mediator of the Peace at Conſtantinople, and which may ſerve to obviate the Objections which the Turks may make.

Annotata ad informationem à Dominis Ablegatis Turcicis ultimo exhibitam, pro informatione Excellentiſſimi Domini Legati Anglici, ad Portam Ottomanicam proficiſcentis.

MISSIS omnibus iis, quæ Negotii tractandi ſubſtantiam alterare non videntur, ad ea tantùm reſpondere viſum fuit, quæ prædictam ſubſtantiam tangunt, vel contra Legationis jura admiſſa prætenduntur à præfatis Portæ Ottomanicæ Dominis Ablegatis ad concludendam pacem huc Miſſis. 1691.

‘ Quorum in ordine primùm occurrit, quod Domini Ablegati Turcici in præterita ſua informatione de Colloquio inter Eminentiſſimum Dominum Cardinalem à Kollonitſch & illos in Cœnobio PP. Auguſtinianorum extra urbem inſtituto, commemorant, in quo parum refert an Dominus Cardinalis à Kollonitſch illos Ablegatos Turcicos, an verò hi præfatum Dominum Cardinalem à Kollonitſch ad Colloquium illud invitaverint, in eo tamen ſubſtantia poſita eſt, quod nunc aſſeverent Domini Ablegati Turcici propoſitionem quam ſe Domino Cardinali à Kollonitſch tùm feciſſe fatentur, non ex mandato Portæ, verùm propriâ mentis occurrentiâ nunc demùm ſe feciſſe profiteantur; etenim ſæpe ſæpius per literas interrogati, num ſuper illa tractare ſufficienter inſtructi ſint? Non tantùm ſe, adæquatâ Plenipotentia proviſos conſtanter reſponſoriis ſuis affirmarunt, verùm etiam patefactam ſibi diffidentiam Miniſterii Cæſarei ſuper hac qualitate conceptam ſæpius repetitam ægrè demum ferre cœperunt & quæſtiuncularum inutilium nomine appellantes moram principali negotio per hæc fieri queſti ſunt, quod ſi ab initio ſtatim ejuſmodi propoſitionem Domino Cardinali factam non ex Portæ mandato, ſed ſuâ tantùm privatâ mente originem ducere profeſſi fuiſſent, Miniſterium Cæſareum vel ejuſmodi propoſitionem planè ab initio non recepiſſet, vel de modo legis timandæ dictæ propoſitionis dictis Dominis Ablegatis temperamentum aliquod idoneum ſuggeſſiſſet, quam circumſtantiam cùm tacuiſſent & tacere perſeveraſſent Domini Ablegati Turcici, eam nunc demùm profeſſi, ſatis conſtat, unde mora, & illorum detentionis cauſa proceſſerit, & cui conſequenter imputanda ſit, nam ſæpius per literas interrogati, num puncta propoſita Domino Cardinali à Kollonitſch & ipſis copialiter tranſmiſſa menti ſuæ conformia eſſent? Affirmative reſponderunt, quamvis non ſuper iis, quæ Domino Cardinali à Kollonitſch propoſita fuerunt, aliquis Tractationis motus à Cæſareo Miniſterio oſtenſus, ſed tùm demùm fides rei adhibita fuit, cum hanc ob cauſam ad ſe miſſo Secretario intimo Domino à Werdenburg puncta Domino Cardinali à Kollonitſch propoſita non tantum confirmaſſent, verùm & Turcico idiomate exhibuiſſent, & Latine ad calamum dictaſſent, tùm demùm animus his adjectis, & deſuper 1691. ‘cum Dominis fœderatis Sereniſſimo nimirum Poloniæ Rege, & Sereniſſima Republica Veneta communicari cœpit: Quorum ſenſa, ſi priùs delata fuiſſent, prius etiam formaliter cum illis Dominis Ablegatis Turcicis ex parte Cæſarei Miniſterii, tractari cœpiſſet, eo vel maxime fundamento, quod Domini Ablegati Turcici, poſtquam ipſis clarè ſcriptum fuiſſet, quod Sacra Cæſarea & Regia Majeſtas literis D. Fœderatorum ſuorum de eo monita fuerit, quod Ablegatus Chami Tartarorum ad Sereniſſimum Regem Poloniæ miſſus clare edixerit, Viennenſibus Ablegatis Turcicis, mutato ſupremo Viſirio nullam concludendæ pacis Plenipotentiam ſupereſſe, ii reſponderint, non ſe à Supremo Viſirio ad proponendam pacem, verùm ipſomet regnante Turcarum Imperatore huc miſſos, nec Plenipotentiam ſuam à Supremo Viſirio, ſed ab ipſomet regnante Imperatore propria manu ſubſcriptum attuliſſe & exhibuiſſe. Cui proinde vel fides adhibenda vel propoſitiones ultimas ab iis exhibitas acceptandas non fuiſſe; cùm verò his propoſitis nulli tractantium partium conveniens videretur, culpam non ſubſecutæ Pacis ſponte vel levi de cauſa in ſe ſuſcipere, placuit confidentiam in ſupra qualificatam Plenipotentiam Imperatoris Ottomanici potiùs oſtendere, quàm leviter almum hoc negotium abrumpere; Communicatis igitur, ut dictum, exhibitæ propoſitionis capitulis præfatis Sereniſſimis Confœderatis hactenus eorum ſenſa deſuper expectata fuerunt, nulla ex eorum protracta dilatione in Cæſareum Miniſterium reſultante culpâ protractæ Pacis aut Tractatuum, cùm ſæpe ſæpius dictum & ſcriptum fuerit Dominis Ablegatis Turcicis, Sacram Cæſaream Regiamque Majeſtatem ſine Fœderatorum ſuorum ſatisfactione almam pacem nec concludere velle nec poſſe, quare cùm ſæpius memorati Sereniſſimi Fœderati ſenſus ſuos ſuper propoſitis ex propinquo oſtendere cœpiſſent, huc Pottendorffium Domini Ablegati revocati fuerunt, quod verò nunc demùm ſe facultate tractandi carere profiteantur & exinde Tractationem Pacis proſequi non valeant, certè nullatonùs Miniſterio Cæſareo, verùm Dominis Ablegatis Turcicis ea, quæ ab initio candidè proferre debuiſſent, ſtudio tacentibus imputandum venit.

cuſtodiis undequaque circumſepti, Cardinalis à Goeſs ſerò dimiſſus, Reninger autem retentus, & poſt cladem ad S. Gotthardum acceptam ex abrupto Pacis componendæ inſtrumentum fuit, Hoffman naturali morte apud eos obiit, Comes à Caprara ad muros Viennæ devectus, & bene cuſtoditus dimiſſus quidem fuit, ſed Kuniz retentus qui pari honore habitus repulſis ab Obſidione Turcis ultrò è Caſtris ad Urbem ſe recipiens proſiliit; alia ſunt Legationum jura tempore Pacis, alia belli tempore, quorum differentia, ut per ſe nota eſt, ita longa deductione non eget, nec hac in parte Dominos Ablegatos Turcicos aliquid recipere, quod cum Miniſtris Cæſareis obſervatum non fuiſſet, probare poterunt, qui magno honore habiti & largè alimentati ultra centum millia florenorum ærario Cæſareo abſumpſerunt, nullo ſane alio, quam reſtrictæ liberæ converſationis, quatenus tamen id jure Gentium & licitum & neceſſarium eſt, incommodo affecti.

Ottomanicæ Portæ Ablegatorum pro Informatione Aulæ Cæſareæ Domino Werdenburgio facta Declaratio, ‘ SIVE ex literis Dominorum Cæſareorum Miniſtrorum Nobis tùm in Suburbio Commaromii morantibus, tùm Pottendorffium ingreſſis traditis, ſive aliqua ex parte ex diſcurſu Dominationis Tuæ ita conjicimus, cum Dominis Cæſareis Miniſtris Tractatus cum fulgida Porta reaſſumendi quædam inclinatio oborta ſit, ut à ſpecioſa & honeſta ratione exordium ducatur quibuſdam tanquam motivis fuiſſe perſuaſos. Verum enimverò, cùm rem planè cognitam à Nobis aliter ſe habere deprehendamus, ſinceritatis, quam erga utrumque Imperium profitemur, intereſſe duximus, ut ſolidè declaratis indubiis, quæ ad præaſſumptas ſuppoſitiones pertinent, circumſtantiis, illiſque penitus à DD. Miniſtris perceptis, nec ſibi, nec Nobis negotium faceſſat obſcuritas. Etſi autem ex iſta noſtra expoſitione aliqua diſplicentia ſuboriri poſſe ſuſpiciatur, nos tamen coram DEO teſtamur, ex mera integritate illam promanaſſe & ſanè ſi penitius introſpiciatur, Candorem noſtrum laudatum iri ſperatur.

Præterea à moderno Supremo Vizirio Domino Noſtro nullas ad nos vel ex duabus Syllabis literas perveniſſe & Noſtræ cuſtodiæ cauſâ omninò reali rerum notitiâ nos carere, præterito etiam anno conteſtati, & poſthac nulla Nos aliquid dicendi audacia pollere, ingenuè faſſi fueramus; ab illo verò tempore, cùm jam fermè annuum tempus elabitur, prædictis duabus de cauſis, multo minus aliquod verbulum Nobis ſuppetit, quinimò etſi Noſtram Cognitionem nullius rei notitia tetigit, tamen quod à celeberrimi Crimenſis Chani Ablegato in Polonia de Nobis prolatum eſt, ab ipſis Dominis Miniſtris fuerat Nobis ſignificatum, quid plura? Sicuti cuſtoditi ſumus, ita à tribus annis rerum omnium & Caſuum notitiâ ſumus orbati, quæ uti ſincere relata ſi ab Aula Cæſarea penſitentur, veritati omnino congruere deprehendentur.

‘ Ecquis ex Miniſtris Cæſareis receptus reſponſoriis literis ad integrum annum detentus fuit? Aut ſolutis tractatibus nullum ulteriùs expetens aut expectans reſponſum è via retractus eſt? Aut cuſtodiæ & detentionis tot loca commutavit? Aut à Servis Portæ enormibus verbis fuit compellatus & obtrectatus? Ottomanica Porta modone promicavit? An non Cæſarei Legati illam frequentarunt? Annon ultro ſubſiſtentiam ibi ſuam protexêre, & altero mortuo nonne alter ſubſecutus eſt, uti Cæſareæ Aulæ prout placuit, & ei è re fuit, ita ex ſuomet inſtinctu agebat, quibus autem rebus Porta nequaquam aſſuevit, qui ad eas invita compellitur? Negotia non aſperitate, ſed reciproca moderatione & mutuâ ſatisfactione ad optatum finem deducuntur, adſtitêre ne aliquando Reſidentes Ottomanici Cæſareæ Aulæ, aut Legati ad plures annos detentíne unquam fuêre? Nunquam à Veteri ſibi calcata ſemita deflecti Portam fieri poterit, ut nova in præſens norma inſtituatur; Eſto nobiſcum cùm in poteſtate aliena ſimus, ita ſit actum, tamen Portæ incumbit ſuam ſervare conſuetudinem, & ab ea ne latum unguem diſcedet, id tantum fiet, ut Nobis ſupervacanea afflictio, cum Porta verò acerbitas inimicitiæ magis augeſcat: Id etiam motivum, quod Aulæ Cæſareæ ſuggeſtum eſt, videant DD. Miniſtri, cujuſnam vigoris ſit.

‘Hæc itaque eſt cauſa, quod neutiquam ad nos reſpexerit, verùm ſi ulterius interrogabitur, & cur expreſſe non revocaverit, iſtius etiam dubii ſolutio clara eſt, cùm in literis Imperialibus ad Cæſaream Majeſtatem Scriptum fuerit, ut quam citiſſimeremittamur, & pro eodem reditu Noſtro in prioribus & poſterioribus ante ſupremam Imperii adminiſtrationem functi Primi Vizirii literis inculcatum ſit, Imperialibus ne literis aliquis reſpectus adhibitus? An Vizirianis literis aſſenſus præſtitus? Legationi iſti æſtimatio tributa? An almæ Pacis merito aliquod temperamentum allatum fuit? An non ſpatio fermè trium annorum Unici tantùm Curſoris Expeditio conceſſa eſt? Et ipſemet diuturnam paſſus detentionem ab itinere reprehenſus fuit; Cùm ita revera res iſta ſe habeat, qui Nos principales Noſtri ſive per literas ſive per expreſſos inviſitant? Teſtamur ſincere miſertos infimi cujuſque nullum ex ſuo famulitio ad nos miſiſſe: Certè ſi ex Nobis liquidum & candidum reſponſum expetatur, id eſt, ſi hic ad decennium ita detinebimur, nemo ad Nos accedet, hæccine quæ pronunciamus, plane veriſſima ſunt, quæſumus ne his vocibus quiſpiam offendatur, ut expreſſi ultrò citroque permeent, veterem inter Gentes conſuetudinem reciprocè literas Commeatus obſervari religioſè, cuicunque liberam permitti voluntatem, fontem, qui à DEO ad extinguendum belli ignem erectus eſt, apertum eſſe neceſſum eſt; quouſque verò his in deſpectu habitis Nos in iſto eodem ſtatu perſeveramus, ſanè nihil ad bonum commune peragetur, ſin verò in Aula Cæſarea ambigitur, an Noſtram hîc moram fulgida Porta velit, dimiſſio Noſtra poſthac fulgidæ Portæ diſpoſitioni remittatur & Curſoris in Portam, expeditio nobis concedatur: Favente DEO Potentiſſimi Imperatoris Noſtri quidcunque in animo eſt, nobis revelabitur; ſperamus tamen fidem adhibendam eſſe noſtræ conteſtationi, ita ut iteratis Interrogationibus non opus ſit, ac proinde nos neutiquam detinendos, & ſi quid præterea tempori præſenti conſentaneum & Imperii Ottomanici Magnitudini conſonum proponendum videbitur, ſi placet, eo quoque pronunciato, Nos quamprimùm eſſe remittendos: Fortè poſtquam nos ſalvi & incolumes & contenti redierimus, almus aliquis aditus aperietur, & utrinque permanentibus Miniſtris opportuno momento ac loco ex mutua propenſione & ſatisfactione, ſi ita Divinæ Majeſtati placuerit, ſacroſanctus Pacis Tractatus coaleſcat, ex vi certè nullum emolumentum emanabit, hæc ex ſinceritate & integritate Noſtri erga utrumque Imperium promanant, teſtis eſt DEUS, nullam ſubeſſe hypocriſin, hæccine juxta inter Germanum & Ottomanicum Imperium intercedentes res in quonam ſtatu reperiantur facile ab Aula Cæſarea deprehendetur, ne ſe incaſſum defatiget.

Treaties of Peace are laid aſide.

The Engliſh Ambaſſador being Dead, an end was put to the Treaty, and all thoughts of Peace were laid aſide, on one ſide and the other; for after the Battle of Salankement the Circumſtances of things were changed, and there was a neceſſity of conſulting again the Emperor and his Allies, before any farther Meaſures could be taken on the former Inſtructions. In like manner the Turks were in great Confuſion and Diſtraction, not knowing which way to turn themſelves; ſometimes it was thought neceſſary, that the Grand Vizier ſhould haſten to Belgrade to take the Care and Command of the ſcattered Troops, which were now at a loſs for want of a Chief Head, and a Place whereunto to reſort, and take refuge: Beſides the Preſence of a Vizier was eſteemed of great encouragement to the broken Army, and the only means to retard the Flight of thoſe who were ready to break up their Camp, and betake themſelves to their own Habitations.

The Army at Belgrade diſperſed.

Whilſt the Vizier was conſulting hereof News came that the Army at Belgrade was all, or for the moſt part diſperſed; that the ſmall Number of the Janiſaries which ſurvived, were reſolved not to remain longer at Belgrade, but were already on their March towards Adrianople, in a Naked and Poor Condition, without Money, or Cloaths. In like manner it was reported, That the Spahees, who lately went to the War with a good Epuipage, and well Mounted on Horſe-back, were now returning back on Foot, miſerably Deſpoiled, and Poor, without Money, Horſe, or Arms: Many of them who had Eſcaped with their Horſes and Arms, were paſſing the Dardanelli into Aſia, and thence travelling into their own Countries, perhaps as far as Iconium, Aleppo, Damaſcus, or ſome other more remote Countries; other Spahees, who had neither Horſes, or Arms, were marching towards Adrianople, there to demand the Donative, which hath always been given by a New Sultan at his firſt Inauguration: This Pretenſion of the Soldiery, which amounted unto more than a Million, ſtroke great Terrour into the Minds of the Chief Officers; for the Exchequer being wholly empty, and the Soldiery in the utmoſt Extremity, and armed with Rage and Deſpair, no Man knew what theſe Miſeries might produce; and the Soldiers approaching every Day nearer and nearer, all People were affected with the ſame Conſternation, as if the Germans, and the worſt of Enemies had been at their Gates.

In few Days after, the Aga of the Janiſaries, with the ſmall remainder of his Janiſaries arriving at Adrianople, cauſed the Grand Vizier, the Mufti, Kadileſchers, (who are the Lords Chief Juſtices) together with the Prime Officers of the ſeveral Ogiacks to be convened, and amongſt themſelves they held a long Conference.

A Conſultation held at Adrianople.

At which they concluded upon ſeveral Particulars.

Firſt, It was reſolved to Confirm, and Maintain Sultan Achmet upon the Throne; it being eſteemed a thing unworthy of the Grandeur, and Wiſdom of the Sublime Port to change ſo ſuddenly, and frequently, the Perſon of their Sultans.

Secondly, It was reſolved, That the Grand Seignior ſhould Winter that Year at Adrianople.

Thirdly, That the Mint ſhould diligently Work Day and Night, to make Silver Money for Payment of the Soldiery.

And Laſtly, It was reſolved, that (coſt what it would) Great Waradin was to be Succoured and Relieved.

The which Reſolutions, eſpecially that about Coyning Money for Payment of the Soldiery, gave a ſtop to their Mutinies, and Inſurrections, which were daily feared: But what more ſenſibly conſummated all the Miſeries of the Turks, was the want of Bread, as well as of Money; there having never been known in thoſe Countries ſo great a Dearth of Bread, as alſo of all ſorts of other Proviſions, as at that time, which joyned to all theſe Misfortunes, farther News was brought, That there had been another Grievous Earthquake at Smyrna: And that an Expreſs was come out of Aſia, That all that Country was over-run, with Robbers, and Murderers, who were aſſembled in a Body near Sebaſte, the Ancient Neſt, and Nurſery of Rebellion.

The Miſeries amongſt the Turks.

Novemb. The French Ambaſſa[illegible] encourages the Turks.

In the mean time the French Ambaſſador laboured by all means poſſible, to give Heart, and Courage to the Turks, to continue the War; aſſuring them, That his King would the next Campaign go himſelf in Perſon to the War; and continue the ſame, as well in Winter, as in Summer, which would make ſuch a Diverſion in the Empire, as that the Emperor ſhould not be able to make Head, nor ſo much as look the Ottoman Army in the Face. Notwithſtanding all which Aſſurances of the French Ambaſſador, and Promiſes to furniſh the Turkiſh Army with 30 able Ingineers; the People, or Rabble, would give little or no Credence to all his Engagements, and Aſſurances; and ſcarce could the Great Men in the Government, preſerve him from the Violence of the Soldiery and People.

He ſcarcely eſcapes the People.

After the firſt Conference held, as we have ſaid, by the Prime Officers; another was called, at which, the Reſolution to continue the War, was confirmed by all there preſent, except two Perſons only; namely, the Kadileſcher of Rumelia, and the Chaimacam of Conſtantinople, who diſſented from the others, being of an Opinion that a Peace was to be made by reaſon that the War could not longer be Maintain'd; howſoever the major Party carrying it to the contrary, Commands were ſent by an Expreſs into Albania, to raiſe Forces in that Country; it being agreed on all Hands that they were the beſt Soldiers in the Empire, and had done extraordinary Service in the laſt Battle.

Counſels held by the Prime Officers.

In like manner at this Congreſs great were the Complaints againſt Murad Ghirei Han, who commanded the Forces of Tartary before Vienna, and ſhamefully ran away; the which being proved againſt him, the Council choſe another called Seffa Ghirei, eſteemed a good Soldier, and a Valiant Man, who was then at Jamboli, not far diſtant from Adrianople; and upon this Election, he was immediately diſpatched away to take Poſſeſſion of his Government; for the Grand Seignior hath a Power to Depoſe, and Set up any Prince of the Crim Tartar, provided he continues him in the right Line of Sultan Galga: And for the Depoſed Tartar to avoid all Diſturbances and Conteſts, he was exiled together with his Son into the Iſland of Rhodes; and alſo Battir Aga, who was the Chief Miniſter, and General of the Depoſed Tartar, was Baniſhed into the Iſland of Lemnos, ſituate in the Archipelago.

Complaints againſt the Tartars.

And againſt other Paſha's of the Army.

After which divers Paſha's, and Officers of the Army, were called to this Congreſs, by whom ſeveral Complaints were made and exhibited againſt certain Captains, and Soldiers of the Army, who in the laſt Battle tle had ill behaved themſelves and Cowardly betook themſelves to flight. In which Accuſations, ſingle Allegations were ſufficient to Convict any Man; and upon the ſole Teſtimony of one Perſon, many were proſcribed, and in the Night privately without Noiſe, were ſtrangled, and in the Morning found Dead in their Beds; and amongſt the reſt was the Kahya of the late Deceaſed Vizier, put to Death at Belgrade, upon a Suggeſtion, that ſo ſoon as he had ſeen his Maſter Wounded, he betook himſelf to flight, and was followed by all the Pages of the Court, who were well Mounted, and Armed, and might have done great Service had they not followed the Ignominious and Baſe Example of their Maſter. The like Fate attended the Spahilar-Agaſee, or General of the Horſe, who was ſaid to have been the firſt to turn his Back on the Enemy. And at Adrianople three other Paſha's were put to Death, for the ſame Crime, or Default.

Are Puniſhed:

After theſe Executions done, the General of the Janiſaries was Named for not behaving himſelf well; but becauſe there are ſome Points of reſpect reſerved for the Order of Janiſaries, he was only diſmiſſed from his Government, and with a good Grace ſent to be Paſha of Gaza, the meaneſt Paſhaluck in the whole Empire; and this would have been a Favour, had they not ſent an Executioner after him, and in his way taken off his Head, as is the uſual Cuſtom amongſt the Turks; with ſuch Orders and Methods as theſe, the Turks reaſſumed ſomething of their Courage; diſpatching without delay Commands for Liſting and Enrolling Janiſaries, and other Orders of Militia, as alſo Timariots, Zaims, Segmen and others; and that they would augment their Numbers, as far as to 100000 Men, or at leaſt to the ſame degree, as they were the laſt Year.

But before we proceed farther on the Turkiſh ſide, we muſt look a little back, and ſee what the Germans are doing after ſo Signal a Victory.

Auguſt.

The 20th of this Month of Auguſt being the next Day after the Battle, ſome Parties of Hungarians, and Raſcians were commanded to Purſue the Enemy in their Flight, which they did with ſuch Expedition, that they brought back with them, many of the Fugitives, diſperſed, and ſtragling thro' Private Ways, and unknown Paths; and reported, That the whole Turkiſh Army were Flying in the greateſt Confuſion imaginable; and that a great part of them had already paſſed the Save, and had broken all the Bridges behind them; and that great Numbers of Dead Bodies, were found on the Roads, and covered the Ground for ſome Diſtance from the Camp: For which great Victory Te Deum was ſang on the 21ſt, with a Triple Diſcharge of all the Guns; as well of thoſe which were taken from the Turks; as thoſe belonging to the Chriſtian Army: And here on the 22th the Chriſtian Army repoſed, and reſted it ſelf in the Field of Battle.

The Turks purſued by the Raſcians.

Te Deum ſung.

In the mean time before the News of the Victory, Colonel Mackeri, Governour of Verovitza, with a Party of 1600 Men, attacked the Caſtle of Velicko, and having thrown ſome Bombs into it, it was forced to Surrender at Diſcretion, having had about 300 Men Killed, and not above 60 left Alive; the Booty was not great, unleſs it were the Releaſement of Chriſtian Priſoners, of which 300 obtained their Liberty.

The firſt Motion the Army made from the Field of Battle, was to Carlowitz, where the Duke of Holſtein was Buried. The next Day, being the 25th, they marched to Peter Warudin, where the Dukes of Ahremberg, and Arſchot, the General Souches; together with ſeveral other Officers, Died of their Wounds, the great Heats having contributed much to their Deaths.

On the 30th, a General Council of War was held in the Imperial Army; at which it was reſolved, That the Duke of Croy, Field-Marſhal, with the Generals Saurau, and Hoffkirchen, and five Regiments of Horſe, and as many of Foot; beſides Raſcians and Hungarians, ſhould March towards Eſſeck to cover that Country, and Paſs, and accordingly they began their March on the laſt of the Month, whilſt Prince Lewis of Baden remained in the Camp to ſecure, and cover them in the Rear.

A Reſolution at a Council of War.

Of all which Matters the News being ſent to Vienna, both as to the Victory, and the Methods taken after it, we may imagine that all the Imperial Court, as well as all Parts of Chriſtendom, were filled with an extraordinary Joy for ſo ſignal a Victory; and as the Emperor ſent his Gracious Encouragements to all the Officers; ſo more eſpecially to the General Officers, declaring Prince Lewis of Baden, Lieutenant-General of the Imperial Army in Hungary; where whilſt theſe things were agitating, the News came of the Victory, which King William of England had gained at the Boyne in Ireland, which ſerved to augment the Triumphs with another triple Diſcharge of all the Cannon in the Army.

Pr. Lewis made Lieutenant-General.

The Winter drawing near, the greateſt part of the Turkiſh Militia, being under great Diſcouragements, and having a long Journey Home, thought fit to leave the Camp: So did the Tartars, Plundering all in their way, ſo did the Arnouts, and Albanians, and all the Soldiers whoſe Towns, and Houſes were not at a far diſtance; ſo likewiſe the Spahee's ſtole privately away, and the Aſiatick Horſe made towards the Dardanelli, where they paſſed into Aſia; and in this manner did all the Forces diſperſe, that ſcarce any appearance remained of an Army, or a Camp; and thoſe few who kept to their Colours, were poſſeſſed with great Conſternation upon the News that the Poles had actually Invaded Walachia, and brought great Deſtruction, and Ruine upon that Province.

The Weather beginning now to be Cold and Wet, much incommoded the Soldiers of Prince Lewis his Army in their March, eſpecially the Foot, who traſhing through the Waters in a Country where was no Wood to Dry them, or Warm, and Dreſs their Victuals, many of them fell Sick and Died. And indeed that Country, as I have my ſelf obſerved, hath neither Timber, nor Underwoods; ſo that the Inhabitants live in Caves under Ground, the Soil being of a ſtiff Clay, grows hard with Fires, like a Stone; all their Fuel being Turf, of which, by the Lazineſs of the Inhabitants, a ſufficient ſtore had not been gathered to furniſh the preſent uſe of the Army.

Lippa ſurrendered to General Veterani.

Whilſt the Army quartered in this Barren Country, News was brought to Prince Lewis, That General Veterani having heard of the Defeat of the Turks, had Decamped from Dobra, and was marched to Lippa; where coming before the Town, he ſent his Summons to Surrender, which being refuſed, ſome few Bombs were caſt into it, which brought the Garriſon to a Deſire to Capitulate, but nothing would be granted but a Surrender at Diſcretion.

In fine, all the Men, being 216 in number, were made Priſoners, together with three Paſha's, viz. Mahomet Bey, and one Ali Paſha (who had been ſent thither for a Place of Baniſhment by the Grand Vizier) and alſo another Bey, with a Ziorbaſſi, or Captain. In the Town were three Guns, and two Mortar-pieces only, with a good quantity of Ammunition, but little of Proviſions. After which Count Guttenſteyn was made Governour of the Place, with ſome Hundreds of Men for a Garriſon: And whereas News was brought, That Tekeli, with five or 6000 Men was Quartered about Temeſwaer, it gave ſome Apprehenſions of his Deſign to Invade Tranſilvania; for which reaſon General Veterani kept his Station at Lippa to obſerve his Motions.

Pr. Lewis continues his March.

In the mean time Prince Lewis continued his March to Segedin, where he refreſhed his Army for ſome Days: And here it was that a certain Turk came from Belgrade under a Pretence to demand the Exchange of 4000 Turks againſt ſo many Chriſtians; but this Propoſal ſeeming fictitious, he was ſuſpected for a Spy, ſeized, and committed to Priſon.

Reinforces Lippa.

It being thought fit to ſecure Lippa lately taken, the Prince ſent his Adjutant-General with 12 Saicks laden with Proviſions, and ſome Money, by way of the River Maroth to Lippa, to Mend and Repair the Fortifications of that Place, and raiſe new ones where the Works were defective; and for its better Reinforcement, 2000 Raſcians, and Hungarians, both Horſe and Foot, were ſent to ſtrengthen the Garriſon.

A Party of Tekeli's Men defeated.

The Prince likewiſe with the remaining part of the Army, marched to Zolnock, where the Horſe having paſſed the Bridge for that purpoſe erected, met on the ſame Day of their Arrival, with the Field-Marſhal Count Mansfelt, and Major-General Aversberg at the ſame place, who had lately been detached in two Parties; the latter of which had the fortune to ſurprize a Party of 600 Men belonging to Tekeli, of whom they killed above 100, and made 32 Priſoners; which gave ſo great an Alarm to others of their Companions, which were poſted near Great Waradin, that in a precipitate Flight and Confuſion, they betook themſelves to their Heels, carrying withal their Bag and Baggage, with whatſoever elſe was portable.

C. Schlick defeats a Party from Gr. Waradin.

Nor was Count Schlick who Commanded the Blockade of Great Waradin, leſs ſucceſsful; for having received Information, That ſome Hundreds of Oxen belonging to that Garriſon, were Graſing in the Meadows near thereunto; poſted himſelf with 400 Horſe in a ſmall Wood over againſt the Place, ordering ſome Huſſars to drive the Oxen towards the Wood where he lay in Ambuſcade. The Huſſars following their Inſtructions in driving the Cattle, were purſued by the Garriſon till they came near the Wood, when Schlick ſallied out upon them, and ſo vigorouſly Attack'd them, that 400 Turks were killed on the Place, many Priſoners taken, and the Oxen carried clear away to the great damage of that Garriſon.

This Succeſs was followed by another of the like Nature, for Schlick having underſtood from the Priſoners, that a conſiderable Body of Tekeli's Men were Quartered in a Village on the other ſide of the City; he took the opportunity of the Night to paſs ſilently along, and without any Noiſe ſurprize them, and killed moſt of them in their Quarters, after which he he repaſſed with the like Privacy back without the leaſt oppoſition, to his own Camp.

It being now divulged that the Deſign of Prince Lewis was to turn the Blockade of Great Waradin into a Formal Siege, Count Aversberg was Detached from the Army with a Body of Dragoons and Pioneers, to Mend and Repair the Roads which were become almoſt unpaſſable, eſpecially for Cannon, and Waggons laden with Proviſions and Neceſſaries for the Army.

Count Schlick who was not as yet privy to this Deſign of the Prince, obſerving by his Motion, That Great Waradin was to be formally Beſieged, he privately conveyed himſelf and Troops into ſome Iſlands between the Rivers Koroſh and Bozze, and drove away the Enemies Cattle, being about 900 Head, and took ſome Priſoners from under the very Walls of the City, and brought them all to his Camp. As Schlick returned, the Turks of the Place called to him, and the Paſha deſired a Parly with him in the open Field upon Parole, which Schlick refuſed to do, until he underſtood that Count Marſigli, and his Chiaus were in the Town, having been employed on the Negotiation of Peace; and then he yielded to an Interview with the Paſha, who declared to him, That the loſs of their Cattle droven from under their Walls, was not ſo much cauſed by the Negligence of the Garriſon, as by their attention to their New Gueſts, whom they were entertaining with all Freedom and Friendſhip; and ſo would ſeem to inſinuate that for that reaſon, it would be but Juſt and Agreeable to the Laws and Rights of War, that they ſhould be again reſtored; but Schlick wou'd underſtand none of theſe Laws and Ceremonies, but retired without other Anſwer, and Count Marſigli was ſuffered to go to the Camp of Prince Lewis.

Count Marſigli and his Chiaus at Great Waradin.

October.

On the firſt of October, the Prince continued his March, and on the 10th arrived within a League of Great Waradin, where the next Day he joyned with all the Foot, and received Intelligence, That Tekeli had releaſed General Heuſler on Parole, whom he had ſome time before taken Priſoner; and that he was already come as far as Hermanſtadt; And from hence it was, that Count Marſigli, with the Turkiſh Chiaus, was alſo diſpatched to the Engliſh Ambaſſador at Adrianople; of whoſe Death they had not as yet received any Report whilſt the Prince of Baden was making Preparations for a Siege before Great Waradin, the Duke of Croy Attacked the Fortreſs of Brod in Sclavonia, in which there was a Garriſon of 300 Turks; who upon appearance of the Enemy before the Walls, put out five Red Enſigns, and in a manner of Defiance and Scorn, Danced upon the Ramparts; but this Sport continued not long; for the Duke that Evening took a Poſt near the Walls with 400 Men, and immediately began to Work; and notwithſtanding the continual Fire of the Enemy, they finiſhed a Battery before One in the Morning, together with a Line of Communication, on which they planted four Guns, and one Mortar-piece, and before Day began to batter the Town: The Turks affrighted hereat withdrew, and retired into a Fort on the other ſide of the River, leaving two ſmall Guns, and ſome Pedreros behind them; and the Place unto their Enemy, who took poſſeſſion of it, and therein placed 150 Germans to defend it. Howſoever the Turks continued to Fire out of their Fort on the other ſide, but without any conſiderable Damage to the Germans; for they remained not long there, before they deſerted that Fortreſs alſo, being terrified to ſee Percilie a Raſcian Captain with 80 Huſſars, and about 100 Foot in ſmall Boats to paſs the Save; and hearing in the Night the Sound of Trumpets and Drums, and all ſorts of Inſtruments to play, they were immediately ſtruck with a fear, and apprehenſion that the whole Imperial Army had paſſed the River with intention next Morning to Attack them, with which imagination affrighting one the other, they retired in a confuſed manner out of the Fort towards the Foreſts and Woods, being in all about 1500 Perſons, beſides the Peaſants of the Country, who with Arms in their Hands, but without any Order fled into the ſame Forreſts; but being purſued by the Huſſars and ſome German Horſe, they were cut down, and moſt of them Killed, very few eſcaping alive.

Brod de-ſerted by the Turks,

And fly to another Fort.

Which was alſo deſerted by them, and flying into the Woods, are for the moſt part cut off.

In the mean time Prince Lewis was buſied in preparing things, and putting all in a readineſs for the Siege of Great Waradin; and Commanded Count Stirum, with a conſiderable Body of Men, and ſome Artillery to approach nearer to the City, and ſoon after followed in Perſon with all the Horſe and Foot, pitching his Camp on the Banks of the River Koroſch; and having planted a Battery on a riſing Ground, he ſhot into the Town, and raked the Streets from one end unto the other: At the ſame time alſo two Mortar-pieces being well fixed threw into the City ſeveral Bombs, which ſet Fire to the Houſes, and burnt whole Streets. In this Conſternation the Beſieged attempted nothing by Sally, but only plyed their Great Guns, and ſet Fire to the Hay and Straw, of which they had raiſed great Stacks in their Gardens, and void Places of the City, leaſt the Enemy ſhould ſerve themſelves of it.

The Bombs continued firing, whilſt Barſus General of the Brandenburghers, and Count Guido of Staremberg, with nine Battalions, placed themſelves in a deep Ground, where they could not be overſeen by the Enemy, from whence 1500 Men iſſued in the Night, and opened the Trenches, whilſt others were buſied in raiſing a Battery overagainſt the Gate of the Palancha Ottorſi, on the Right Hand of which, a Redoubt was made, between which, and the Battery, a Line of Communication was drawn; by this time a Battery of ſix great Guns was perfected, and began to play; which the Enemy anſwered with their Guns from the Wall, firing without any intermiſſion: The ſix Guns being at ſome diſtance, did not the execution which was deſired; and therefore the Night following the Battery was brought nearer to the Palanca which was on the Right Hand; and next Night a New Battery was raiſed to the Left Hand of it; on which Guns and Mortar-pieces being planted, many Houſes were ſet on Fire, and a great part of the Palanca conſumed by them: Howſoever the Turks labouring with all Diligence poſſible, repaired what Damage and Ruine the great Guns had done, which they eaſily did; for the Walls being for the moſt part made of a ſtrong ſort of Timber, or Oak, which doth not Shiver, or Splinter, the Bullet made no greater Hole in the Walls than the ſize of the Shot; beſides which, the Ditch was very deep about them, and ſix Paces broad; howſoever by frequent firing, the Holes became ſo wide and large, as gave Encouragement to make a Storm on the Walls; the which was ordered for the 16th at Night. General Barſus, and Count Staremberg Commanded the Attack, which was performed with the greateſt Reſolution imaginable: The Muſqueteers with Hatchets in their Hands ran to the Gates, in which the Guns having made ſeveral Holes, they cut them down with the more eaſe. On the other ſide Col. Mollner's Heydukes, ſtormed the Walls with much Bravery and Reſolution; one of them Kneeling down, ſupporting himſelf on his Hands and Arms, another ſtood upon him, whilſt a third climbing over both, with his Scymiter in his Mouth, threw himſelf into the Palanca; and in this manner many of them having paſſed the Wall, began to cut down all that were before them; with which the Turks being terrified, abandoned the Fort, and fled over the Bridge into the City.

The Town Beſieged.

This place being thus taken, with the loſs of very few Men, ſome Guns were found in it, with one Mortar-piece only. Some Battalions being lodged in the Palanca, Prince Lewis with his Army paſſed the Rivers of Koroſch and Poze, and Encamped on the other ſide of the Town, where that Night 1500 Men were Commanded to open the Trenches, which was performed with much diligence, and a Battery was raiſed, and another alſo in the Palanca of Ollorſi now taken. The Huſſars in the mean time Encamped on the other ſide, to diſtreſs and ſtreighten the City the more narrowly; and now the Approaches being conſtantly carried on nearer, and nearer; and another Battery raiſed, on which 11 Guns were planted, they began to fire from thence and from the Palanca, with a like Number into the Streets which much annoyed the Town. Theſe Batteries fired ſo conſtantly on the Walls, that a ſufficient Breach was made, on which to make an Aſſault, and accordingly a Storm was appointed for the 24th of this Month, which the Turks perceiving by the Preparations that were made, had not the Courage to ſtand the Shock, but ſetting fire to the City, which they believed they could not maintain, retired to a Fort which they had raiſed between the City, and the Fortreſs; the City being now on Fire, and no oppoſition on the Walls, the Germans crowded into it with great Throngs, where they took much Cattle, and releaſed ſome Hundreds of Raſcians, who were Inhabitants in that City, which the Turks, had they not been prevented, had carried off with them. The reſigning this Place, which was ſo well fortified with ſeveral Retrenchments and Works one behind the other, was to the great Wonder of the Germans, who hereby were well advertiſed, and aſſured of the fear of the Turks; by which they took freſh Courage, and poſted themſelves in the great City over againſt the Fortreſs, and in the ſpace of two Days, they advanced very near to the Ditch of the Fortreſs; and in two Days more they finiſhed a Work on which they planted 18 Mortar-pieces, and from thence threw ſuch quantities of Bombs into the Fortreſs, and with that effect, that one of them falling into one of the Magazines of Powder, it blew up, and ſhowed a dreadful Spectacle of the Arms and Heads of Men carried into the Air.

The Turks having other Magazines of Powder and Proviſions remained reſolute in their Defence; and on the other ſide the Chriſtian Army continued to throw Bombs into the Fortreſs, by which a Steeple took fire, which ſpread it ſelf through the whole Fortreſs, and in leſs than ſix Hours time one half thereof was reduced to Aſhes:

1691. October. In the mean time a Party of Tartars of about 600 fell in upon the Foragers, and took both the Men and Horſes, and Booty which they had by them, but being immediately purſued and overtaken by the Huſſars, all was ſeized again and brought to the Camp with ſeven Heads, and three Priſoners.

Novemb. The Month of November being now entered, the Turks began to be of Opinion, that the Chriſtians could not continue long before the Place; for that the long and wet Nights, Snow, and Froſts of that Country muſt needs force them to raiſe the Siege; the Conſideration of which moved the Paſha of the Place to refuſe the acceptance of the Prince's ſecond Summons; ſaying, That there would be time enough for that ſix Months hence. This Anſwer obliged the Beſiegers to throw their Bombs continually into the Fortreſs, to force the Turks, ſo ſoon as was poſſible, to a Surrender: But in regard the bad Weather came on, and that Forage became ſo ſcarce in the Camp, that many of the Horſes died, tho' Proviſion for Men was plentiful and cheap; it was concluded by the General Officers, that the Seaſon of the Year was too far advanced for continuance of the Siege; and therefore it was eſteemed moſt adviſeable to turn it to a Blockade; but before the Germans bid a Farewell to the Place, they beat down a great Tower with their Cannon, on which the Turks having planted ſeveral Guns, did very much annoy the Germans.

On the 2d Inſtant the throwing of Bombs was continued, and a Great Fort was raiſed for the ſecuring of the Poſts if the advanced Seaſon of the Year, and the Obſtinacy of the Turks ſhould oblige the Prince to raiſe the Siege, and to leave the City narrowly Blocked up during the Winter.

On the 3d the Cannon of the Beſiegers beat down a great Tower on which the Beſieged had ſeveral Guns which much incommoded the Germans.

The 4th and 5th the Guns and Mortar-pieces of the Beſiegers continually fired on the Turks. That Day a Poliſh Envoy, who came into the Prince's Army ſome Days before. departed from thence for Tockay to expect there the Arrival of the Plenipotentiaries both of the Allies and Turks, who had appointed to meet there for the reaſſuming of the Treaties of Peace.

But about this time Forage begun to be very ſcarce to be had in the Army, the Horſe being obliged to fetch their Hay five Miles off, for which reaſon many Horſes periſhed, but Proviſions for the Army were plentiful and cheap enough. Several of Tekeli's Men came over to the Prince before Waradin; all which unanimouſly confirmed, That the Body of Turks, Tartars, and Rebels, (or Tekelians) which hitherto were Encamped between Gena and Gyula, ſuffered extreamly for want of Proviſions, being for the moſt part obliged to ſuſtain themſelves with Wild Fruits, which cauſed them to Die in great Numbers; their Horſes wanting Forage, periſhed likewiſe in abundance. 1691. Novemb.

On the 6th Inſtant cold Rains and Snow began, and continued until the 10th, notwithſtanding which the Bombing continually went forward; the Prince alſo ſent a Letter to the Baſha-Governour, Summoning him to Surrender the Fortreſs, which Letter the Baſha would not at all receive, but told the Bearer it was not yet time to ſpeak of Capitulations or Surrendring that Fortreſs.

Novemb. 10th. The 10th of November, (on which Day the Raſcian Lieutenant-Colonel Antonio, returned back to the Army with 400 Wagons, which he had taken from Tekeli as he marched homewards) the great Fort diſtant five or 600 Paces from the Gate of the Fortreſs, was finiſhed and brought to its entire Perfection, which Fort was more elevated and higher than the Walls and Batteries of the Fortreſs, in which 1000 Germans and ſome Hundred were Commanded as a Garriſon: Beſides this Fort, a leſſer was made on a certain Eminence, from whence the Guns fired in the inſide and Streets of the Fortreſs which was provided with a proportionable Garriſon. In the Great City of Waradin, a far greater Garriſon of Horſe and Foot than that in the Great Fort was ordered, and Colonel Mollner was Commanded to remain in the Palanca Ollorſi with his Regiment of Huſſars, and ſome Foot, which being thus ordered, and by that means the Fortreſs ſo cloſed up, that nothing could come out or go into it, there being alſo not the leaſt appearance of any Succours to relieve the Place, the Prince thought it more expedient to ſend his Army into Winter-Quarters in the Neighbouring Villages, and Cities of Debrezin, and St. Job, then to expoſe them to the hardſhips of the long cold Nights, Wet and Snowy-Weather, eſpecially ſince Count Tekeli was already decamped from about Gyula, and marched with his ruined and fatigued Army of Turks, and Tartars, and Rebels to Winter-Quarters, as it was confirmed by upwards of 300 Tekelians Deſerted from him, and arrived at Lippa, Zolnock, Belneſch, or in the Army, ſince that our Trenches alſo were carried on to the very Ditch of the Fortreſs; that their Bridges over the ſaid

Ditches

Novemb.

Ditches were beaten down, and moſt of the Water drained thereout, that their Works were ſo ruined that none dared to ſhow himſelf, our Guns continually firing on the inſide, that our Bombs, and the noiſome ſtinking Smell of ſome Fireworks, together with the reſtleſs State of the Beſieged, who were always forced to ſtand on their Guard, and continually alarmed, having no ſhelter but ſome Sellars and Vaults, could not but oblige them e're long to Capitulate, or Periſh by Fatigues and other Wants: All which, I ſay, being conſidered by the Prince of Baden, he having provided his Forts, Palanca, and the City with Garriſons very commodiouſly placed, ſent the reſt of his Army into Winter-Quarters.

The Manner of the Blockade.

The Blockade being thus reſolved, a Great Fort was raiſed for ſecuring the ſeveral Poſts, being about the diſtance of five or 600 Paces from the Gate of the Fortreſs; this Fort was built upon an Eminence or ſome higher Ground than the Walls and Batteries of the Fortreſs; for defence of which, above 1000 Germans were appointed for the Garriſon: Beſides this, a ſmaller Fort was alſo raiſed on a riſing Ground, and furniſhed with a good Garriſon, from whence they could ſhoot into the Streets and Houſes of the Fortreſs. Moreover the City it ſelf of Great Waradin was maintained with a more numerous Garriſon, than what the Turks had in their Fortreſs; and the Palanca of Ollorſi was Commanded by Col. Mollner, and Garriſon'd with his Regiment of Huſſars, with ſome Foot.

Pr. Lewis marches off

Things being thus ſecured, and the Fortreſs on all ſides cloſed up, that nothing could go out, or come into it; the Prince judged it more neceſſary to ſend his Army into Winter-Quarters in the Neighbouring Villages, and Cities of Debrezin, and St. Job, then to expoſe them to the Hardſhips of Long, Dark, and Wet Nights, and Snowy Weather, which began to fall in great abundance. In which Reſolution the Prince was the more confirmed by the Report of 300 of Tekeli's Men, who had Deſerted their Commander; and aſſured the Prince upon Oath, That Tekeli with his Turks and Tartars, was already Decamped with his Army about Giula, and marched into Winter-Quarters.

So now we muſt leave the Prince and his Army alſo in their Quarters, and the Fortreſs of the Turks ſtraitly Blockaded, until about the Months of May and June 1692, next enſuing.

Thus have we finiſhed the Relations of the Succeſſes in the Campaign for the Year 1691; the which proved as Unfortunate to the Turkiſh Affairs, and Arms, as moſt of the former Years ſince the beginning of this War; and when things go Unluckily Abroad, we cannot expect that they ſhould look very Smiling, or Pleaſant at Home.

Sultan Achmet fallen into a Fever by ill News.

He Recovers.

The Grand Vizier ſick, and recovered.

The Sultan who had fanſied to himſelf mighty things under the Auſpicious Conduct of Muſtapha Paſha Kupriogli, ſuch as an entire Victory in the Field over the Germans, and as the Conſequences thereof, the Surrender of Oſeck and Buda, and all other Cities and Fortreſſes in Hungary, which during theſe Wars, had yielded themſelves to the Victorious Arms of the Emperor, being now on a ſudden fallen from the hopes of all thoſe things, (which with a ſtrong Fancy and Imagination he had figured in his Mind; by a quite contrary Event, he was ſo Surprized and ſtruck with the ſudden News, That his Army was Defeated, his General the Grand Vizier killed, with the Flower of the Turkiſh Militia, all the Cannon taken, and the Camp expoſed to the Violence and Rapine of the German Soldiery; his Spirits ſo ſunk within him, that he did nothing but Sigh, and being poſſeſſed with a Lumpiſh Melancholy, fell often into heavy, but not refreſhing Sleeps; ſo that having his Mind troubled in the Day, and his Fancy with Horrid Dreams in the Night, he fell into a Fever, which endangered his Life; and gave occaſion to the People to Talk much of his Death, and ſetting up in the Throne Sultan Muſtapha, the Son of Sultan Mahomet IV, who had been Depoſed: But this Paſſion of Mind which poſſeſſed the Grand Seignior, paſſing over with a little Time, he being Naturally of a Jolly Temper, given to Muſick and Wine, his Fever quitted him, and he recovered. So alſo did the Old Ali Paſha, who had been Chimacam at Adrianople; and upon the Death of Kuprioglí (as we have ſaid) was made Grand Vizier, his Diſeaſe was the ſame with that of the Grand Seignior, proceeding from Afflicting himſelf at the News of the Rout of the whole Turkiſh Army, and the Apprehenſions he had of new Turbulencies ariſing thereupon amongſt the Soldiery, the which had ſtruck him with a kind of Apoplexy, and a Stupidity in his Underſtanding; but it went off, ſo ſoon, as he perceived the Soldiery to return more mildly Home than was expected, and then he began to revive, and take upon him the Power and Authority of his Government. He was an Ancient Man, and of great Experience, but he was neither eſteemed for a Wiſe, nor an Undertaking Man, which are two Qualities very neceſſary in a Grand Vizier. But the Mufti made ſome amends for the Inabilities of that Great Miniſter; for being a Perſon of a deep Underſtanding, and highly eſteemed by all Parties for his profound Wiſdom, he became very helpful to the Grand Vizier, who had the good quality to hearken unto the Counſels of thoſe who were wiſer than himſelf; it being one of his Infirmities to be irreſolute, which ſhows an Imbecility of Mind; and is a quality the moſt diſagreeable to an abſolute Monarchy. But being puſhed forward by his Friends, he governed well; for being a Man not very Avaritious, (as few Turks but are) he preferred none but ſuch as were Men of Merit, and had ſignalized themſelves by long Services, or ſome great or good Actions; his Country was Boſnia, which hath given many Valiant and Stout Soldiers to the Turks, being reputed Men of Bravery, and Fidelity in their Words and Actions.

His Qualifications.

Never had the Ottoman Empire, ſince it came to be an Empire, more need of Able, Valiant, and Wiſe Men, than at preſent; and never were they more rare and hard to be found: For what with the War which deſtroyed their brave, and beſt of their Gallant Soldiers, and Commanders; and with their Seditions, and Tumults at Home, in which their Principal Officers, both Civil and Military, were cut off; none remained alive but only Upſtarts, or ſome Leaders of the Inſolent, or Seditious Soldiery: And this was the State of the Empire, not only oppreſſed by the Victorious Enemy on the Frontiers; but by a want of all things at Adrianople, even to a Famine, which raiſed the Out-cries and Clamours of the People againſt the Government, which being joyned to the Abuſe of Copper-Money, (than which, at that time no other was to be ſeen, or currantly paſſed) diſcouraged the Country-Men from bringing Proviſions to the Market, and cauſed the People more earneſtly to cry out for a Peace, and exclaim againſt the French, for having now for four Years engaged them in a War the moſt Bloody, the moſt Ruinous, and moſt deſtructive to the Ottoman Empire that was ever known. The French Ambaſſador fearing that theſe Tumults, and the Inclinations of ſome of the Miniſters would at length prevail for a Peace, he beſtowed his Money very liberally, where he thought it might be well placed (for as yet the French King wanted not Money, as he did ſome Years afterwards) but he could not as yet fix any on the Chimacam Chuſaein Paſha at Conſtantinople, who always told the Ambaſſador's Servants, that he wanted none of his Preſents, being well provided with what was neceſſary for his Maintenance, and Equipage. The Difficulty of this Great Miniſter's Proceedings did not a little trouble the Thoughts of the Ambaſſador, eſpecially when he had underſtood that this Chimacam had wrote to the Mufti to perſwade to a Peace, the League with France being apparently deſtructive to the Empire; ſaying, as it were, How long ſhall theſe People be a Snare to us? And hereof the Ambaſſador was the more apprehenſive when he heard that the Sultan was returning to Conſtantinople for his Health; being perſwaded by the Phyſicians, That the Air of that City and the Sea, would be more conducing to his Health, than that of Adrianople; by which he feared, that the Chimacam might have the better opportunity to inſtill theſe Imaginations into the Head of the Grand Seignior, than he could at a diſtance.

The Chimacam of Conſtantinople, an Enemy to the French.

But before the Departure of the Grand Seignior from Adrianople for Conſtantinople, a General Council of War was held by all the Chief Officers of the Army: At which three principal Points were concluded.

The Firſt was, To do their beſt Endeavours, and uſe all poſſible means for the Relief of Great Waradin: But on the other ſide it was conſidered, That the Militia on the Frontiers was tyred out, and become weak by their Labours and Diſgraces of the preceding Campaign; ſo that the Means for executing this Deſign was not preſcribed.

Reſolutions at a Council of War.

A Second Propoſal was not to confide much in the Counſels of the French; but to conſult the Opinion of the Soldiery, whether they were inclinable to a Peace.

And Thirdly, In caſe the Soldiery ſhou'd be averſe to a Peace, that then Preparations ſhould be made with all diligence to raiſe Men, and make Proviſions of War for the enſuing Year.

But whilſt Matters were diſpoſing to quiet the Minds of the Soldiery, of which great Numbers were paſſed over into Aſia, much haraſſed and diſcontented; ſo that ſome Inſurrections were feared in thoſe Countries: Behold on a ſudden the People murmured againſt the baſe Allay of the Money, which was nothing but Copper, or at beſt mixed with a little Silver, which was a mighty prejudice to Trade, and cauſed a dearneſs of all Proviſions, ſo that the Poor were almoſt Starved; whereupon the Rabble, in a furious manner, aſſaulted the Mint-Office, and Killed the Maſter who was ſet over the Coinage, and committed many other Inſolences, and were not appeaſed until an Order was publiſhed, That 1691. the Copper-Money ſhould be no longer Currant; at which the People diſperſing, Silver-Money was iſſued from the Mint; where the Officers worked Day and Night in Coining Aſpers,and greater Money; and with Promiſes of being paid ſhortly in this Money, the Soldiers were very much pleaſed and ſatisfied; tho' the Diſcontents of the Aſiatick Soldiers,gave great Apprehenſions and Fears to the Port of ſome Revolt or Inſurrection in Aſia; which had it at that time happened, it had in all probability produced a Peace. But this Bleſſing both to the Chriſtians and the Turks, was reſerved for a more happy time; as we ſhall ſee, if God gives us Life, ſome Years afterwards; with which we ſhall put a Period to this Hiſtory.

1692. THE Engliſh Ambaſſador Sir William Huſſey, deſigned to Negotiate the Peace, together with Monſieur Colyer the Ambaſſador of Holland, between the Emperor and the Sultan Achmet (as we have ſaid) being Dead, an end was put for the preſent to that Negotiation, and the Ambaſſador of Holland returned back from Adrianople, without being able to effect any thing in order thereunto; the Reſolution of continuing the War, was the loud Report, and Diſcourſe common in the Mouths of all People; and that no Treaty ſhould be ſet on Foot, until the Recovery of Buda from the Germans, and of Morea from the Venetians; and herein were the Turks more animated by the Aſſurances of the French Ambaſſador, that his Maſter was ſending two great Men of War from France, laden with Bombs, Granadoes, Carcaſſes, and with all ſorts of Military Preparations, and with them 200 French Engineers, and Gunners, of great Experience in the Management of Fire-Works, and other Warlike Inſtruments, fit, and proper both for Sea, and Land: And farther to ſhow his Zeal in this Cauſe, the Ambaſſador promiſed to go himſelf in Perſon to the War.

The Turks reſolve to continue the War.

To give more life to the Ambaſſador's Words, the Son-in-Law to Tekeli returned from France, and in the beginning of this Year arrived at Smyrna, whence immediately without any ſtop, or ſtay, he took Poſt for Adrianople, being fully freighted with Letters, and Promiſes from the French King to the Sultan, and preſents to the Chief Officers of State to perſwade them to Continue, and Maintain the War; ſo that now all Thoughts and Imaginations of a Peace were vaniſhed, and laid aſide.

Wherefore in order to a War, a Project 1692. was laid by the two Cadileskers, or Chief Juſtices, to raiſe both Men and Money by a more eaſie way, and manner, than had formerly been done; for theſe being the Chief Juſtices on whom all the other Inferiour Juſtices of the Empire depended, an Exact and Secret Calculate was made of the true Number of the Spahees, and of the People in the ſeveral Provinces, and Diſtricts through the whole Empire.

This Calculate was ſecretly carried to the Vizier, and Mufti, where after it had been very ſeriouſly debated, it was well approved, as a Means to eaſe the Publick Treaſury, by a more equal Tax on all Villages and Towns, according to the Number of the Inhabitants, and hereon a great Foundation was made of raiſing many Thouſands of Men, and much more Money than the laſt Year.

During all this time, the Turks remained in great apprehenſion of ſome ſuddain Inſurrection of the Arabs; and diſcontented Militia in Aſia; and whereas the greateſt danger appeared to be in the Parts, and Country of Sebaſte or Sivas; a Teſtiſh Paſha, or General Inquiſitor was ſent with a ſtrong Party of Horſe, to enquire after all looſe People, Vagabonds, or ſuch as could give no good Account of themſelves, with a full Power of Life, and Death, which the Turks commonly execute with all Rigour, and Arbitrary Power imaginable. I have known a Teſtiſh Paſha ſent into Aſia, to enquire after Vagabonds, with a Party of 500 Men, who pitching his Tents near ſome Town, or Village, into which he hath ſent ſome of his Men to take up ſuch Perſons as the People ſhould offer to them for diſorderly Livers, the which being brought before the Paſha, the Imaum, or Pariſh Prieſt hath alſo been cited; and ſetting the Perſons before him in Rank and Order, it hath been demanded of the Imaum, Whether ſuch a Perſon be a Good Man, or not? How he Lives? What Trade he follows? Or, Whether he comes conſtantly to the Moſche to Prayers, according to the Rules which the Alchoran requires? In caſe the Imaum anſwers, that he knows him not, or his Way of Living; or that he is not a Good Man, he is immediately, without other Proceſs, Accuſation, or Proof, Hanged up upon ſome Tree, or Bough, which is near to the Paſha's Camp.

A Teſtiſh Paſha ſent into Aſia.

Howſoever this could not hinder two Princes of the Arabs, belonging to Arabia Deſerta, from Robbing, and Infeſting the Countries about Damaſcus, who gave a ſtop to all Mahometan Pilgrims going to Mecca, until they had paid ſuch Caſar, or Head-Money for their Paſſage, as they demanded, manded, and until the Grand Seignior had paid them a very conſiderable Sum in Gold for what was in Arrears due formerly from the Mahometan Pilgrims.

A Perſian *Ambaſſador at A*drianople.

In the mean time an Ambaſſador from Perſia to the Grand Seignior, arrived at Scutari, which is a Town in Aſia on the other ſide of the Water, juſt oppoſite to Conſtantinople, to which Place, upon the News hereof, the Chimacam ſent over four Commiſſaries to Entertain him. The Train, and Equipage of this Ambaſſador was very Noble and Great, having an Attendance with him of 338 Perſians bravely Mounted on Horſe-back, and richly Habited, with 60 Camels laden with Preſents for the Grand Seignior, and his Court; conſiſting of very rich Perſian Carpets interwoven with Gold; as alſo many Veſts of Cloth of Gold, beſides other Gallantries, and Rarities of that Country, with an Elephant, and 12 White Camels.

February.

This Ambaſſador ſtayed not more than a Night at Scutari, before he paſſed over into Europe, and continued his Journey to Adrianople, where the 2d of the Month of February, he made a Solemn, and a Stately Entry; he was a Perſon of a Comely Stature, of a Chearful Countenance, Prudent, and Generous in his Behaviour, which are Qualities greatly taking in all Courts of the World. In his Retinue he had the Sons of ſeveral Princes of Perſia, which ſerved to add unto the Splendour, and Grandeur of his Embaſſy. He was Lodged, by Command of the Sultan, in that Magnificent Palace of Kara Muſtapha, the late Vizier, which was richly Furniſhed for him; but there was no great need of any of the Turkiſh Moveables, for he had ſpread the Rooms with his own Rich Carpets, and other Coverings, the like of which had never been ſeen in the Ottoman Court. Moreover all the Kettles, and Utenſils of the Kitchin were all of Silver, together with the Tables, ſuch as never any Ambaſſador had before: And for better Adornments of this Noble Palace, there were certain Fountains which ſpouted Water as high as the Upper Story of the Houſe. The Original Intention of this Embaſſy was deſigned at firſt to Congratulate the coming of Sultan Solyman to the Throne; but the News of Solyman's Death meeting the Ambaſſador on the Road; and that Sultan Achmet his Brother, had ſucceeded to his Place; the Ambaſſador ſtaid on the way for other Inſtructions, which were not altered at the Perſian Court in any other manner, than only to change the Name of Solyman in the Credential Letters, to that of Achmet.

The Turks haſtned the Return of this Ambaſſador ſo much as was poſſible; howſoever his Departure could not be precipitated before the uſual and common time of other Ambaſſadors, to whom it is the Cuſtom to ſhow the Lutfe, or the ſolemn manner of giving out the Pay to the Janiſaries in the Divan, where the Ambaſſador is Treated with a Dinner at the Vizier's Table; but this not being to be performed until the 25th of March, the Turks, who had magnified ſo much the Grandeur of their Empire to the Perſians on all Occaſions, were in a Bodily Fear, leaſt in the mean time ſome Unhappy and Diſhonourable News ſhould come from the Frontiers; or that the Perſians ſhould diſcover the Weakneſs of the Ottoman Force, who formerly uſed to boaſt of 2 or 300000, could now ſcarce bring an Army of 60000 Men into the Field; howſoever the Arrival of this Ambaſſador did not a little trouble the Minds of ſome principal Turks, who being affectionate to their Country and People, would be very ſorry to have the Nakedneſs thereof diſcovered to their Inſulting Neighbours.

The Perſian Ambaſſador's Manner of going to Audience.

The Day of the Ambaſſador's Audience being come, a Horſe was ſent out of the Grand Seignior's Stable, for the Ambaſſador to Ride upon, richly adorned with Furniture and Trappings, according to the Cuſtom; likewiſe 47 Chiauſes with their Aga, were alſo appointed, with an Oda, or Chamber of Janiſaries, with their Ciorbagee, or Captain, and likewiſe that Aga which had been ſent lately into Perſia, to notifie the Exaltation of Sultan Solyman: Being now returned, they all with the Ambaſſador's own Retinue, attended to conduct him to his Audience with the Grand Seignior.

Things being put into this Poſture, the Ambaſſador in a Glorious Habit, and great Pomp mounted on Horſe-back; the Preſents were all ſent before, valued in Perſia at 100000 Dollars, but being, at Conſtantinople, might be eſteemed at double the Value; they were carried by Camels covered with Cloth of Gold, each of them bearing two great Cheſts, in which were Cloaths Embroidered with Gold, and Cloth of Gold, the fineſt Linen of Perſia, ſome Pieces of them were worked with Golden Thread: Beſides there were Perſian Girdles very rich; Turbants of the fineſt ſort proper for Princes; ſome Bows and Quivers with Arrows Richly Inlaid; ſome great and large Pieces of Amber, with a good quantity of Lignum Aloes, the moſt Precious ſort of any in India, of which much is conſumed in the Grand Seignior's Seraglio; ſome Strings of large Pearl of the biggeſt Size, with many other Gallantries, and Curioſities of India; Five very fine Perſian Horſes, covered with Cloth of Gold: Sixty large Camels, of which 30 were laden with Perſian Carpets woven with Silk and Gold-Thread, with various Colours rarely mixed: Theſe Camels were ſent before by 30 Perſians on Horſe-back, very richly Cloathed.

The Ambaſſador himſelf was Cloathed with the moſt Rich Tiſſue and Weighty Cloth of Gold that could poſſibly be made; On his Head he had a Cap in form and Manner of a Crown, with Seven Feathers, the Handles of which were ſtudded with Jewels and Precious Stones; the like Habit the Vice-Ambaſſador wore, being appointed to ſucceed in the Embaſſy, in caſe the firſt ſhould fail by any Accident; and before him five Horſes were led. Next followed the Secretary with the Credential Letters in a Bag of Cloth of Gold, which he carried in his Hand lifted up as high as his Head, on which he wore a Turbant Embroidered with Gold, with four Feathers. On one ſide of the Ambaſſador rode the Chiaus-Baſhee, and on the other the Vice-Ambaſſador, and by his ſide, the Aga who was returned from Perſia; theſe were immediately followed by two Perſians with Beards, well Mounted, and richly Habited, who were the Maſters of the Horſe, each carrying a Scimetar in the Scabbard richly adorned with Jewels, and carried under the Arm after the Turkiſh Faſhion: Next followed the Attendance of 60 Men on Horſe-back, with Beards cut ſhort after the Perſian Faſhion, all well Habited, amongſt which was not one, whoſe Beard was not grown, for the Young Youths were left at Home, being Scandalous to ſhow them Abroad.

March.

When the Ambaſſador and Vice-Ambaſſador were come into the Divan, where the Grand Vizier was preſent, they cauſed them to ſit down in the Rank with the Viziers of the Bench, amongſt which the Chimacam of Adrianople, was reckoned; but he who carried the Letters ſtood all the time during the Lutfe, or Payment of the Soldiers; after which, according to the uſual Cuſtom, they all ſate down to Dinner, where the Grand Vizier was preſent: After which they were richly Veſted, but without Sables, and with them 60 others of the Retinue had Veſts, which is much more than what are given to the Ambaſſadors of the Emperor, the Kings of England, France, or Holland; to the firſt of which, as I remember, are given 35 Veſts, and to thoſe of the two Kings 22 a piece, and to that of Holland 19; by which we may obſerve the Value which the Turks put on the Perſian, before thoſe of the Chriſtian Powers. After the Audience with the Grand Seignior was performed, they returned to their Lodgings in the ſame manner as they came from thence.

A Character of the Grand Vizier.

The Artifices of his Son.

The Arts by which the Grand Vizier was kept in his Office.

This Audience being over, the Turks hoped that the Perſian Ambaſſador would immediately, and without farther delay return back to his Maſter, the King of Perſia; but the Ambaſſador had other Intentions in his Mind: For being deſirous to be a Spectator of the Confuſions amongſt the Turks at Home, and the Weakneſs of their Army on the Frontiers, he pretended to renew the Ancient Capitulations, which had been made between the Perſians and the Turks, which was a good Excuſe to delay Time: And tho' notwithſtanding the Report cauſed to be ſpread Abroad, That the Indians had declared War againſt the Perſians, it little moved the Ambaſſador from his Purpoſe of delaying his Departure, that he might the better diſcover the Weakneſs and Nakedneſs of the Turks, whoſe Affairs could not go well Abroad, whilſt they were governed by an unable Head at Home; for the Grand Vizier was Old, and Cholerick, and had it not been for his Son, who was a Perſon well in Years, Diligent, and Conſiderative, who Diſcourſed, and Prepared all Matters, weighed, and conſulted them with Perſons of Experience, and Underſtanding, he could never have carried them to any Maturity, or remained long in that Sublime Office. Beſides, he was Naturally Cruel, that upon the leaſt Suſpicion, or Murmurings of any Paſha, or great Man, he without the leaſt noiſe ſent the Bow-ſtring for him, and privately cut him off: Amongſt the reſt, there was one Omer Paſha, who having in ſeveral Fights ſignalized himſelf by his Bravery, ſeemed to aſpire unto ſome high degree of Preferment; whereof the Vizier growing Jealous, he ſent and took him off. But what moſt confirmed him was; that he promiſed the Militia to deliver out their Pay to them, at the end of every three Months in good Gold and Silver, and not in Copper-Money, againſt which there had been ſuch Outcries, and Tumults amongſt the People; to perform which Promiſe, (for there was no dallying with the Licentious Soldiery) the Gold and Silver-Smiths were commanded to ſhut up their Shops, and prohibited to Work or make any Veſſels of Gold, or Silver, but to bring the Gold and Silver which they had in their Hands, into the Mint, there to be Coined into good Money, which ſo altered on a ſudden the manner of Traffick in Buying and Selling, that none of the Copper-Money would paſs in Payments under three or four for one; by which Artifices and Projects, 1692. jects, he kept up, and ſecured the Government to himſelf for ſome time: To which we may add one thing more, which reconciled the Minds of the Mufti, and of the Ulama, and Religious Votaries to him. For whereas his Predeceſſor, who was a Man of a Gentle, Moderate Spirit, and not ſo Cruel, and Barbarous, as this, had granted Licences to the Chriſtians to ſell Wine, (by which a conſiderable Revenue ariſes to the Grand Seignior.) This Vizier to ſhow his Hatred to the Chriſtian Religion, iſſued out moſt ſtrict Proclamations againſt the uſe of Wine, making it Death, either to Sell, or Buy, or Drink it; which much affected the Hearts of thoſe, who were the moſt Superſtitious, and Hypocritical; and gained him great Credit in general with the Muſſelmen, or Mahometan Believers.

Tekeli at Adrianople.

About the time that the Perſian Ambaſſador made his Entry into Adrianople, and received his Audience of the Grand Seignior, Count Tekeli arrived there alſo, attended with 30 Officers of his own Creatures, and Confidents; he entered with great State, and Pomp, and was conducted to his Lodging in the Palace of Iſaac Efendi, where the greater Honours were ſhown him by the Inſtigation of the French Ambaſſador.

His Audience with the Grand Vizier.

The Day following being conducted to his Audience with the Grand Vizier, he appeared very Rich and Stately in his Habit, wearing, after the Hungarian Faſhion, a large Plume of Heron's Feathers on his Head, the bottom of which, where they were fixed, being ſet and ſtudded with Precious Stones of great Value; he ſtaid above an Hour in Conference with the Grand Vizier, being treated with Careſſes, and Kindneſs beyond the Manner which is uſual amongſt Turks: After which he received a Coftan lined with Sables, as is given to the greateſt Paſha's, and with him 15 of his Officers were alſo Veſted; at this Conference Tekeli adviſed the Grand Vizier to provide two great Armies, one to act on the Frontiers in Hungary, and the other in Tranſilvania.

The French Ambaſſador viſits him.

After this Audience which Tekeli had with the Grand Vizier, the French Ambaſſador having firſt obtained Licenſe for the ſame from the Vizier, made him a Viſit; at which the uſual Ceremonies paſſed, with great Proteſtations of Friendſhip, and Promiſes of Aſſiſtance from the King his Maſter.

The Turks were very uneaſie all this time, during the Abode of the Perſian Ambaſſador at the Ottoman Court, leaſt he ſhould diſcover, as we have ſaid, the Weakneſs of the Turks in Hungary, and the Commotions of the Arabs againſt the Ottomans; ſo that every thing was Whiſpered, and Concealed with all the Secrecy that was poſſible; and accordingly what Letters came either from Hungary, or the Eaſtern Parts; they were committed to ſome of the Renegade Chriſtians to be read, who having been Educated in all the Learning of the Seraglio, were capable to Interpret them, and being confined within thoſe Schools, had no means of Converſation with People without the Seraglio. 1692.

Tekeli and the Tartar diſpatched away.

Tekeli, and the Tartar Han having finiſhed their Buſineſs at Adrianople, and agreed on all the Methods they were to act for the enſuing Campaign; they were diſpatched away, the firſt towards Hungary, and the other to the Crim.

Change of Officers.

It being now time to prepare and provide for the War, ſeveral Changes and Alterations were made amongſt the Officers. The Captain Paſha was put out of his Office, and the Treaſurer of the Grand Seignior's Private Caſh, was put in his Place, a Perſon wholly ignorant of Maritime Affairs, but preferred as an Old Servant, and for his Merits in other Employments; and his Predeceſſor Miſſiroglu, who had been always bred up a Seaman at Tripoli in Barbary, was ordered for Hungary; as was alſo the Chimacam of Conſtantinople. The Aga, or General of the Janiſaries, had alſo been deprived of his Office; and being a Man of good Eſteem amongſt the Soldiery, many adhered to his Party, which began to create a ſtrong Faction amongſt the Soldiery; to prevent the increaſe of which, many Officers amongſt the Janiſaries were ſecretly Strangled in the Night, whereby all thoſe Plots were overthrown which were deſigned to promote that General of the Janiſaries, who had the Eſteem for his Courage, and good Conduct, to the Sublime Office of Grand Vizier; by which the Chriſtians received a conſiderable Prejudice, he being a Friend to the Peace, and an Enemy to the French. But to keep the Turks fixed, and ſteddy to the War, the French Ambaſſador aſſured the Turks, That his Maſter the King had diſpatched already from France 200 Officers expert in the War, who might arrive in very few Days, and that amongſt them were ſome famous Engineers, skilful in throwing Bombs and Granadoes, and making all ſorts of Artificial Fire-works. And moreover he aſſured them, That every Day he expected two Men of War laden with Bombs, and Arms, and all ſorts of Military Inſtruments, with ſome Thouſands of Muskets to Arm the Janiſaries. Moreover this Ambaſſador offered the Port, in the Name of his Maſter, to maintain three Regiments of Janiſaries, and to Cloath them all in Blew Veſts; but this piece of Generoſity looking too mean and diſagreeable to the Grandeur of the Turks, was refuſed with ſome Indignation, and Diſdain: Howſoever the French Engineers, upon their Arrival were accepted, and Enrolled amongſt the other Gunners; over which, the Maſter of the Artillery was a Turk.

Preparations for the War.

Inſtances for a Peace promote the War.

The Spring coming now forward, great Preparations were making both by Sea and Land for the approaching Campaign. At the Arſenal, the new Captain Paſha was very diligent to forward the Naval Preparations; of which twelve great Mahoones, or Galleons, and two new Galleaſſes were preparing, with ſix new Frigats, beſides the Gallies belonging to the Beys of the Archipelago, which are commonly 36 in number. Moreover, great Quantities of Bisket and Ammunition, were preparing to be ſent on Saicks by the Danube for the uſe of the Army. Nor were the Preparations, and Recruits for the Land Army neglected; for a Door, (as they call it) was opened for making Janiſaries; of which they pretended to form for this Year 25000, and to have a greater Army this Year, than they had the laſt, before the Battle of Salankement, in which the Turks were the more animated, and made to believe better of their own Condition than it really was, by the Applications which the Chriſtian Ambaſſadors made to Mediate a Peace; believing that neither the Emperor, nor the Venetians would preſs ſo hard for a Peace, were they able to maintain the War.

But what gave ſome ſtop to the Warlike Preparations, were the Factions amongſt the Turks themſelves; by which the Muſti was ſuſpended, and ſent into Baniſhment; and a Pitiful, Decrepit Old Fellow, who had been Imaum, or Chaplain to Old Kupriogli, put into his Place, of whom we have given a Character before, and that he was unconſtant in all his Reſolutions.

The Perſian Ambaſſador continues at Adrianople.

The Perſian Ambaſſador ſtill continuing at Adrianople, the Turks knew not in what manner to be rid of him; they wiſhed for his Departure, not ſo much to ſave the daily Charge which they beſtowed upon him, as to be quit of a Spy, who looked as if he came to ſee the Nakedneſs of the Land. It was not ſeemly to order him to be gone, but it was thought that he would not ſtay long after the Horſe-Tail was ſet out, (which is a Sign that the Grand Vizier reſolves in 40 Days to take the Field) upon which it was given out, That he was to be at Sophia about the 7th or 8th of May, whence in a few Days he was to proceed, and to expect the Forces of Aſia at Belgrade.

Preparations for the War.

In order hereunto all Preparations poſſible were made for the War; the Grand Vizier deſigning to be in the Field before the Chriſtians, ſeveral Brigantines were diſpatched for the Danube by way of the Black-Sea, with Saicks for Aſack laden with Ammunition and Proviſions for the War, moſt of which Veſſels were deſigned up as high as Belgrade.

Factions in the Court.

The Grand Vizier ſeeks the Life of the Chimacam.

He is ruined thereby.

But for all this haſte which the Turks made, the Factions amongſt themſelves retarded their Expeditions, and cauſed every thing to move ſlowly. We have already given a Character of the Grand Vizier, as a Man infirm both in Body and Mind, and endued with no other Abilities to conſerve himſelf, and his Government, beſides a Cruelty natural to him, by which he conſerved himſelf by the deſtruction of others; he had, as we have ſaid, put many of the Chief Officers to Death; and had cauſed the Muſti to be diſplaced and baniſhed; he alſo proceeded ſo far, as to take the Kuſlir Aga from the daily Service of the Sultan; and in deſpight of his great Power in the Seraglio, to ſend him into Baniſhment: After which there remained but one Perſon, of whom he conceived any Fear, or Jealouſie, and that was the Chimacam of Adrianople; and until he was taken off, he could conceive no Quiet within his own Breaſt, nor could he think himſelf ſecure after his departure to the War, unleſs he firſt ſaw his Competitor under the ſame Fate with his other Enemies, and his Son placed in his Stead and Office: With theſe Thoughts this wretched Vizier went boldly to the Sultan to demand licenſe to give the Fatal Blow to the Chimacam, the which recoiled upon himſelf; for he being much in Favour, and in Eſteem with the Grand Seignior for his Prudence and Dexterity in Affairs, and for the Truth which he had always told him: The Sultan no ſooner heard him ſpeak againſt the Chimacam, but putting himſelf into a Violent Paſſion, called immediately for his Band of Black Eunuchs to remove him away out of his Preſence, and to ſtrangle him as a Faithleſs and an Unworthy Miniſter.

But it ſeems the Eunuchs, contrary to their Natural Temper, taking Compaſſion of an Aged and Decrepid Perſon, fell down at the Feet of the Sultan, imploring his Mercy and Commiſeration towards an old Servant, whoſe Years might plead for his Pardon.

The Sultan being a Prince of an Eaſie Temper, hearkened to their Petitions, and cauſing him to be put into an inward Room for a while, ſent immediately to call for the Chimacam to come to him; who all Pale and Wan, fearing leaſt his Enemy the

Vizier

March.

Vizier had prevailed with the Grand Seignior againſt his Life, came all Trembling, and caſt himſelf down at the Feet of the Sultan; but he was ſoon put out of his Fears, by the comfortable Words of the Grand Seignior, declaring him Vizier, and therewith a Veſt of Sables was thrown over him, and the Seals delivered to him. But he being a Perſon of Prudence, and Experience of the uncertainty of that Sublime Office in ſuch a Conjuncture of Time, as was at preſent; began before the Grand Seignior, much to bewail his hard Fate, which hurried him into an Honour too high and weighty for him to ſupport; declaring, That he only deſired to live in the Degree of Chimacam, that he might never depart from the ſide of his Lord and Maſter.

The Chimacam refuſes to be Vizier.

With theſe, and ſuch like Words as theſe, he moved the Sultan to Compaſſionate his Caſe, and to grant his Requeſt: And in his Place was named Halil Paſha, at that time Paſha of Diarbekir in Meſopotamia, who had been Chief Chamberlain to Kara Muſtapha, when he lay in the Siege before Vienna.

Another Vizier named.

To execute this Great Affair, two Aga's were diſpatched immediately away by the Poſt, to bring this Halil Paſha to Adrianople; and in the mean time all the Affairs of the War remained at a ſtand, which was very ſtrange at ſuch a Seaſon, when the Armies were ready to take the Field; and that all things muſt give way to the Conſideration of a ſingle Man, who was to be fetched at the diſtance of above 1000 Engliſh Miles from Adrianople; as if no Man could be found like him equal to that great and heavy Charge.

In the mean time the Depoſed Vizier, was Baniſhed to the Caſtles of the Dardanelli; the which proved not all his Puniſhment; for his Eſtate, according to the Cuſtom of the Turks, was Arreſted; 500 Purſes of Money, with half a Million of Dollars, were ſeized for Service of the Sultan, with about 18000 Soltanini, or Gold Ducats, belonging to the Vizier's Son; the Kahya alſo was put into Priſon, of whom nothing more having been heard, it was believed that he had been put to Death.

The Old Vizier Baniſhed;

And his Eſtate ſeized.

Upon the News hereof the Soldiery at Belgrade Conſpired together to preſent before the Grand Seignior, Halil Paſha their Seraskier, or General at that time of their Army, as the fitteſt Perſon for the Office of Grand Vizier, and the moſt able of any to contend with thoſe great Difficulties, which oppreſſed the Empire: But in regard that Poſt was already filled, the Port refuſed to hearken thereunto; and leaſt ſuch a Denial ſhould cauſe any diſturbance, Halil Paſha was ſent to Negropont, where he formerly had ſhown great Bravery, and good Conduct; and thus all things remained at a ſtand, until the Arrival of the New Vizier, till which time alſo the Perſian Ambaſſador could not be diſpatched; nor did he haſtily deſire it, being taken up with Admiration and Pleaſure to ſee ſo many Tragical Changes, and Confuſions, far different from thoſe Days, when the Ottoman Union, and abſolute uncontrouled Power gave a Terrour to Perſia, and all the Eaſtern World.

The Soldiers at Belgrade offer to prefer another, but denied.

The Perſian Ambaſſador pleaſed herewith.

In the mean time for want of the Grand Vizier all things were at a ſtand; for the Tartars refuſed to move until they received Inſtructions from the New Grand Vizier, and the Aſiatick Troops which were upon their March at this time, and ready to paſs into Europe, retarded, and ſlackned their Pace, until they knew what new Orders this Vizier would give them. Howſoever the Officers both of Horſe and Foot, which were already in Europe, were haſtned on their March with all ſpeed, that at the Arrival of the Grand Vizier, the whole Army might be found in a good poſture on the Frontiers near Belgrade: And the Preparations for the Sea in the mean time went forward with all Chearfulneſs, it being deſigned, that the Maritime Force ſhould be equal to that of the laſt Year, being reinforced with many Veſſels from Tripoli, Tunis, and Algier; in all which Expeditions the Chimacam of Adrianople was very vigilant and active.

All at a ſtand until the Vizier's coming.

At length, about the beginning of May, the Grand Vizier arrived at Adrianople, near which Place he was met at Haſſa, about three Hours diſtant from thence, by many of the Principal Officers, and at an Hours diſtance from the City, by the Mufti, and Chimacam, and others; who in great Pomp and State conducted him to the Preſence of the Sultan, by whom he was graciouſly received, and the Seals delivered to his Hand; after which being Veſted with a Coſtan lined with Sables, he made a ſhort Prayer, and withdrew himſelf from the Preſence of the Sultan; and being come to the Vizier's Palace, he beſtowed Coſtans on all the Paſha's, and Officers of his Court, confirming the Old Ones in their Places, and declaring New where they were vacant.

The Vizier arrives; and received by the Grand Seignior.

Having taken ſome Refreſhment that Night, the next Day he held a Solemn Council, at which it was concluded, what Methods were to be taken, for the future; and it was agreed, That on the 31ſt of this Month the Vizier's Tents were to be pitched at the uſual Place without the City; and A Counſel of War, May 1692.

The Vizier marches towards Belgrade.

The Janiſaries mutiny for Pay,

alſo the Janiſar-Aga's; and that the Day following they were both in Perſon to March out into their Tents; and that on the 6th of June they were to begin their Journey towards Belgrade; accordingly the Janiſaries led the Van, as was uſual, and proceeded a Day before the Vizier, and the Spahee's; but they had not marched a Day before that being united with the other Militia, they began to Mutiny, exclaiming for their Pay, and proteſting that they would not proceed until firſt they had received their ſix Months Pay in Arrear, with their Veſts of thick Cloth, as alſo the Donative due to them at the Inauguration of every New Sultan: To content theſe People, the Grand Vizier iſſued out to them with all ſpeed their ſix Months Pay; and with fair Words and Promiſes, he ſo pacified them, that they quietly marched forward to Belgrade, proteſting howſoever, not to paſs the Save without their Cloth and Donative.

A New Chimacam made.

With this Pacification the Grand Vizier taking a little Breath, began to conſider of the manner how to eſtabliſh himſelf; and becauſe an Able, and Faithful Chimacam, who remains near the Perſon of the Grand Seignior, is always a great ſupport to a Vizier, he ſent for the Paſha of Aleppo, named Muſtapha, to come to him, who in the Time of Solyman the Grand Vizier, had been Seraskier, or General againſt the Poles: This Perſon being come to him, he made him Chimacam, and diſplaced the other (who, as we have ſaid, refuſed lately the Vizier's Office) and ſent him to remain Paſha at Erzirum, which is in Armenia Major.

One would have imagined that this Vizier might have thought himſelf ſecure with that Chimacam, who had refuſed, (as we have ſaid) the Vizier's Office, ſo fairly and ſo lately offered to him by the Sultan, ſo that a little kind Aſpect, and few obliging Words might have made him entirely his own; but there is a Fate amongſt the Turks, that neither the Grand Seignior is conſtant to his Viziers, and Chief Officers, nor they to the Inferiour Miniſters, who act under them, never believing themſelves ſecure, but with thoſe who are their own Creatures, by which continual Revolutions all things remain in diſtraction, and a Vizier hath ſcarce learned, or become Maſter of his Trade, before he is diſgraced, and thrown down from his Sublime Office, with all his Kindred and Dependances, to the Abyſs of Miſery, and Ruine, of which we have diſcourſed at large in another Treatiſe.

The Mufti recalled.

Upon which Maxime this Vizier called for his own Creature to make him Chimacam, and recalled the late Mufti, whom the preceding Vizier had Exiled, which was the more eaſily done, the Place being vacant by the Death of the Mufti who was laſt made.

Waradin in great diſtreſs.

All theſe Embroils and Changes could not do leſs than hinder the Proceedings of the main Buſineſs; for the Budziack Tartar refuſing to follow the Command of the Tartar Han, the Grand Seignior ſent one Meſſenger after the other to haſten the March of the Tartars, commanding them with 3 or 4000 Horſe to carry on each a Sack of Wheat, or Meal, for the Relief of Great Waradin, from whence frequent Letters came, that they being reduced to the Extremity of Famine, could not longer ſubſiſt, but ſhould be forced to deliver themſelves up into the Hands of the Enemy, unleſs ſpeedily ſuccoured.

In this manner unthought of Accidents fell out full of Diſappointments, by which neither the Forces at Land, nor at Sea amounted to half the Power they were of the laſt Year.

Thus far in this Year of 1692, have we ſhown the State of Affairs in Turky, whilſt at Vienna things were in preparation for the following Campaign, and many Counſels of War were held by the General Officers, in Preſence, and with the Aſſiſtance of Prince Lewis of Baden.

May.

We being now in the Month of May, all the Endeavours were bent for taking Great Waradin before the Turkiſh Army ſhould take the Field, and come to relieve it, of which there was now no great probability, in regard that from all ſides Advices came, that the Town laboured under the laſt Extremity of Famine; the which was not only confirmed by Letters from thence to Adrianople; but by a Meſſenger diſpatched with Letters to Giula and Temeſwaer from the Beſieged, to give an account of the miſerable Condition of the Place, the Circumſtances of which were reported to be ſo wretched, that in all probability the Place could not hold out much longer.

But becauſe many times Reports are falſe, and that Men do often, eſpecially in War, magnifie, or diminiſh things according to their Humour or Intereſt; it was judged fit not to expect until Famine had forced the Beſieged to ſurrender, for that might prove ſtill the Work of ſome Months, and in the mean time give the Enemy means to relieve the Place; wherefore it was reſolved to force the Surrender, and the care thereof being committed to General Heuſler, he with all Expedition and Diligence having drawn his Troops together from their Winter-Quarters, and adjacent Places, poſted himſelf near the Old Fort,

Fort, in which the Heydukes had kept a Garriſon during the Winter Seaſon, from whence he ſent a Summons to the Turks to Surrender, and deliver up the City; which they reſolutely refuſing to do, he began the Day following to open the Trenches, and raiſed two Bulwarks exactly oppoſite to the Bulwarks of the Enemies, called Zingar, and Capudon; and cauſed a Bridge to be laid from the Palancha Oloſchi, reaching to the Old City. To diſturb theſe Works, the Turks plyed their Great Guns continually, and made a furious Sally, but were repulſed with ſome loſs. In like manner alſo the Beſiegers drew another Line on the other ſide of the River, ſo that the Town was now environed on every ſide, and the Chriſtians lodged at the Ditch of the City.

Heuſler Summon's the Town. They refuſe to yield.

The Turks make Sallies, and are repulſed.

On the 7th the Turks made another Sally, but were repulſed; And on the 8th, made another, with much more Bravery than they had done the Day before, but were repulſed with like Loſs: Upon which the Janiſaries went to the Paſha to conſult with him what was to be done in this preſent Exigency; and all agreed, To hold out ſome Days longer in expectation of the promiſed Relief; during which time, both ſides employed themſelves to ply their Cannon, and throw their Bombs inceſſantly.

On the 11th ſome Hundreds of the Beſieged ſhew'd themſelves without the Fortreſs, but withdrew without farther Attempt; on which Day 11 Heydukes were killed, and 15 wounded.

On the 13th the Turks made another Sally on the Heydukes, but were briskly received, and ſoon repulſed.

The 16th, 17th, and 19th, little or nothing of moment was done, by reaſon of the continual Rains; but by this time the more heavy Cannon being come, the Breach was made wider and larger; ſo that General Heuſler ſuppoſing that the Enemy might be terrified thereby, he ſent a Trumpeter to make them the laſt Summons, threatning them in Default thereof, to give no Quarter either to Man, Woman, or Child; but as yet the Turks ſhowed no fear of the Menaces pronounced againſt them; and an Old, Grave Turk ſhowing himſelf on the Walls, called to the Beſiegers, and admoniſhed them to withdraw their Troops from under the Walls of the City, which they ſhould never take, the Beſieged being reſolved to Live and Die together in the ſame. This declared Reſolution of the Turks, quicken'd the Operations of the General, ſo that throwing Fire into the Town, and plying the great Guns continually Day and Night, the Breach was made much wider than it had been ſome few Days before, and ready for Storm, which was deſigned for the 28th of the Month: The Turks ſeeing the Troops in a readineſs for an Attack, their Hearts began to fail; and thereupon a White Flag was diſplayed, and five Deputies were ſent to the Army to treat, and Hoſtages being given on both ſides, theſe Articles were agreed on, and an Inſtrument drawn up in this Form following.

Continue reſolute to maintain the Town.

Seifullah Cadi di Varadin.
Abdulatif Paſha and Chief Governour of Waradin.
Ibrahim Paſha, the late preceeding Governor of Waradin.
Oſman Agha.

An Inventory of what was found in the Fortreſs.

Five Thouſand Meaſures of Barley.
1000 Meaſures of Wheat.
300 Sacks of Rice.
50 Fats of Flour.
50 Braſs Guns, moſt of which were German.
22 Mortars.
70000 Pounds of good Powder; And 723000 of old decayed Powder.
3500 Cannon Bullets.
4300 Pounds of Wrought Iron.

The Articles being thus ſigned on the 3d of June, the Day following the Bridge was repaired, and the Turks marched out of the Fortreſs, to the Number of about 1200 Fighting Men, and in all 12000 Souls, which were ranged in good Order on a convenient Ground without the Town, where they remained until the German and Raſcian Militia, which was in Garriſon in Peſcabara June. The Turks march out of Waradin.

Peſcabara was releaſed, and which the Turks had detained there contrary to the Capitulations.

And thus ended the Siege of this Important Place, the Conqueſt of which ſerved much towards the Security of Tranſilvania to the Emperor.

June.

The Turks repulſed by the Raſcians from Titul and Titz.

The Turks being deſirous of a Revenge, detached a ſtrong Party from Belgrade towards Eſſeck, intending by that way to make an Incurſion into Sclavonia; but the Raſcians having notice of this March, Attacked them at Unawares, and cut down 200 of them, and took 40 Priſoners. Another Party of Turks alſo embarking at the ſame time on three large Boats, fortified with divers Guns, with which approaching near Titul, wherein was a ſtrong Garriſon of Raſcians, they defended the ſame with ſo much Courage, that many Turks being Killed and Wounded, they were forced to quit the Deſign, and return back with Diſgrace, and ſome Loſs; and in the Town, the Captain of the Raſcians was killed, with about 20 Men.

Nor better Succeſs had the Turks on Titz, which was defended by a Garriſon of 1200: The Turks Embarking themſelves on 50 Ships, made a furious Aſſault thereon, which laſted for ſeveral Hours; but they were ſo well received, that they were repulſed, and forced to retire with the loſs of ſome Hundreds Killed, and 30 Priſoners taken.

The Croats take Behatz from the Turks.

The Croats had ſtill better Succeſs upon the Turks on the other ſide the River Unna, which Country they had often Invaded; and particularly about the beginning of July the Governour of Novi advancing with 3 or 400 Horſe as far as Behatz; the Suburbs whereof they Attacked with the Sword in their Hands, Entered and Plundered, and then Burnt the Place, putting all to the Sword, except about 20 Perſons of Quality whom he made Priſoners; beſides other Booty he took 100 Head of great, and 500 of ſmaller Cattle.

After this Action the ſame Troops Attacked Oſtroſatz on two ſides, and totally deſtroyed it, notwithſtanding the vigorous Reſiſtance which the Turks had made. About this time alſo a violent Storm caſt away 35 Turkiſh Barks on the Danube laden with Corn, Flour, Rice, and other Proviſions, and did much other Damage by Thunder and Lightning.

The Turks in confuſion by changes.

Such ſmall Matters as theſe paſſed, before the Vizier was in a capacity to take the Field; nothing went well at Home, nor proſperous Abroad. For after the Vizier had changed the Chimacam, he ſent to call a certain Perſon named Muſtapha Paſha, who had continued for a long time Seraskier at Baba in the War againſt the Poles; and being a Perſon of great Experience, and good Conduct in Civil, as well as in Military Affairs, the Vizier judged him the more proper for this Office, by which it was greatly in his Power to do him Services with the Grand Seignior during his Abſence at any time from the Perſon of the Sultan; and of ſuch a Faithful Friend as this, the Vizier had more than ordinary occaſion at a time when he had lately diſcovered a New Faction Combining againſt him, which being neceſſary to be ſuppreſſed before he marched into the Field, or withdrew himſelf from the Preſence of the Sultan, he ſeized on the Principal Conſpirators againſt him; namely, the Chimacam, and the Aga or General of the Janiſaries, and tho' he was then in a readineſs to begin his March, yet he Arreſted him, and deprived him of his Office, placing in the ſame Iſmael Paſha, who had lately been Chimacam of Conſtantinople, and before that time had been made a Priſoner by General Tenevolt; and from his Youth having been always Educated in great Places, he was eſteemed the more capable of any Employment: in this Secret Plot, the Teſterdar or Lord High Treaſurer, was one of the Conſpirators, whom the Vizier alſo deprived of his Charge, with divers others of principal Note; but what moſt ſenſibly touched him, was the Diſobedience of the Janiſaries, which is always the Fore-runner of Misfortunes to Great Men; the Apprehenſion of which caſt the Vizier into an Indiſpoſition of Body, which continued upon him for three Days, but afterwards recollecting himſelf, and taking Courage, he raiſed up his Spirits, and in a handſome manner appeaſed the Janiſaries; howſoever he lived in a continual fear of their Mutinies at Belgrade, having rendered himſelf Odious to the Soldiery and others, by his Unſatiable Avarice, which he had learned from the Principles and Methods of his Old Maſter Kara Muſtapha, by which Vice he had ſuddenly fallen, had he not been ſupported by his Creature, Iſmael Paſha the Chimacam, whom he had raiſed to that Dignity.

Conſpiracy againſt the Vizier.

July.

Had it not been for theſe, and the like Rubs and Confuſions, the Turkiſh Army would have been before this time in the Field, tho' not ſo ſtrong perhaps as the laſt Year; for the Aſiatick Militia came ſlowly in, and thoſe in ſmall Numbers; The Grand Vizier marched not with more than 10000 Men from Adrianople, and the Albanians (the beſt of their Soldiery) were ſent to Negropont to guard that Iſland, upon a Report, That the Venetians had another Deſign on that Coaſt. Another Detach-

1692. ment was alſo made of certain Paſha's, with ſome Tartars to the Number of 6000, who were under one of their Sultans appointed to drive the Poles out of Moldavia, and regain the Places which they poſſeſſed, and amongſt theſe, the late Janiſar-Aga, who was diſpoſſeſſed of his Office, was made Seraskier, or General of thoſe Forces. During this Weak Eſtate and Condition of the Turks, an Unhappy Misfortune befel the Turkiſh Fleet, which lay in Nicopolis, and Widin, where 35 great Boats laden with Wheat, and Flour for the Army, were caſt away by Storm.

The Perſian Ambaſſador, who had continued longer at Adrianople, than the Turks deſired, it being neither conſiſtent with their Policy, nor their Riches, to entertain a Gueſt, whoſe Buſineſs was chiefly to diſcover the Decay, and Nakedneſs of their Country, did now about the end of this Month of June begin to think it time to return unto his Maſter, being well enough informed, as he imagined, of the true Eſtate of the Turkiſh Affairs; received his Audience of Congé from the Sultan privately in a Garden, where the Imperial Letters were delivered, and the Capitulations mutually exchanged; and a Preſent made to him of a Horſe richly adorned with Royal Capariſons.

The Marquis of Lorand, arrives from France.

Theſe and ſuch like Troubles retarded the Grand Vizer's March towards Belgrade; by which Diſappointments the Marquis of Lorand had the Fortune to arrive timely at Conſtantinople, and to Diſembark ſecretly, or incognito, from a Tartana, and thence in a Day or two he proceeded to Adrianople, with the Equipage of a Trumpeter, and 10 Servants, all richly cloathed, and his Table nobly furniſhed with Plate. In few Days after his Arrival, he received his Audience of the Grand Vizier in Company with Monſieur de Chateau-neuf, the preſent reſiding Ambaſſador, at which (according to the uſual Cuſtom of the French at all their Audiences) their Buſineſs was to extol the Greatneſs and Power of their Maſter; and to report unto the Turks, That their King had furniſhed King James with a Mighty Fleet, and 30000 Men to Invade England, which were all ready at the time of his Departure to Embark, and conſiſted with Men of War, and Tranſport Ships of more than 600 Sail; the which joyning in England with the contrary Party to that which then Governed; would no doubt carry all before them in that Country, and conſequently cauſe great Confuſions in Holland, and amongſt all the Allies.

His Reports made to the Turkiſh Court.

Moreover that his King was ready to enter into the Field in Perſon, with a moſt formidable Army, (as he had promiſed the Sultan) againſt the Emperor; of the Succeſs of which they would ſpeedily hear from their fortunate King who had ever been Proſperous in all his Enterpriſes; Moreover he added, That all theſe great things the King had done, were to ſupport the Ottoman Empire, which would certainly have been ſtaggering under that Mighty Power of the Allies, had it not been ſupported by the French, and their Forces diverted from the Ottoman Dominions in Hungary; all which the Grand Vizier heard with Pleaſure and Attention, aſſuring the Marquis, and the Ambaſſador, that he never had any Deſign, or Imagination of making a Peace with the Emperor, without the Concurrence of the French. Howſoever the Marquis not knowing how conſtant and firm to their Reſolutions the Turks might be, in caſe that things ſhould ſucceed ill in the Turkiſh Army, or that the Imperialiſts ſhould take Belgrade; he obtained Licence from the Vizier to accompany him to the War, during this Campaign, where he might be ready at hand to oppoſe all Propoſals tending to a Peace, in caſe any Endeavours ſhould be made therein. And in this manner the Grand Vizier departed the 30th of June from Adrianople, towards Belgrade; having pointed out 32 Days March from one Place to the other; beſides Days of Otorack, or Days of Repoſe.

The Vizier promiſes to continue the War.

The Marquis permitted to go to Belgrade.

Reports from the Tartars.

But before the Vizier's Departure, two Mirzes, or Tartarian Noblemen, with ſix other Tartars, arrived at Adrianople, bringing News, That Batter Gherei, one of the Sultan Tartars, had entered into Volbinia a Province belonging to Poland, and had carried away Captive above 30000 Souls; which Rumour was ſpread abroad to encourage the Turks, when in truth there were not above 2000 taken; and farther to give Life to the Soldiery, it was reported, That Adil Gherei the Younger Brother was remaining within the Confines of Valachia, attending his Elder Brother, that they might with a joynt force March into Hungary.

Howſoever to ſecure the Tartars, the Grand Vizier before his Departure from Adrianople diſpatched away three Capugi-Baſhees, with preſſing Commands to the Han of Budziack, to march with all ſpeed to Belgrade, and not to delay their time as they had done the laſt Year, and that they ſhould have a care not to deceive him, for that he depended much on their Forces; but herein the Vizier was not well informed, for the Budziack Tartar could not furniſh more than 3000 Men; and as to the Nogbai Tartar, they were Numerous; but withal, they were ſuch a ſort of Salvage

The Turks repulſed from Portſea.

Creatures, Rebellious, and Diſguſted by the Turks; that no great account could be made of them. Nor yet of Sultan Galgha Prince of Crim Tartary, who was engaged in a War againſt the Coſſacks, and had enough to do to defend himſelf againſt ſuch a Stout and an Active Enemy. Moreover to make the Aſſiſtance of the Tartars the leſs conſiderable this Year, the Tartars rebelled againſt their New Han, in their March towards Belgrade: At firſt this Mutiny appeared only in ſome Diſlikes, which the Principal Tartars ſhowed againſt their New Sultan, the which daily increaſing, came to ſuch a heighth, that the whole Army forſook and left him, and returned in a Body back to Budziack, and were followed ſoon after by the Han himſelf, with ſome of his Menial Servants; the News hereof being brought to the Grand Seignior, and Grand Vizier, they knew not how to carry on the War for this Year; ſo that all the Remedy which remained, was to re-eſtabliſh the Old Han, Selim Gherey, in his Place; the which tho' it pleaſed the Soldiers better, yet by this time the Seaſon was ſo far ſpent, that nothing of moment could be expected to be put in Action for that Year. Some ſmall Matters indeed the Turks did attempt, but always with loſs; in July they Attacked a ſmall, but a ſtrong Fortreſs, called Portſea, near Peter-Waradin; the which was ſo well defended by a Garriſon of Raſcians, that the Turks were ſeveral times repulſed; and at laſt hearing that ſome Imperial Heydukes, and Dragoons, had paſſed the Save, and had cut down great Numbers of Turks, they quitted their deſign on Portſea, and returned back to Belgrade: Howſoever upon better conſideration, concluding that the Place was of ſo high importance, that they might be called into queſtion for quitting the Siege, they returned back again, and on the 5th of Auguſt made another Attack upon the Place, and reſolved to carry it by force of Arms; but News coming, That a ſtrong Body of the Imperial Troops were ſent to relieve the Place, and were already in their March, they quitted the Siege; and being Attacked in the Rear, they left many Dead and Wounded Men behind them.

The Ban of Croatia Attacks the Turks.

About the ſame time the Vice-Ban, or Lieutenant-General of Croatia, having got together a ſtrong Body of 5500 Croats and Raſcians, made an Incurſion towards Meydan; in which Expedition, he not only had the good fortune to releaſe 400 Poor Chriſtians, who were Condemned to Die, and ſhould have been executed the next Day (had they not been ſeaſonably relieved by the Croatians) but to return back with a conſiderable Booty of Cattle, and Moveables, together with ſome principal Turks of Quality and Note, whoſe Houſes and ſtately Buildings they Burnt and Deſtroyed little or nothing more remarkable farther paſſed all this Campaign, unleſs it were a Matter of two conſiderable Convoys ſent to Temeſwaer, the latter of which conſiſted of ſeveral Thouſands of Turks, conducting 100 Waggons and many Camels laden with all neceſſary Proviſions; and ſo having provided the Town for the whole Winter, they returned back to Belgrade. At the ſame time a Body of Raſcians broke into the Morava, and there attacked and beat another Turkiſh Convoy, which carried 200000 Dollars to the Turkiſh Army, which was a brave Booty for the Raſcians; for tho' the Grand Vizier upon the News thereof, had Detached a Body of 10000 Arnauts after them, yet the Prey had given them Wings, and they eſcaped ſafe into their Towns and Garriſons of Refuge.

Auguſt.

The Raſcians take great Booties.

Some later Actions paſſed beſides, but none of great conſequence, expecting that the Turks having a mind to look big, and put a good Face on it towards the latter end of the Campaign, paſſed the Save, to recognize the Imperial Camp at Salankement; but ſo ſoon as the News thereof was brought to the General, a ſtrong Party of Heydukes and Imperial Dragoons, were Detached to meet them; at the noiſe of which the Turks Retired, and therewith the Campaign ended in Hungary: For the Janiſaries being debaſed in their Courages by the ill Succeſs of the laſt Year, refuſed to return into the Field, complaining of the Cowardice of the Spahees, by whom they had been expoſed in open Field, and given up to the Fury of the Enemy, whilſt the Spahees fled, and ſaved themſelves in Belgrade; and the Tartars not returning to the War, gave the Janiſaries juſt cauſe to put an end more early than was accuſtomary, to this Years Campaign; who according to the Military Conſtitutions of the Ottoman Empire, may be obliged to continue in the Field until the 28th of October, but not longer; for in ſuch caſe, if not provided with Winter-Quarters by that Day, the Janiſaries may leave the Camp, againſt the Will and Command of their Generals, and ſhift for themſelves.

The Campaign of the Year 1692 ends.

Poland.

Tho' the Campaign was ended in Hungary, yet ſomething of Action continued in Poland, where on the 27th of September, the Turks Attacked a Fortreſs called Soroka with an Army of 30000 Men, Commanded by the Seraskier Muſtapha Paſha; the ſame conſiſting of 8000 Turks, 2000 under the Paſha of Siliſtria, 6000 under the Hoſpodar of Valachia, 2000 under the General of the Coſſacks, with 12000 Tartars.

The Turks vigorouſly Attack Soroka.

With this Army, (as we ſay) Muſtapha Paſha Inveſted this ſmall Fortreſs, which was defended by a Garriſon of 600 Men, with moſt of which, the Governour made a Sally on the ſame Day that the Enemy came before it, and killed about 80 of the Beſiegers, and ſo returned to the Fort, having firſt burnt the Suburbs, to prevent the Enemy from taking Shelter therein. So inconſiderable a Fort as this, which might have been taken by this Powerful Army with open Breaſts without the Methods of Trenches and Approaches, was now Inveſted with all the Formalities of a Siege: For the firſt Night the Turks began their Trenches, and to throw Bombs into the Place, and to raiſe a Battery of Great Guns, which they plyed for three or four Days and Nights continually.

Is well defended.

On the 1ſt of October they advanced their Trenches to the Ditch-ſide; the which having filled up, they ſtormed the Fortreſs, but were repulſed with the loſs of 600 Men; notwithſtanding which, they made a ſecond Attempt, and entered the City, and Burnt it; but being again beaten out of it, they continued the following Day to Fire without ceaſing for the ſpace of three or four Days; by which time, tho' great Breaches were made, yet the Beſieged with indefatigable Induſtry repaired in the Night, what the Enemies had ruined in the Day.

October.

The Turks repulſed.

On the 5th and 6th the Turks took Poſt in the Ditch, and endeavoured to fortifie themſelves there; but the Beſieged Sallying out, diſlodged them from thence, the Turks howſoever recruiting themſelves with freſh Forces, recovered their Poſt; and having drained out all the Water from the Ditch, they encompaſſed the Fortreſs round on all ſides, throwing thereinto Bombs, Carcaſſes, Stink-Pots, and other Artificial Fires: But neither theſe, nor Batteries availing to terrifie the Beſieged, the Turks applied themſelves to ſink Mines; which the Beſieged having diſcovered, made ſome of them uſeleſs by Countermines; howſoever the Turks intending to Storm the Place on the 9th of that Month, fired one of their Mines early that Morning, which threw down part of the Wall, and immediately they began to Storm the Place, which the Beſieged withſtood for four Hours together, driving the Turks from the Walls, as often as they advanced, and planted their Colours thereupon. In this Action the Beſieged took three Standards, and killed 800 of the Enemy; and proſecuting this Succeſs, they drove them out of moſt of their Poſts and Lodgments, with the loſs of 1000 of their Men; and having gained ſix Enſigns, they returned with Joy and Triumph to their Fortreſs.

1692.

October.

Raiſe the Siege.

This Vigorous Defence ſo aſtoniſhed the Turks, and cauſed them to deſpair of taking the Fortreſs; that ſilently in the Night they raiſed their Camp with ſo much Precipitation, that they left behind them two Great Guns, and three Mortar-pieces, with much Ammunition and Proviſions.

The next Morning being the 11th of the Month, the Beſieged Sallying out, found no Enemy near them: The Action was very ſtrange, and almoſt Miraculous, conſidering that the Turks had loſt more than 4000 Men, and the Chriſtians had 150 Killed, and 120 Wounded; the Turks had an Army of 30000 Men to oppugne the Caſtle, and the Chriſtians no more than 600 to defend it: And with this Action the Campaign ended, as well in Poland, as in Hungary.

After the Death of Sir William Huſſey, who Died, as we have ſaid, the laſt Year at Belgrade; William King of England, &c. immediately diſpatched away Mr. Herbert, in Quality of Ambaſſador to the Grand Seignior, with Orders to reaſſume the Mediation of Peace between the Emperor, and his Allies, with the Sultan, and not to loſe the preſent Opportunity, which looked favourable in regard to both ſides.

Mr. Herbert ſent Ambaſſador to the Turks.

Mr. Herbert had very little time given him to provide himſelf for ſo great an Undertaking and Journey over Land; and tho' he was often afflicted with the Gout, and not very well at eaſe, when he begun ſo long a Journey, yet being a Man of a great Spirit, he forced himſelf, that he might not loſe the Merit and Honour of being the Inſtrument of procuring that Peace between the Emperor, and the Sultan, in which all Europe was concerned: the Turks being then very low, and much debaſed in their Spirits, ſeemed flexible and inclinable to a Peace: And not to loſe this favourable Conjuncture, the Journey of Mr. Herbert was preſſed with all the haſte imaginable; but what with the Fatigue of the Journey, and the Unquietneſs of his Mind for being obſtructed in a Negotiation ſo much deſired by him, he became ſo violently Attacked by the Gout, that he was forced to yield unto his Diſtemper, and lay himſelf up for ſome Months at Frankfort, ſo that it was March before his Arrival at Vienna, and far in the Month of April before his Departure from thence; during which time I received two Letters from him, the chief ſubſtance of which was to complain of his want of Health, and of the little appearance of a

Peace

1692. Peace between the Emperor and the Turks; they deſpiſing (as he ſaid) all the Overtures that had been made to them, which had ſerved only to exalt the French Ambaſſador, and to keep the Turks from a Peace, who imagined that ſuch Inſtances would never have been made for Peace, had the Chriſtians not been droven to Extremities and want of Power to ſupport and continue a War: Howſoever Mr. Herbert, in Obedience to His Majeſty's Commands, reſolved to proceed, and try his Fortune; and being furniſhed by the Emperor, the Venetians, and the King of Poland, with their Conditions reſpectively, on the which they were contented to eſtabliſh the Foundation of Peace, he took his way down the Danube, which was the moſt convenient Paſſage for a Perſon labouring under his Diſtemper: And on this occaſion, I have thought fit to Inſert the Propoſitions offered from the Allies unto the Turks, which are theſe which follow. 1692.

Sacra Cæſarea & Regia Majeſtas Dominus noſter Clementiſſimus, ut ſincero affectu & magno æſtimio Sereniſſimi & Potentiſſimi Magnæ Britanniæ Regis & Præpotentium Dominorum Generalium Ordinum Fœderati Belgij ad promovendam pacem cum Porta Ottomannica officia ſibi oblata acceptat, ita quemadmodum ſummâ etiam in fortuna, & geminatis victoriis pacem honeſtam & tutam æquis conditionibus inire deſideravit & etiamnum inire parata eſt; Nos juſſit Excellentiſſimum Dominum Legatum Angliæ ad Portam Ottomannam proficiſcentem ſuper hoc negotio Pacis Viennæ jam inchoato, de ejuſdem proceſſu, & ubi hærere cœperit, plene informare, ſimulque ejuſdem Cæſaream mentem circa ea quæ adhuc facienda reſtant, ut Pax intentata coaleſcere poſſit adaperire.

Et quia hæc Propoſitio Turcica poſterior generalem dictorum locorum cedendorum vel retinendorum continet ſpecificationem, omnia verò de locorum appertinentiis, formâ ac modo cedendi reticet, certum eſt, & hanc ipſam Propoſitionem ulteriorem ſingulorum diſcuſſionem requirere: Super quo cùm ſufficiens tractandi materia reſtaret, ad facilitandam dicti tractatus reaſſumptionem cum Turcis, poſt factam prædictæ Propoſitionis Turcicæ Fœderatis communicationem & expectata deſuper eorum ſenſa, Cæſarei Commiſſarii, revocatis ad hunc finem Pottendorffium ſæpe dictis Ablegatis Turcicis, reſponſum ſuum ad latus dictæ Propoſitionis Turcicæ ſub nominato C. ſcripto exhibuerunt: Quod reſponſum ſæpe memorati Ablegati Turcici eo prætextu quod nihil novi in ſe contineret, & tam prima quam poſterior eorum Propoſitio olim exhibita, mutatâ interim rerum facie evanuiſſet & ſibi nulla amplius tractandi & concludendi tractatûs facultas ſupereſſet, acceptare recuſârunt; reprehenſi poſtea deſuper ſe reſponſum Cæſareum ſuſcepturos, abſque tamen eo quod & illi deſuper iterum reſponderent, ſe offerre; præteritum verò errorem per id excuſare cœperunt, quod gravius ſibi viſum fuerit, acceptare Cæſareum reſponſum, & ad id non replicare, quam deficiente ſibi tractandi facultate illius acceptionem ab initio ſtatim deprecari.

1692.

‘Ad Appendicem Cæſarea ex parte præſupponitur quod, Turcis in ſuis exhibitionibus reſpectu Fœderatorum Sereniſſimorum Regis Poloniæ, & Reipublicæ Venetæ exhibitis permanentibus, magna Pacis facilitandæ ratio apparitura ſit, quamvis deſuper cum iis potiſſimum tranſigendum maneat.

‘Si velit Magnus Viſirius tractatum inire, ea conditione, ut unicuique Imperio maneant acquiſita, quomodo ſe gerere debeant Legati, nulla Fœderatorum mentione factâ, quæritur.

Instructions for the English and Holland Ambaſſadors, in reſpect to the Three Allies, Vienna, April 12th. 1692.

Collaudato Excellentiſſimi Domini Legati Angliæ & Dominorum Ablegatorum Angliæ & Hollandiæ de Re Chriſtiana bene merendi ſyncero ſtudio & prudenti de amovendis obſtaculis, quæ negotium creditum morari vel turbare poſſent, ſuſcepta curâ ad puncta oblata reſpondendum duxerunt Deputati ad hoc Cæſarei Miniſtri.

Ad Primum.

Ad Secundum.

Ad Tertium.

‘Pacis Conditiones acceptandas deducat.

Ad Quartum.

Excellentiſſimi ac Illuſtriſſimi Domini!

Domini Gratioſiſſimi,

QUALITER Maritus meus Eccleſiæ Evangelicæ Rolanii quondam Miniſter, non obſtante eo, quod ibidem omnes ſint nobiles, & libera Religionis Evangelicæ facultate ab antiquo fruantur, ex inquieta Cleri ſubordinatione (de quo contra authoritatem ſuæ Majeſtatis Sereniſſimæ inſurgendo nec cogitare quidem unquam quiſquam poterit) aliqui vagabundi Hungari pluſquam more prædonico, nocturno quietis tempore, cum ſclopetorum diſploſionibus irruendo; cum eorum propter ejuſdem loci inhabitatorum confluxum 1692. & tumultum capi non potuiſſet, brachiali tandem Germanorum militum aſſiſtentia, nocturno pariter tempore, per eoſdem Hungaros, & certos Cleros, miſere captus, vinculatus, huc & illuc ad diverſa loca, ad inſtar canum, deductus, pede tenuſque ſuſpenſus, & ineffabilibus cruciatibus afflictus, omnibuſque bonis privatus, ad diros Eminentiſſ. D. Cardinalis à Kolonitz carceres Sabarienſes, in deſpectum ſtatus Evangelici, publico ſpectaculo expoſitus, lamentabiliter deductus ſit, quin Excellentiis Veſtris jam innoteſcat, non dubito. Quo propter prædicationem Verbi Divini, à ſua Majeſtate Sereniſſima diætaliter clementiſſime conceſſam, ſatis crudeliter capto, vinculato, duriſſimiſque aliquot centenarum plagarum verberibus multis vicibus afflicto, & omnibus bonis privato: Ego in miſera jam ſorte conſtituta, eoque magis, quod jammodo ſub prætextu homicidii contra ſanam Conſcientiam à nonnullis apud Auguſtam Aulam ipſi innocentiſſimo Sanguini adſcripti, (ac ſi, inquam, tempore prioris tumultus, aliquis ex illis nocturnis latronibus, quod alias omnes omnino omni jure promeriti fuiſſent, interfectus fuiſſet; cum illi ex adverſo ipſos inhabitatores potius ejuſdem loci globo trajecerint, & sauciaverint:) Et in præſentiarum in Eminent. D. Cardinalis carcerum Sabarienſium ſqualore, ad inſtar principalium notabiliumque latronum vel beſtiarum, pedibus manibuſque concatenatis & vinculatis, ſine ulla crudelitatis remiſſione detineatur, & tractetur, nec non durioribus verberibus, miniſque variis aggravetur, & territetur, ſicque ad fidem contrariam amplectendam, contra diploma Regium indies crudelius compellatur: Sed vel maxime, quod jam nec liberi, imo nullus noſtrum acceſſum ad eum ſub gravi animadverſione & indignatione amplius habere poſſint, panemque piorum Chriſtianorum Commiſeratione oſtiatim mendicando acquiſitum, nec per alium aliquem ipſi porrigere permittant: Et quod majus, centum adhuc imperiales multis minis & terriculamentis extorquere à miſero non deſinant: Omnium ſolatiorum medio deſtituta, & jamjam deſperabunda, ſpe adhuc in Gratioſa Excell. veſtrarum Commiſerationis dexteritate repoſita, cum miſerrimis meis liberis derelictis preces noſtras ad earundem Excellentiarum Veſtrarum ſinum Miſericordiæ genu flexo dirigimus, per viſcera miſericordiæ Divinæ, & vulnera Chriſti, omni ſubjectionis humilitate orantes, dignentur nos, omni jam eliberationis & ſolatiorum medio deſtitutos, & miſere derelictos, propterque prædicationem verbi Divini ſic preſſos; ſos, in eundem miſericordiæ ſinum gratioſe ſuſcipere. Et cum hoc Sacræ ſuæ Majeſtatis hæc fuerit intentio, ut Miniſtri Evangelico-Eccleſiaſtici verbo ſuo Regio priori Religionis profeſſioni & exercitio revocati, & integre reſtituti, clandeſtina tyrannica aliqua modalitate vel crudelitate perſequantur, & ad normam multorum jam Prædicantium his quoque præterlapſis temporibus captorum, & ad mutationem uſque Religionis duriter tractatorum, omnium cruciatuum generibus iterum, iterumve affligantur, diſſipentur, & exſtirpentur: Verum ut afflictio eorum nova gaudii viciſſitudine ſuppleatur, ſub benigniſque Sereniſſimæ ſuæ Majeſtatis Alis quietam vitam, & functionis, profeſſioniſque libertatem ſecurius habere poſſint, pro ſublatis ulterioribus exceſſibus, diſſenſionibus, & malis, in negotio Religionum ſuboriendis, auctoritatem complanationis ſibi diplomatice quam clementiſſime reſervarit, & non alicui Contra-parti vindicationem conceſſit: Ex ea etiam fiduciæ certitudine eædem Excellentiæ Veſtræ gratioſa apud ſuam Majeſtatem Sereniſſimam interpoſitione miſeriis noſtris ſuccurrere, jugumque preſſuræ contra auctoritatem Regiam tam crudeliter illatum tollere, & maritum meum in carcerum ſqualore ita lamentabiliter patientem, per eandem Dei miſericordiam & ſalutem eliberationis ſolatio ſublevare ne graventur. Propter quod genus miſericordiæ ſummus ille miſericors Deus ex ſumma Deitatis miſericordia, miſericorditer ut iiſdem Excellentiis Veſtris cumulatiſſime benedicat & proſperet. Eundem fundendis precibus noſtris aſſiduis implorare non ſimus intermiſſuri.

Earundem Excell. Veſt.

Humillima Ancilla,
Prædicantis Poſſeſſionis Polanii mœſtiſſima Cenſors, cum miſerrimis liberis,

Excellentiſſime Domine.

Domine mihi Gratioſiſſime,

‘BENIGNE recordabitur Excellentia veſtra queruloſæ ac genuinæ expoſitionis afflictiſſimæ ſortis meæ, eidem Excellentiæ veſtræ ante complures dies medio ſupplicis libelli humillime factæ: Qualiter nempe Præpoſitus Sabarienſis circa feſtum S. Joannis Baptiſtæ non pridem tranſactum, miſſis certo numero ad locum ordinariæ Reſidentiæ meæ in Poſſeſſione Polanii (alias more nobilitari) habitæ Germanicis militibus, datiſque mandatis, me capi, diverſimode excruciari, percuti, pedibuſque ſuſpendi, ſicque ineffabilibus cruciatibus affectum ad Arcem Sabarienſem ſub juriſdictione Eminentiſſimi Principis Cardinalis à Kolonitz conſtitutam, deductum, ac compedibus vinctum, aliquot centenarum plagarum verberibus ſauciatum, manibus fractis, aliiſque corporis mei membris concuſſis ad ſqualidos carceres conjici curaſſet, ubi impræſentiarum miſerrime detineret.

Hujus Membri ſtatutione clariſſima licet, & perconfirmati etiam Artic. 11. 1647. per expreſſa verba: Ne Evangelici ſtatus Catholicis Plebanis, & è converſo ſtatus Catholici Evangelicis Miniſtris ad ullas ſolutiones præſtandas ſint obligati:

‘Adhæc quoad Stolarum proventus & penſiones allegati 12 Articuli Ann. 1647. immediate ſubſequentia formalia:

Stolares autem proventus, ſeu ſolutiones, in quibuſvis locis Plebani Catholici & Miniſtri Evangelici à ſuæ Religionis auditoribus totaliter percipiant: ' Adhuc magis elucidatiore exiſtente, ac unicuique partium convenientes ſuas penſiones attribuente, adeoque Evangelicos ab omni prorſus ſolutionis obligamine, Clero & Plebanis Catholicis fienda abſolute exemptos pronunciante.

' Minus tamen nihilo Commiſſiones Regiæ ubique in Comitatibus (extra duo ſaltem in quovis Comitatu deſignata loca) omnes ſolutiones Plebanis Catholicis addixerunt: In Civitatibus vero, ubi etiam liberum exercitium permiſſum, ut ex Fiſco, ſeu Communi Civitatum ærario (ad quem reſpectu pluralitatis Evangelicorum Catholici minimum quantum contribuerent) ipſis Plebanis, ſeu Parochis Catholicis ſolutio fiat, & Evangelici tam Miniſtris, quam etiam Scholæ doctoribus ſuis extraordinarie ex propriis proſpiciant, contra præſcriptum manifeſtum Articulum conſtituerunt, cui abuſivæ Conſtitutioni ubilibet locorum ipſi Plebani & Clerus potenter inſiſterent, & via facti quaſlibet ſolutiones, ac univerſos ſtolares proventus pro ſe indifferenter tam in Comitatibus, quam etiam omnibus Civitatibus exigerent.

' Inde Officiales etiam ſæpe fati Dominii Rakocziani in Superiori Hungaria indiſcriminatim nobiles pariter, & ignobiles Evangelicos brachio quoque militari ad ſolutionem Plebanis in eodem Dominio pendendam omni conatu adigunt.

' Quæ cum contra poſitivam Articuli hujus determinationem facta eſſent, adeoque cum maximo etiam ejuſdem & inibi allegatorum abuſu per Plebanos Catholicos erga Evangelicos univerſim practicarentur.

' Inde hoc in paſſu ad præſcriptum Articulum & ſuas leges provocantes apud Majeſtatem veſtram Sacratiſſimam demiſſiſſime inſtamus, quatenus virtute harum omnes Evangelicos ab omni prorſus ſolutione Parochis Catholicis præſtanda immunes pronunciare, ac ut quilibet ſtatus ſuos ſibi ſervientes interteneat, & exſolvat, iiſdem etiam ſuos pendat ſtolares proventus, Clementiſſima, juſtitiæque conſona ordinatione decernere dignetur.

' Unde in Comitatu Lyptovienſi Parochi & Plebani aliquot talium, Nobilium Domos per Milites Arcis Lykava invadi & expilari curarunt.

Oratio

Oratio ad Cæſarem Leopoldum Maximum, Wiennæ in ſpeciali audientia die 22 Junii, Ann. 1690. circa horam 8. Veſpertinam habita, pro ſtatu Evangelico Hungarico, & nominatim pro Comitatu Thuroczienſi, per Generoſum D. Paulum Okoliczani dicta & inſtituta, adſtantibus egregiis Joanne Scredy, & Paulo Sallay, ejuſdem ſtatus Evangelici Ablegatis.

‘ADMISSI ad Auguſtum Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ conſpectum, quod ipſi afflictiones noſtras proprii oris Miniſterio in benignum ſinum effundere poſſimus, primum hoc nomine nobis gaudemus: poſtea, quod Majeſtatem veſtram Sacratiſſimam ſalvam & incolumen nobis, infimis licet, attamen fidelibus ſubditis intueri, contemplarique Deus conceſſit, nomine Principalium noſtrorum Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ in lætitiam effuſi gratulamur. Oramus etiam ejus Divinam Majeſtatem ut, qua Omnipotenti Cœlica ope hactenus univerſis Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ adfuit Regiis negotiis, eadem impoſterum quoque victricibus armis, & fortibus militibus adeſſe velit, ut conculcatis univerſis ad ultimum hoſtibus, tandem ad tranquillum amœnæ Pacis portum ex belli fluctibus cum fidelibus populis ſuis emergere poſſit.

‘lia ibi ſubſcripſerit, quæ in apricum devenire indecens eſſet. Dum tamen legeretur, & publicaretur idem Mandatum, quantum animadvertere potuimus, in hæc verba eſſe obſervavimus: Intellexiſſe nimirum Majeſtatem veſtram quomodo Prædicantes noſtri (quos illi ita per contemptum vocant) per Arces, per Caſtella, per Domos, & ſic conſequenter evagentur: Quomodo in Parochias eorum involent: Quomodo ſacra eorum turbent, & ſuo ritu Evangelico populis adminiſtrent: Quomodo (quod ſcelus nefaſque eſt, noſtra Religione indignum) Nobiles æque ac ignobiles ad ſeditionem diſponant, & hinc nos Magnates, Nobiles, & Ignobiles concitatos neque Templa frequentare velle, neque feſta celebrare velle, neque aliquid illis ſolvere velle, imo ſuſque deque contra Articulos, contra ordinationem Commiſſionis facere omnia. Quorum enumeratorum veluti minima leviſſimaque pars certo reſpectu & conſideratione legum vera eſſe poteſt, ita potior eorum pars falſa & ſiniſtra eſt. Verum id quidem eſt, nos illis nihil ſolvere, ſed id non facimus temere, verum beneficio ſacri diplomatis & Articulorum Sopronienſium, qui expreſſe dictant: Evangelicum Catholico, & contra Catholicum Evangelico nihilo teneri. Quod celebrationem feſtorum ſiniſtrum eſt, quippe ſiquid propria laus valeret, auderem dicere Majori nos Communia feſta celebrare obſervatione, quam illos, qui ſæpe (& ſi illos accuſatum non veni) leviſſimo munuſculo corrupti diebus feſtis craſſos permittant labores. Non nego unum alterumve eſſe feſtum, quod Religio noſtra non recepit; tamen & his diebus à craſſioribus abſtinendo laboribus conſulto ita nos gerimus, ne illis nos criminandi anſa ſuperſit. Porro ubi de non frequentatione Templorum ajunt, verum dicunt, quia omnia ademerant: Ne unum quidem ergo cum ſit, quod frequentare permittant pro libertate noſtræ Religionis, inter reliquos divinos ritus noſtros pro incolumitate Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ ſub dio etiam orare ſolemus. Quod de ſeditione dicunt, quemadmodum Maximum ac ſiniſtrum eſt, ita injurioſiſſimum, ac niſi docuerint, quæ accuſant, talione pœnæ compenſandum. Nuper in Generali Congregatione, ubi Clerus, noſtri accuſatores, frequenti numero aderant, publice proteſtati ſumus, ut, quis ſit ille ſeditioſus, denominent, nos eſſe futuros primos, qui capiemus, & quo Majeſtas veſtra Sacratiſſima juſſerit, aut ducemus, aut juſto juris ordine ſervato puniemus. Sed nonnihil tacentes poſtea publice profeſſi ſunt, ſe de ſeditione apud Majeſtatem veſtram neminem accuſaſſe. Ad extremum, non ut contra Articulos Sopronienſes quidquam patraremus, quin potius propterea hæc omnia patimur, quod Ordinationibus Commiſſionum non acquieſcentes à tenore & beneficio legis nos abſtrahi non permittamus.

Hæc illa ſunt, Auguſtiſſime Imperator, conficta crimina, quorum cauſſa neque citati, neque auditi, à Majeſtate veſtra Sacratiſſima tamen capi jubemur.

Ad hæc Cæſar repoſuit:

De cætero Vobis, veſtriſque Principalibus, Cæſareo-Regia Gratia noſtra propenſi manemus.

‘ Hæc elocuta ſua Majeſtate Sacratiſſima viciſſim Ablegatus ait:

Sereniſſime Imperator, periculum noſtrum, in quo jam Principales mei facto ipſo conflictantur, moram non patitur; ac proinde per omnia Dei Sacra, & per omnia jura regalia obteſtor, ut Majeſtas veſtra Sacratiſſima benigne, & quidem cito ſuccurrat.

Imperator reſpondit: Jam, jam erit.

Sacratiſſima Cæſarea Regiaque Majeſtas.

1692.

Monſieur,

Le vingtiéme du mois paſſé arriva icy devant la ville une Tartane de Marſeille, avec des Lettres expreſſement depechées de la part de la Cour de France pour l'Ambaſſadeur d'icelle, qui reſide icy. Le dit Ambaſſadeur fit un peu aprés ſcavoir au Caimacam Paſcià, que l'armée Royalle ſons la conduite du Duc de Luxembourg avoit touta fait battu l'armé des Etats des Provinces Unies, avec la perte de tout leur bagage, artillerie, & amunition de guerre: Combien qu'elle fut un peu auparavant renforcée de vingt mille Alemans: Et que la Flotte Froncoiſe, aprés avoir cherchée & trouvée l'es Flottes des Anglois & Hollandois combinées dans le Canal, lés avoit attaquées & miſes en fuitte, avec la perte de vingt vaiſſeaux de guerre, pris ou ruinez. Il y adjouta encor beaucoup des autres nouvelles inventées, receues de Allemagne, Angleterre, Ecoſſe, Irlande, & Savoye: Les quelles furent debitées entre la populace avec une telle vray ſemblance, que la pluſpart les creurent étre abſolument veritables.

En ſuitte de cela demanda le dit Ambaſſadeur la permiſſion de fair publiquement des feux de joye: & la commodité de la poſſe pour un gentilhomme, qu'il diſoit étre expreſſement envoyé du Roy ſon Maitre, pour communiquer ces nouvelles au Grand Vizir. On luy accorda l'un ſecrettement, & l'autre ouvertement: & parce que je n'avois receu le moindre âvis de tout celà, ny de l'état des autres affairs de la Chrétienté, je ne pouvois rien faire contre le debite de ces nouvelles. Mais cette joye ne dura pas longtems; mais ſeulement juſques au 22. quand il arriva icy un expreſſe du Grand Vizir: & peu apres le Caimacam Padiſcià me fit tenir deux de vos Lettres tres civiles du 4 & 6 du mois paſſé d' Aout, bien Seellées & conditionnées, avec les Lettres des Meſſieurs les Etats Generaux, & des autres. Par celleſcy j'appris la conquête abſolve d' Irlande, & la treraitte du Roy Jaques en France. Je ne doute pas, ſi le Roy Guillaume pourroit encor cette étée employer ſes forces contre la France, que cette campagne ſe termineroit heureſement pour les Alliez.

Les Batailles ont été aſſez rudes & difficiles: Mais puiſque le Prince de Waldecq a remiſe l'armée des Etats en meilleur état le 24 de Juillet, qu'elle ne fut devant la bataille, & qu'il même en a donné avis aux Etats, qu'il vouloit le 27 chercher l'ennemy, & luy livrer bataille de nouveau: &, que les Flottes d' Angleterre & d' Hollande ſont en état de ſe remettre bien tôt en mer, j'eſpere, que nous en aurons en peu de tems des bonnes nouvelles, comme auſſi des armées des Alliez, principalement de cella de Savoye, que je croy & conſidere comme la principalle.

Je ſuis en cela du même ſentiment, que V. Excel. que la France ſuccomberà tôt ou tard, qu'elle ſe remue, tant qu'elle veuille; & principalement, quand toutes les Forces d'Angleterre ſe jetteront ſur elle. J'ay fait une ouverture de tout celà, & de tout ce, qui me parût etre utile aux nos affaires, au Grand Vizier: & je l'ay exhorté dienvoyer plein pouvoir aux Miniſtres de la Porte, qui ſont a Comarom, de traitter & conclurre la Paix, ou la treſue, avec les Imperiaux: En quel ces je l'aſſurois, que V. Exc. & l'Envoyé d' Angleterre diregeroient ſelon les ordres du Roy & des Etats l'affaire de telle ſorte, que cette guerre ſi ſanglante ſeroit bien tôt heureuſement terminée d'une on d'autre maniere, avec ſatisfaction & au contentement des Parties. J'adjoutois encor à tout cela la feibleſſe de la France, & le grand peril, que ce Roya-Court: & j'ay luy remontré de nouveau, & aſſuré, que le Roy, pour eviter ſa totale ruine, ſollicite continuellement ſous main le Pape & la Republique de Veniſe, pour obtenir la Paix par leur interceſſion: & par Conſequence, qu'il ſoit tems, que les principaux Miniſtres de la Porte ouvrent enfin les yeux, & que ſe reſſouvenans de la perfidie des Francois tant de fois eprouvée contre tous les contracts faits avec la Porte, ils ayent enfin une horreur de cette nation perfide & trompeuſe, qui ne cherche rien d'autre choſe, que ſon prope interêt, & qui ne ſe ſoncie point des plaintes des leurs Alliez, formées ſur le dementy de leur parole, honneur, & ſermens, quand elle peut Seulement parvenir au bout de leur deſſeins. J'ay auſſi donné avis au grand Vizir de la reſtitution & du renforcement des Armées des Etats par terre, & par mer: & l'ay parfaitement informé del état des Armées des Alliez ſur le Rhin, & la Meuſe, dans le Pays Bas, la Savoye, Catalogue, & le Milanois, & principalement de la victoire remportée en Irlande. J'ay envoyé cette lettre par poſte au Camp des Turcs: & j'en attens la reponce avant encor que je ferme celle cy, afin de la communiquer à V. Excel.

Le Caimacam Paſcia me demanda, aux quelles conditions je croiois qu'on pourroit faire une Paix: Sur celà je luy remontray le vray interêt de ſon Maitre, & dis, que j'attois d'opinion, qu'on feroit la tréve à cette condition, que chacum retiendroit, ce, qu'il poſſede. Ce Caimacam eſt aſſez porté pour la paix, mais il depend tout du Grand Vizir: C'eſt pourquoy qu'il faudrà attendre ſa reponce ſur ma derniere, pour ſcavoir ſa reſolution la deſſus. Mais je ne m'imagine pas, que cette cour ferà queſque choſe dans cette affair ay, devant que la Campagne ſera finie; parce que les trouppes des Imperiaux dans ces quartiers là ſont ſi peu conſiderables, & celles des Turcs fort nombreuſes, d'autant plus, que le Grand Vizir ait deſia mis le Siege avec ſon Armée de vant Nizze, & que le Tökely joint avec les Turcqs ait fait une invaſion dans la Tranſylvanie avec une terrible Maſſacre des Trouppes Imperiales, & la priſe de leur General Heiſler, du Marquis Doria, & du Comte Magni, avec beaucoup des autres Officiers: Joignez-y la priſe de Widin. Tout celà cauſerà un tres grand changement dans les traittez de Paix, & dans les affaires. On a au commencement traitté cette Nation, comme tout a fait abatue, & vaincue: Juſques à ce, qu'on oſoit pretendre d'elle le tribut: Ce qu'irrita les Turcs de telle ſorte, qu'etans au deſeſpoir ils ſe ſont portez à une vigoureuſe defence: & on aurà à faire de les remettre à la raiſon, ſi la Campagne ſe termine pour eux ſi heureuſement, comme elle êt commencée. Connoiſſant donc, combien il importe au Roy d' Angleterre & aux Etats, que cette guerre ſoit finie, je ne laiſſeray pas d'avertir V. Excell. de tems en tems de tout ce, que s'y paſſe.

Le 25 du mois paſſé, quand toutes les preparations étoient faittes par l' Ambaſſadeur de Francoiſe pour les rejouiſſances publiques, le Caimacam, étant mieux informé, fit defence aux Muſiciens de s'en aller au palais du dit Ambaſſadeur: & ainſi diſparut toute cette joye Francoiſe; de ſorte qu'on alluma ſeulement quelques centaines des lampes, & qu'ondechargea troſfois quelques pierriers retirez des barques Francoiſes, mis dans la baſſecourt du dit hôtel. Cette Ceremonie ſe finit à huit heures du ſoir: & le jour ſuivant l'Ambaſſadeur fit ôter tout cet appareil à l'inſtance Serieuſe du Caimacam: Mais il ne peut pas digerer cela, ſans en montrer ſon mecontentement, & chagrin.

Sept. 1690.

AYANT achevé calle-cy juſques là, & deſtitué d'une occaſion favorable de l'envoyer à V. Excell. je receus le 29 par mon dragoman, qui revenoit du Campement Turcq une Lettre du Grand Chancelier de cett' Empire. Il in écrit, que le Premier Vizir avoit receu ma Lettre avec les Relations, qui y etoient jointes, du 25 d' Août, & qu'il l'avoit leue avec beaucoup de plaiſir & ſatisfaction, ſans s'expliquer d'avantage: Mais il y adjoute ſeulement, que le Grand Vizir me prie de luy faire ce plaiſir de l'informer doreſenavant de tems en tems de tout ce, qui ſe paſſera dans la Chrétienté. Cette reponce me fait juger (ſauf un meilleur jugement) que le Grand Vizir attendrà juſques à la fin de cette Campagne, & qu'il prendrà ſes meſures, ſelon le ſucces de ſes entrepriſes, & de celles des Armées des Alliez: & qu' après il formerà la deſſus ſes reſolutions de faire la Paix, ou de continuer la guerre.

Le 9 Sept. ſe rendit la ville de Nizza par accord au Grand Vizir: & le 16. l'Armée decampa & marcha vers Semendria. On m'a averty, que le Grand Vizir voyant le miſerable état des Trouppes Imperialles qui ſe trouvent ſur les frontieres, étoit de reſolution d'attaquer Belgrado. V. Excell. jugerà aiſement, ayant connoiſſance parfaitte de l'humeur & naturel des Turcqs, combiens les affaires ſe changeront par ces heureus ſucces. Je ſeray neanmoins tout mon poſſible de diſpoſer le Grand Vizir à embraſſer la Paix, auſſitôt qu'il Sera de retour dans les Quartiers d'hyver. Mais j'ay beſoin pour celà des nouvelles inſtructions. Quelque avantage remporté ſur les Francois contribueroit beaucoup pour mettre cette Nation à raiſon. Si céla ſe peut faire, il ſerà treſutile, que V. Excell. m'avertiſſe de mois en mois par la voye d'Hongrie de tout ce, qui ſe paſſe dans la Chrétienté, envoyant la duplique par Veniſe. Quand les Trouppes Turcques ſeront dans leurs Quartiers d'hyver, j'eſpere, que j'auray la Commodité d'entretenir cette correſpondance avec V. Excell. par la voye de la Valachie. Je demeure, &c.

Sacratiſſima Cæſarea Regiaque Majeſtas, Domine Domine Clementiſſime.

Auguſtiſſime Imperator,

CUM graviſſimo ſatis Cordolio neceſſitor Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ humillime detegere, quomodo & qualiter afflictiſſimum Hungariæ Regnum in ultima ſua gemat calamitate, ubi jam à viginti & amplius annis hæc miſerrima patria tot bellorum motibus adeo exhauſta, & deſolata, & conquaſſata eſt; ut, ſi ſingula notarentur, in eorundem enumeratione non horæ, aut dies, verum anni cum magnorum voluminum conſcriptione requirerentur: Jam ex infinitis Regni hujus calamitatibus ſolummodo hæc pauca ſubnecto: Quod, poſtquam Anno 1683. ante Septennium evoluto Chriſtiani nominis hoſtis Turca totam Hungariam exceptis aliquot arcibus in fidelitate Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ perſiſtentibus ſui juris feciſſet, ac ipſam Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ reſidentiam, urbem inquam Viennam, obſediſſet, explicari non poteſt, quot millia animarum in Comitatibus Moſonienſi, Sopronienſi, Jaurinenſi, Veſzprimienſi, Comaronienſi trucidaverit, aut in diram abduxerit captivitatem. Oppida & pagos centenos incineravit; Arces, caſtella, curias igne conſumpſit; verbo; milliones damnorum fecit. Quibus peractis, cum Do adjuvante, victricibus Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ ac aliorum Principum Chriſtianorum armis idem hoſtis à Vienna repulſus fuiſſet, quænam damna amicus quoque exercitus Hungariæ intulerit, nemo etiam diſertiſſimus ſatis deſcribere valebit. Nam plurimi pagi totaliter incinerati; incolæ omnibus bonis ſpoliati ac trucidati ſunt: & quod acerbius fuit, illi iidem, qui propter fidelitatem à Turcis in nihilum quaſi redacti fuere, ad ſolvendas tamen contributiones, & ſuſtinenda hyberna quarteria adacti ſunt: Quum tamen vicinæ Auſtriæ ſimiliter ruinatæ ad aliquot annos exemptio data ſit: Quo beneficio Hungariæ partibus à Turca obſervatam fidelitatem totaliter incineratis præter unicum Moſonienſem Comitatum frui non licuit, ſed ad inſtar aliorum contribuere debuerunt, prout hoc in toto illo tractu ſupra Sopronium ſito factum eſt. His acceſſit fames horribilis, ubi comprobari poteſt, homines fame enectos à Sociis inaudito hactenus exemplo devoratos fuiſſe. Poſt hæc ſecuta eſt immenſarum portionum ſolutio: Ubi ſolvi ‘etiam debebat pro iis, qui numquam in rerum natura fuerunt: Quæ in tantum excrevit, ut poſtquam omnem ſuam ſubſtantiam miſeri incolæ proportionibus ſolviſſent, filios ſuos, & filias Turcis vendere coacti ſint, ut ab exſecutione militari ſe liberarent: Qui omnes ad Othomannicam perfidiam tranſiere. Sed cum nec hoc ſufficeret, tandem afflictiſſimi ſubditi charas conjuges ſuas & filias militibus ad illas violandas præbuerunt, & vendiderunt, ut ſaltem aliquod liceret eiſdem habere reſpirium. Hinc adulteria, ſtupra, virginum violationes, innumerabiles ſunt conſecutæ. Sed nec his contenti fuere portionum Exactores, cum ſumma prætenſa omnes incolarum vires & facultates ſuperaret. Itaque ad extrema remedia converſi deplorandi incolæ fœtum quoque in utero materno exiſtentem taxarunt: Sed & animalia prægnantia taxata fuere ad ſolvendas contributiones: Quod in Comitatibus Peſt, Pilis, & Solz contigiſſe ipſimet exactores faſſi ſunt. Super hæc non pauci, dum hanc nimiam contributionem ſolvere non poſſent, præ deſperatione laqueo vitam finiverunt: Alii occiſis prius prolibus ac uxore ſibimet mortem intulerunt violentam: Qui caſus in Comitatu Trenchinienſi, ac in Superiore Hungaria contigit. Præterea millenæ animæ, non valentes tam immenſum jugum ſupportare, ad alias regiones tranſmigrarunt, vacuam & deſertam relinquentes patriam: Ob quæ ſuper alios innocentes facta eſt executio militaris. Miles itidem nullam ſervat diſciplinam militarem, ſed omnia libere agit, totum Regnum depilando, & devaſtando. Cum vero per aliquam regni partem tranſit, non aliter ac cum hoſtibus agit; & ubi currus, aut equos pro vectura ſufficientes habere non poteſt, nobiles & ruſticos onerat, velut jumenta: Sicque eos horribiliter verberando ad onera portanda propellit: Quod factum eſt in Comitatibus Sopronienſi & Caſtriferrei. Et paſſim in aliis innumerabiles pagos combuſſit, nobiles perſonas vulneravit: Etiam non paucos occidit: Prout hoc cum duobus innocentibus Nobilibus Scholaribus Tyrnaviæ accidit. De quibus Cæſibus etſi ſæpius querela apud eos, ad quos pertinebat, expoſita fuerit, nulla tamen data eſt deſuper ſatisfactio: Quin potius tales querulantes novis afficiebantur injuriis: Adeo, ut juſtitiam prorſus exulaſſe nemo non videat. His accedit, quod Commendantes locorum occupatorum longe lateque in circuitu & diſtrictu illo imperitant, & miſeros ſubditos ſibi contribuere cogunt. Item Adminiſtratores Camerales ad vecturas, gratuitos labores, Contributiones, aliaſque infinitas exactiones pendendas cum executione militari ſuper omnes portionum ſolutiones afflictam plebem impellunt, taliqueque pacto incolas ad ultimam adigunt deſperationem. Et ſane hæc inaudita contributio ad tantam excrevit ſummam, ut ab Ann. 1683. uſque ad hunc 1690, triginta Milliones ſuperat data ſolutio, præter Tranſſylvaniam & Conquiſta. Super hæc autem quanti conſtent militum exceſſus, ſolus ille ſcire poteſt, ante cujus conſpectum nihil occulti eſt: Partes quoque antea Turcis dedititiæ uno ore fatentur, ſe intra hos ſeptem annos Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ, plus debuiſſe ſolvere, quam centum annis immani Chriſtiani nominis hoſti Turcæ. Quinimo à quo Hungaria ſtat in fide Chriſtiana, tanta onera, quanta modo, numquam ſupportare coacta fuit. Et quod plane mirandum eſt, reſpectu vicinarum Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ Provinciarum nulla proportio ſervatur. Verum Hungaria, quæ alias etiam ſedes belli eſt, majoribus oneratur contributionibus. Unde apparet ex præmiſſis, quaſi intentio ſit, ut Hungaria ſit hominibus penitus vacua, ac ferarum habitaculum; quæ tamen à tribus & amplius ſeculis pro defenſione reliquæ Chriſtianitatis ſuum fudit Sanguinem; ac generoſe contra Turcas dimicando vicina regna Chriſtiana protexit. Hinc quid amplius faciant miſeri incolæ, qui jam ultimum ſanguinem ſuum cum tota ſubſtantia dederunt? Non habent, quod contribuant. Itaque efflagitant reſpirium aliquod, ut ſaltem vivere illis cum uxoribus ac prolibus liceat, & poſſint poſt tam inſupportabile jugum ad aliquam pervenire requiem; cum alias etiam vix ulla detur in orbe natio, quæ talia cogitur ſupportare onera.

‘Nihilominus etſi totaliter ruinati ſunt miſeri patriotæ, videntes tamen hoſtium Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ acceſſionem, ecce parati erunt arma capere, & cum exercitu Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ ſe conjungere, ac in hoſtem proficiſci. Unde ſpero, quod ſex millia hominum, equitum videlicet & peditum ex parte regnicolarum prodibunt, ſi Majeſtas veſtra Sacratiſſima futuram hanc hybernarum portionum ſolutionem ipſis clementiſſime relaxare, & in hanc militis conductionem, & intertentionem commutare dignabitur: Quibus ſi adjungantur milites confiniarii, facile decem millia virorum efficere poterunt: Qui omnes utile ſane ſervitium præſtabunt, & ad modum ac normam Regiminum ordinari, & hac hyeme exerceri deberent: Eſſentque decem formalia Regimina, quinque equitum, & quinque peditum, qui in Hungaria ad liberam Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ diſpoſitionem applicari poſſent. Neque vero iiſdem diffidendum eſt: Ipſi enim hactenus quoque in debita fidelitate perſtiterunt tam diu, quam diu immanis Turca non totam occupavit Hungariam: Ubi reſiſtere nemo potuit; cum & arma quoque Majeſtatis Veſtræ Cæſareæ receſſerint. Auguſtiſſime Imperator, exiſtimo hoc ſervitium ſpontaneum afflictiſſimorum regnicolarum pro ſervitio Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ utilius fore, quam portionum ſolutionem; quæ utinam non ad ultimam deſperationem adigat patriotas miſeros: Unde ſi Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ benigne placuerit hæc modalitas, oportet, ut intra breve tempus cognoſcam clementiſſimum Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ aſſenſum; & tum diſpoſitionem quoque facere poſſim ſuper contribuendis militibus: De cujus modalitate Majeſtatem veſtram Sacratiſſimam etiam, hic Viennæ humillime informare non intermittam. Et ſane, Auguſtiſſime Imperator, cum neceſſario miles Germanicus in Hungariam migrare pro hac hyeme debeat, miles Hungaricus hac conditione offertur, ut prælibatus miles Germanicus proprio vivat ſumptu, tam in tranſitu, quam in quartirio: & non onerentur loca non cincta actuali quartirio, cum ſint alias etiam ſufficientiſſima & capaciſſima loca, in quibus magna Armata poteſt optime collocari: Quæ etiam, ſi Majeſtas veſtra Sacratiſſima clementiſſime mandaverit, paratus ſum in aliqua conferentia proximis diebus inſtituenda demonſtrare; humillime iterum atque iterum ſupplicando, Majeſtas veſtra Sacratiſſima dignetur ex innata Cæſarea Regiaque Clementia ſua Nationem Hungaricam, eidemque annexos incolas paterno affectu ſuo proſequi, & humillimos ſuos ſubditos ſublevando benigniſſime conſolari. Pro qua Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ, gratia Deus Opit. Max. longævum ac feliciſſimum concedat Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ ejuſdemque Auguſtæ domui, Regimen: Hæc erant, quæ Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ velut Regni Palatinus ſumma cum demiſſione repræſentare volui. EX querela Commiſſionis Cæſareæ ſuæ Majeſtatis bene animadverti, quaſi vero ego eſſem cauſſa, quod veſtri Prædicantes coram Commiſſione Cæſarea non compareant. Eo facto volebat emittere ad vos ducentos milites Muſquetarios: Sed inſtiti pro dilatione exmiſſionis illorum, dicens: Quod ex veſtris hominibus percepi vos injunxiſſe Veſtris Prædicantibus, aut coram Commiſſione ſuæ Majeſtatis compareant, aut vero nolentes abſcedant. Quæ veſtra obſequiatis accommodatio valde fuit ad placitum Commiſſionis Cæſareæ: Voſque adhortatur ſerio modo incluſarum, ſub pœna damni maximi pagis meis infligendi ad parendum, damnumque evitandum. Quocirca ne mandatum Commiſſionis Cæſareæ ſuæ Majeſtatis ego quoque contemptim negligere inſimuler, eadem à Commiſſione Cæſarea vobis indicta impono peragenda, ſub mulcta ducentorum thalerorum; & in omnibus ita pareatis, ut damna vobis inſequentia præcaveatis: Quæ ſi intervenerint, non noſtra, ſed veſtra culpa factum eſſe putetis. Exemplum literarum Domini Referendarii Regni Szezuka ad Reſidentem Cæſareum Szymoinsky.

‘ Legati etiam à Palatino Moldaviæ illuc perveniſſe certo dicuntur cum conditionibus Pacis à Porta proponendis. Quæ omnia dum Sacra Regia Majeſtas Dominus meus Clementiſſim. Illuſtriſſ. Dominationi veſtræ expoſita eſſe voluit, deſiderare videtur, ut tamquam optimus Miniſter publicæ Communis, ac Reipubl. Chriſtianæ felicitatis percupidus, Auguſtiſſimo Imperatori ita repræſentare velit, quomodo expeditior rerum omnium, ac negotii futuræ bellicæ expeditionis fieri valeat determinatio.

Sacratiſſima Cæſarea Regiaque Majeſtas, Domine Domine nobis naturaliter Clementiſſime.

‘ DEMISSE repræſentare cogimur Majeſtati veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ quod quamvis Majeſtas veſtra Sacratiſſima tempore glorioſæ Inaugurationis & Coronationis Neo-Regis noſtri Joſephi, in Comitiis Poſonienſibus, inclytis Statibus & Ordinibus Regni Hungariæ hoc ipſum proponi curaverit: Quod videlicet bona Neo-acquiſita, ac victricibus armis è faucibus gentis Othomannicæ glorioſe erepta, eripiendaque, denuo Regno huic Hungariæ benigne incorporare, iiſdemque legibus, & non novis gubernare, in ſuis immunitatibus & libertatibus conſervare vellet, ac niteretur: Ac inſuper Articulos quoque Sopronienſes ſuper Religionis exercitio conditos 25 & 26 in iiſdem Comitiis gratioſe confirmaſſet: In quibus Templa omnia, in quorum tempore conditionis eorundem Articulorum actuali poſſeſſione ſtatus Evangelicus extitit, una cum Parochiis & Scholis, ac earundem proventibus, præ manibus eorundem relinqui ac permanere gratioſe reſolviſſet, & quod impoſterum nullæ Templorum, Scholarum, & Parochiarum Occupationes, vel exercitii turbationes fiant, in hoc Regno Hungariæ, ſub pœna ibidem expreſſa, ſevere inhibuiſſet: Nihilominus tamen poſtpoſitis iſtis & poſtergatis omnibus, Reverendiſſimi Domini Matthias Radonai, Epiſcopus quinque Eccleſienſis, & Franciſcus Jani, Abbas Peczvaradienſis, qui in partibus noſtris in Superiori & Inferiori videlicet Barovia; circa quinque Eccleſias, è faucibus immaniſſimi hoſtis Ottomannici victricibus armis veſtræ Majeſtatis glorioſe ereptis, non ut liberum Religionis exercitium imperturbatum relinquerent, quin imo diverſis modalitatibus & viis, quoſlibet exceſſus in præjudicium præfatorum Articulorum ac verbi Regii licenter & pro placito attentarent. Cum enim, Auguſtiſſima Imperatoriaque Majeſtas; iidem præfati Domini Clerici, non, ut mens & intentio veſtræ Majeſtatis eſſet, Regnum in ſtatum priorem è deſolato reducere intenderent; quin imo in eo quoque, quo nunc eſſet, omni ſtudio evertere & deſolare, miſerrimos partium noſtrarum incolas bonis & avitis poſſeſſionibus privare, & ſi eorundem intentionem aſſequi nollent, omnes poſt Turcas relegare non vererentur: Imo ex eo, quod confiteri noluiſſent, variis excogitatis ſub prætextibus incaptivarunt, nonnullis in formam crucis defixis & alligatis hoſtia ori vi intruſa fuit; plenæque poſſeſſiones integræ expilantur, ut hæc manifeſta violentiæ exempla in Civibus Varkonienſibus, Joanne nimirum & Andrea Czoma, pluſquam mille talleras imperiales valenti poſſeſſione ob cauſſam Religionis deſpoliatis, ſatis ſuperque edocent. Ac inſuper ut hæc talia conamina prædictorum D. D. Clericorum perſequi felicius poſſent, Commiſſarium veſtræ Majeſtatis Sacratiſſimæ ad partes Neo-recuperatas exmiſſum, Illuſtriſſimum videlicet Tullium Miglionem, extra ſphæram ſuæ inſtructionis, neſcitur quibus exquiſitis mediis, pro fautore ſibi adſciſcendo, qui denique certos Prædicantes, ut Nadaſdienſem & Manjokienſem, alioſque cives & incolas partium noſtrarum, variis ac variis ſigillo ſuo munitis Commiſſionibus citatos, eoſdemque de libero itu & reditu aſſecuratos, iiſdem D.D. Prælatis inauditis proceſſibus vexandos tradidit, pro uti hæc omnia ex unis literarum citatoriarum paribus ejuſdem

‘ D. Tullii Miglionis ſub dato 14 Februar. emanatis, literaque A notatis, ac literis prætitulati D. Abbatis, dieque ſequenti præfati menſis editis, literaque B ſignatis, & aliis Comminatoriis prædicti D. Commiſſarii, ex idiomate Hungarico in Latinum genuine tranſlatis 21 Febr. extractis, literaque C ſignatis, nec non præfati D. Epiſcopi quinque Eccleſ. ſimiliter in Latinum tranſſumptis, quaſi ſui facti teſtimonialibus 2 Martii exaratis, literaque D notatis, & huic ſupplici libello annexis, clariſſime apparerent. Unde, proh dolor! iſta immanitas exiliit. Ubi ponit fundamentum hæc nobis inflicta crudelitas? Hæc enim omnia Sanctæ determinationi veſtræ Majeſtatis repugnarent, contraque benignam mentem & intentionem veſtræ Majeſtatis practicarentur: Quia pro lubitu in nos graſſari, liberum noſtrum Exercitium interturbare, armorum ſtrepitu, terriculamentis, aliiſque exquiſitis ſub coloribus opprimere nihil penſi ducerent, uti hoc iidem præfati D. Prælati, ac prætitulatus D. Commiſſarius, cum aſſociato Illuſtriſſimo D. Gabriele Veicſi, Commendante Szigetvarienſi, qui adſcitis hinc inde militibus miſeros Vereſmarthienſes, ex eo ſolum fundamento, quod antecedenter intentionem ſuam in eorum excidium intendentem exſequi non permiſerint, manu fere hoſtili crudeliterve adoriendo, omnibus eorundem bonis primum expilatis, tandem iiſdem incolis quibuſdam diſperſis, aliis vero, quos ad manus habere poterant, captis, inque diram captivitatem ſecum abducendo; Miſerandum & horrendum nobis omnibus dederunt exemplum. Cujus rei teſtis eſt prætitulatus D. Epiſcopus quinque Eccleſ. in aliis literis Minatoriis in Latinum ſimiliter tranſſumptis, dieque 17 Martii datatis, literaque E ſignatis. Nam cum ſub jugo Turcico gemebundi tot annorum decurſu jacebamus, pacifico uſu & libertate noſtra ſpirituali utebamur: Æquum eſſet eo magis, ut ſub auſpiciis alarum veſtræ Majeſtatis Sacratiſſimæ tutam & imperturbatam ab omnibus veſtræ Majeſtatis ſubjectis habeamus. Quocirca ad pedes Auguſtiſſimos veſtræ Majeſtatis humillime provoluti per vulnera Chriſti oramus ſupplices, quatenus nobis taliter oppreſſis, & fere in extremitatibus conſtitutis, Majeſtas veſtra Auguſtiſſima (in qua alioquin poſt Deum omnem ſpem & fiduciam liberationis ponimus) paterne ſuccurrere dignetur. Cum enim noſtra libertas conſiſtit vel maxime in libero Religionis exercitio, quod etiam piæ reminiſcentiæ Regum, antequam fortuna novercante noſtras provincias Turca hoſtis Chriſtiani nominis immaniſſimus ſuæ ditioni adjeciſſet, ad hoc uſque tempus permanſit libero uſu intactum, juxta ſuum verbum regium ſanctum, & irrevocabile, Articulis quoque confirmatum, ne ſinat nos taliter opprimi: Verum in ſinum gratiæ ſuæ receptos, contra quoſvis illegitime & indigne impetitores defendere, ac inſuper literas protectionales benigne elargiri non dedignetur, ut nos virtute earundem liberum Religionis noſtræ exercitium reaſſumere, reaſſumptum in tota Superiori & Inferiori Barovia continuare poſſimus ac valeamus. Ac tum præfatis Dominis Prælatis, quam etiam prædicto D. Commiſſario Cæſareo (ita & Commendanti Szigethienſi) decreto mediante clementer demandare, ut ab iſtis perſecutionibus verbo Regio contravenientibus ſuperſederent. Ut tandem nos clementem paternamque Invictiſſimæ Imperatoriæ veſtræ Majeſtatis gratiam experti eo alacriori animo obſequia Majeſtati veſtræ præſtanda exſequi poſſimus. Quam Gratiam & Clementiam Majeſtatis veſtræ Sacratiſſimæ non ſolum ardentibus ad Deum fundendis precibus, verum etiam perpetua fidelitatis noſtræ ſubjectione omni ſtudio remereri contendemus, gratioſam quantocitius præſtolaturi reſolutionem,

RATIONES,

'I. Igitur, niſi tractatus pacis aliquo temporis intervallo ſepulti reſumantur, & Pax, quæ mihi tamen ignota, à ſuâ Sacrâ Cæſareâ Majeſtate intra breve tempus concludatur, non concipio, qualiter Niſſa & Widdinum, omneſque trans Savum ſiti paſſus, ſine ſpeciali detrimento poſſunt defendi. Widdinum enim locus diſtans, ac nullum niſi Niſſa, & hinc adhuc difficillimum ſuccurſum ſperare poteſt, cum ſpatio unius diei penes Tinock, & illa ardua Starra Planina arctus & plane impenetrabilis paſſus reperiatur, in quo inimicus exiguo tantum milite nobis reſiſtere poteſt, ita ut nominatum Widdin, quod tum à noſtro milite offenſive agendo recuperatum ac munitum eſt, ſi hodie dum intenderet offenſive hoſtem aggredi, jam non ſolum illi omnis offenſiva actio foret prohibita, verum certam jacturam illius munitionis cum omnibus præſidiariis intra breve temporis ſpatium experiremur, & hac quidem de cauſſa: Nam etſi foret aliqua ſpes, aut reſolutio lucrandi temporis, ſciendum tamen eſt, nullum effectum inde emanaturum, cum tunc Tartaris liberum foret Valachiam irrumpere, & inde cum exercitu ſuo Danubium navibus ſine ullo impedimento tranſnavigare Ratio enim eſt, cum permagnum inde apud Widdin ſitam inſulam Danubius ita dividatur, ut etiam cum maximis navibus ſurſum & deorſum navigandi nullum obſtet impedimentum, nec à præſidiariis videri poſſit tunc oppugnari, ex his quoque plus metuenda jactura hujus munitionis, quamvis effective ab hoſte aggredi, & oppugnari non poſſit ; tamen à concurſu vulgi ita includi, ut certo hunc fortificatum paſſum obtineat.

'II. Niſſam quoque ſecundum debilem capacitatem ingenii mei aliter defendi, quam per ingentem exercitum poſſe, non invenio, cum ſecundum omnium opinionem nullo alio modo defendi poſſe judicatum ſit, niſi prius omnes paſſus ex Macedonia & Bulgaria à noſtro milite aſſecurentur, & à copioſo, benêque exercito milite occludantur, omniſque inimico in Boſniam & Serviam introitus impediatur. In toto enim Niſſenſi diſtrictu maximus defectus eſt graminis, quia ille in nimia ſiccitate terræ fundatus eſt : Ita ut ſi hoſtis Procopiam appropinquaret, ibi in omni ſecuritate vivere poſſet, nec ullum ex ſuis Provinciis, propter advehentes diverſa ac neceſſaria vitæ victualia defectum ſperandum haberet. Noſter vero miles non ſolum ob ſimilem defectum circa Niſſam ſubſiſtere non poſſet, verum etiam eidem timendum eſſet, omnia neceſſaria tam per aquam, quam per terram adnavigantibus & advehentibus poſſe impediri, cum tali caſu ab hoſtili conflictu non ſolum navigatio Bulgariæ, Moravæ, & impenetrabilis via circa Jagodinum & Niſſam omnimode invaderetur, verumetiam iis liberum eſſet, ſive magnis, ſive parvis turmis, trans viam, quæ Cruſſa, vel Cracolovetz ducit, ſine omni impedimenti cura uſque Belgradenſem portam accurrere. Multo minus etiam Boſnienſibus, qui ad viginti millia exerciti milites ſunt, in nullo abſoluto loco reſiſti poſſibile eſt, ne penes Servianum Moravam, & illud tantum, tantoque labore recuperatum fortiſſimum Belgradum, uſque ad Danubium perveniant : & tandem ultimo, uti nec dubitari poteſt, hoſtilis exercitus, ſive parvus, ſive magnus, ſe citra Danubium Fetiſlau appropinquaret, uti per experientiam anno præterito captam conſtat, quod etiam viliſſimis & exiguis turmis vel apud Poſſavaretz, vel in vicinia Reſſava, per Gulſcheinæ viam quidem laborioſam, curribuſque periculo expoſitam, ſine omni etiam minimo impedimento Servianum Moravam invadere, & hunc fluvium denuo totaliter inutilem & impracticabilem reddere poſſent (cui malo tamen præcavendum) noſterque exercitus ob ſuas totaliter debilitatas vires tantum tolerare non poſſet, ob tot ac tam difficiles, laborioſaſque vias, quas ſpero ſat clare me demonſtraſſe, quod tam debilis ac parvus exercitus Niſſæ ſubſiſtens tam forti ac tam maghæ hoſtili armadæ non valeat reſiſtere.

'III. Jagodinæ verſabatur exiguus Cæſareus miles, ibi ſtans, ex ſupradictis rationibus in ſimili periculo, maxime cum augendo numerum militum Niſſæ à tam paucis adhuc aliquid plus detrahere neceſſitas cogeret. Vereor itaque, ne cogatur reſiduum, quod ſupereſt, uſque ad inter tormenta, vel ob defectum victualium trans Savum abducere.

'IV. Quod ſi tamen ſua Sacra Cæſarea Majeſtas omnibus his ſepoſitis Clementiſſime annueret Niſſam ad ultimam, eti-

' XI. Et quamvis dicatur, quod ſucceſſive deceſſus regiminum per noviter electum militem ſuppleatur, & compleatur, conſiderandum tamen eſt, quod non ſolum complendus numerus illorum inter quædam regimina vix inceperit, partim quod nec ſibi debitam ſolutionem acceperint; ita tamen, quod ſi feliciter Belgradum adduci deberent, ſex aut ſeptem Menſibus, ut migrent ex Provinciis hæreditariis neceſſe habent, & ita demum ad finem campi bellici; & cum difficultate adhuc vix proſunt: & ita ſine omni utilitate de his loquendum. Nec loci ſitus his poterit demonſtrari; tacendum, ut tandem defeſſus miles tot tantiſque curis & vigiliis, portanſque contra inimicum, etiamſi non in tantas, certe in plures nauſeas devenire poſſet.

' XII. Victualibus pro neceſſitate Niſſæ aliquot menſibus proviſum eſſe conſtat: Quæ autem utilitati exercitus parum proſunt, aut in abſentia illius plane nihil utilitatis adferre poſſunt, ſinon plane inimici cederent. Belligradi, in quantum notum eſt, huc uſque nullam ſtabilitam domum annonæ; & quamvis actualiter hic Viennæ de iis mature tranſmittendis contractum ſit, tamen ejus certitudo multis impedimentis ſubjacet. Et hinc quid expectandum eſt, quam ultimas & periculoſiſſimas extremitates, ut ante annum contigerunt; cum neque in altera parte Danubii meliores conditiones obſervatæ, qualiter verſus Orſowa & Caranzebes, cujus vicinitati etiam hoc conflictu copioſus ac bene inſtructus miles relinqui debet.

' XII. Currus pro vectigalibus ſumme neceſſarii in tempore, & ante finem Auguſti, in quo bono eſſe conſtituti ſint, nullis quidem Ciceronianis verbis explicandum eſt: Maxime, cum in Hungaria huc uſque numerus curruum ultra 130 ſe non extendat: Reliqui vero partim Poſonii nondum parati, nec pecus coemptum eſt; nec mihi conſtat, an media illud ademendum data ſint: Ubi tamen, quocunque vertimus, ſine copioſis, & quidem bene præparatis curribus ſubſiſtere nullatenus poſſimus. Navigium enim Moravæ ex ſupra allegatis rationibus, & ob incertitudinem ventorum in Danubib incertum ac periculoſiſſimum eſt: & ideo quidem plurimum, cum hoſtis ſecundum unanimem conſenſum omnium captivorum magna copia navium Danubium verſus naviget, hujus opinionis vivens, quod ſi in defectu noſtrarum non ſufficientium, aut non bene armatarum navium, vel alicujus ſortis alterius, ſe præpotentem in Danubio viderit, velle ſua vi vectigalia noſtra noſtrorum victualium plane infringere, & ſibi aſſociare. 1692.

' XIV. Similiter adſunt & aliæ adhuc innumeræ difficultates ratione pontium navigabilium, horumque requiſitorum, imo ſpecialis pontis alicujus volantis cis Inackée, cujus nullus ordo, nec alia præparatoria inſtituta ſunt: &, etiamſi hæ omnes neceſſitates adeſſent, tamen in his locis, circa finem Junii, aut Julii, aquis diffundentibus ac diffuſis, nullo anno fidendum eſt, & ita in abſentia noſtri totius exercitus, turma aliqua hoſtilis, cui ſi non rurſum noſter miles ob defectum reſiſtere poſſet, certo hoſti non detrimento, ſed emolumento eſſet.

' XV. Munitiones & inſtrumenta bellica, aliaque materialia, prætereaque omnia in antiquo eſſe, uti reliqui ante aliquot elapſos menſes, ante meum diſceſſum, finito campo bellico, inveni; quibus nihil niſi omnia exercitui ſumme neceſſaria deſunt.

J'EUS, le 20 Decembr. de l'année paſſée, l'honneur de vous avertir par le Seigneur Baron Gall de tout ce qui ſe paſſoit icy: & en voicy la duplique. Depuis ce tems là, le 23 du même mois, fit le Premier Vizir ſon entrée publique dans Conſtantinople: Auquel je fis en perſonne le compliment de congratulation, le 19 Janvier; & fus receu & traitté de luy avec beaucoup de courtoiſie & civilité, ſans que ni l'un ni l'autre dit un mot, ou nomma l'Empereur & les Princes Allemans, ou le Roy de France. Cela ſe fit de ma part à deſſein, & avions

1692. nous, moy & l'Ambaſſadeur d'Angleterre, concerté & conclu celà, afin de donner quelque ſoupcon au Gr. Vizir, qui avec beaucoup de faſte & d'orgueil ſe retiroit, & revenoit de la guerre, des deſſeins & preparations à la Guerre de l'Empereur, pour la Campagne ſuivante: Principalement étans tres aſſurez, que, combien que nous euſſions euës les ordres abſoluës de traiter avec luy de la Paix, il ne nous écouteroit pas, ou qu'il nous feroit des Propoſitions ſi exorbitantes, que cette negotiation ſe romperoit incontinent de ſoy-même. Nous jugeâmes donc, que nous ferions mieux de n'en parler un ſeal mot: & que nous cauſerions en luy par nôtre ſilence quelque ſoupcon des forces Imperiales. Ce qui nous reüſſit juſques là, que le dit Vizir laiſſa tomber apres ces paroles: Il faut, que l'Empereur & les Princes Allemans n'ayent plus de crainte pour la France: Autrement les Ambaſſadeurs d'Angleterre & d'Hollande n'euſſent pas manqué de preſſer la Negotiation de la Paix. Adjouſtez-y, que le Teckely ſe ſoucie fort peu des ordres de la Porte, ruinant la Walachie de fons en comble.

Un vaiſſeau de guerre Anglois du Convoy de Smyrne a pris une Tartane Francoiſe dans l'Archipel: & on à trouvé là dedans deux Lettres du Roy à ſon Ambaſſadeur icy: Des quelles ayant obtenu la Copie, je me crûs obligé de vous en faire part, avec cette eſperance, qu'on ne manquerà pas à Vienne de trouver des maîtres en cette art, pour les deciffrer: & qu'on en tirerà des lumieres, & particularitez de grande conſequence.

Un Ingenieur, qui ſe nomme Signior Stefano, m'a confié, qu'il eſt le Comte Nicola Guaſco, natif de St. Amant, trois lieux de Valencienne, mais d'Origine Milanois: & qu'il a des Ordres de preparer en toute diligence 6000 Bombes pour la Campagne ſuivante. Il ſe repent de ſon erreur, & il m'a promis, qu'il ferà quelque choſe d'importance, que je n'oſe pas vous Communiquer par cettecy, faute des ciffres. Il envoye par cette occaſion un ſien valet tres affidé, nommé Pietro Mollier, à Vienne, qui vous ferà le recit de beaucoup des particularitez. On attend icy de jour en jour le nouveau Ambaſſadeur d'Angleterre, qu'on dit étre dêja avancé juſques à Eſſeck. J'eſpere, que je recevray par ſon arrivement icy quelques ordres, pour remettre icy ſur le tapis la Negotiation de la Paix. Le Grand Vizir fait tout ce qu'il peut pour ramaſſer des grandes ſommes d'Argent, & de redreſſer les finances: C'eſt pourquoy qu'il a retranché une partie du train du Gr. Seigneur, & fait une Inquiſition fort exacte 1692. ſur les gages des Officiers, & Soldats: Mais il fait encor fort peu des Preparations pour ſe mettre de bonne heure en Campagne. On n'equipperà par mer que fort peu des Vaiſſeaux de guerre, & comme on dit, ſeulement dix, avec 25 Galeres: Auſſi a't on pris la reſolution de ne ſe ſervir pas cette année des Pirates de Barbarie. Je demeure, &c.

Lettre de Monſieur Colyer, Ambaſſadeur d'Hollande à Conſtantinople.

Monſieur,

MA derniere étoit du 15 de Fevrier, de la quelle j'ay joint icy la duplique, ayant envoyée la principalle par mer, par Veniſe. Depuis ce tems là le Gouverneur de Belgrade avertit la cour icy de l'arrivée du nouveau Ambaſſadeur d'Angleterre Monſieur Huſſey à Eſſeck, & demanda pour luy permiſſion pour pourſuivre ſon Voyage par Belgrade juſques icy: & combienque l'Ambaſſadeur de France ayt fait tout ce qu'il à peu pour l'empecher, le Prime-Vizir neanmoins a expedié d'icy un Aga par poſte à Belgrade ſuſdit, le dernier du Fevrier, avec des ordres, de recevoir le dit Seigneur Huſſey proche d'Eſſeck, & de le conduire & defrayer juſques à Conſtantinople: De ſorte qu'on l'attend icy apres Pâques. J'attens l'arrivée du dit Seigneur, avec beaucoup d'impatience, avec eſperance certaine d'en entendre l'Etat des Affaires de la Chrêtienté.

Cet Ambaſſadeur de France retient àpreſent toutes les Lettres addreſſées aux Anglois & Hollandois, qui ſont icy, & à Smyrne, comme auſſi celles, qui appartiennent aux Miniſtres publiques de ces deux Nations, leſquelles nous viennent par les vaiſſeaux Francois, ou ſous le pavillon de France, Il arrête auſſi tous leurs effects: Mais le Grand Vizir étant par mes plaintes informé de ces Inſolences, s'en eſt montré fort mal content, & a ordonné au Doüanier d'y prendre garde treſexacte. Ce qu'étant entendu par l'Ambaſſadeur de France, il a retenu quelques effects, & Argent contant, qu'on avoit recommandé icy de Veniſe aux Marchands Anglois & Hollandois, avec le vaiſſeau San Joſeppe, Cap. Luigi Juliano nouvellement icy arrivé.

Mais on m'aſſure apreſent, qu'on ne laiſſerà pas partir ce vaiſſeau d'icy, avant que d'avoir reſtitué tout ce qu'on a arrêté, aux proprietaires : Ce qui ſerà, que le dit Ambaſſadeur en recevrà une petite Mortification.

Le 4 de ce mois on envoya d'icy à Jambol, par ordre de la Cour, quelques Officiers, qui en ramenerent le 10 un Prince Tartare, nommé Saadet Jeray, pour ſucceder au Han des Tartares, qui fut depoſſedé le même jour de ſa dignité. Le jour Suivant le Grand Vizir preſenta le dit Prince au Grand Seigneur; & fut il couronné, mais avec fort peu de Ceremonies, Empereur de Tartarie, & renvoyé le 18 à la Crim, pour mettre ordre neceſſaire ſur les Affaires, avec un commandement expres, de faire une Invaſion en la Pologne.

On dit, que ce changement eſt arrivé à cauſe, que le vieux Han a taché de divertir le Grand Vizir contre le Sentiment du tout le conſeil de guerre, de s'en aller en perſonne en Campagne, afin de ne hazarder pas derechef la reputation de cet Empire, puiſqu'il ne pouvoit pas aſſurer la Porte de la ſecourir avec ſes Trouppes Tartares, parce qu'on y attendoit, & craignoit, l'arrivement de l'Armée Moſcovite : & que les Albanois, ou Arnottes, auroient aſſez à faire de garder leur propre païs, menacé par les armes victorieuſes des Venitiens : & qu'ainſi ces Trouppes ne ſe pouvans joindre avec l'Armée capitale des Turcs, on ſeroit contraint de ſe ſervir & contenter des ſeules Trouppes ordinaires des Janiſſaires & des Spahis, avec celles d'Aſie ; leſquelles jointes enſemble ne ſeroient en aucune maniere ſuffiſantes pour reſiſter à l'Armée Imperialle. C'eſt pourquoy le Han des Tartares étoit d'avis, qu'on feroit mieux de garder Seulement les frontieres par des Seraskiers Particuliers, & que le Grand Vizir les pourroit ſoutenir de tems en tems de Conſtantinople, ou d'Adrianople avec des Trouppes fraiches & nouvellement levées : & que de cette maniere on defendroit aiſement non ſeulement les Frontieres, mais auſſi la reputation des armes du Grand Seigneur.

Et parceque cet avis, ou conſeil, du Han des Tartares fut rejetté, & refuté par le Kiahaia Bei, ou Lieutenant General des Janiſſaires, & de ceux de ſa faction, avec des autres raiſons, lequel Lieutenant eſt à preſent en Fort Grand Credit à la Cour, & que le Han s'en fachoit, on a, apres qu'il fut ſorty du Conſeil, arrêté de le demettre de ſa dignité. Ce qu'étant peu apres entendu du Grand Han, il renonca le lendemain au Governement de la Crim, pour prevenir cet affront : & il demande apreſent la permiſſion de faire le pelerinage de Mecca.

Le Grand Vizir ne fait que ſe preparer à la Guerre : Mais ſelon ce qu'on en peut juger, il ne ſerà pas aux Frontieres avant la fin du Juillet. C'eſt pourquoy que je m'imagine, que l'Armée Imperialle feroit un grand coup, & cauſeroit une grande Confuſion dans les Trouppes Turques, ſi elle ſe mettroit de bonne heure en Campagne.

Je vous puis aſſurer, Monſieur, que, ſi on n'entreprend pas quelque choſe de conſideration dans cette Campagne contre les Turcs, & Francois, on n'aurà pas même ſujet de penſer ſeulement à la Paix : Mais au contraire, ſi l' on aurà le moindre avantage contre cette Nation, qu'elle abandonnerà le partie Francois, & rechercherà la Paix incontinent. Il eſt donc tres-neceſſaire, que l'Armée Imperialle ſoit la premiere en Campagne, & qu'elle previenne les deſſeins du Grand Vizir : D'où on tirerà toutes les avantages imaginables.

Les mauvais ſucces de la Campagne paſſé ont extremement avancé icy le credit de l'Ambaſſadeur de France, & au Contraire fort diminué le reſpect & la reputation des Ambaſſadeur d'Angleterre & d'Hollande : & principalement à l'egard de l'eſquadre des Vaiſſeaux de Guerre, qu'on attendoit dans la Mer Mediterranée, du quel Meſſieurs les Etats Generaux m'avoient fait avertir : Mais puiſqu' on n'en a aucunes nouvelles, & qu'on même n'en oſe pas parler d'avantage, cela fait, qu'on donne l'entier credit aux vanteries des Francois : De ſorte que les Turques commencent à ſe perſuader que le Roy de France a aſſez des Forces pour non ſeulement faire de reſiſtance aux tous les autres Princes Chêrtiens, mais encore de les attaquer par tout, & combattre.

Dans ces jours paſſez arriverent icy quelques Deputez de la Valachie pour faire leurs plaintes au Grand Vizir, que le Teckely faiſſoit des terribiles ravages avec ſes gens dans leur Province : & le prierent d'y mettre des ordres neceſſaires, & d'avoir de la Compaſſion pour un païs deſolé, & tout afait appauvrie. On leur à donné des belles paroles de la part du Teckely, & pour le reſte accordé quelques demandes, qui concernoient leurs autres griefs.

Le Chef de cette Deputation eſt l'Oncle de l'Hoſpodar, qui m'a prié d'aſſurer par vôtre entremiſe ſa Majeſté Imperialle de la fidelité & tres humbles ſoumiſſions de ſon Couſin, lequel n'a de plus Grand deſir, que de rendre quelque Service conſiderable à ſa Majeſte ce qu'il eſpere de faire voir la Campagne prochaine. Cependant le dit Seigneur me pria inſtamment, de prier V. Excellence de luy faire cette grace, ſi cela ſe pouvoit faire, & d'obtenir, par ſon interceſſion, que ſon frere le Seigneur Georgio Cantacuzeno qui eſt apreſent à Vienne, eut la permiſſion, de ſe retourner dans ſon païs : Puiſqu'il n'y peut rendre aucune Service à ſa Majeſté & qu'au contraire étant de retour chez ſoy il pourroit étre employé dans toutes les occurrences pour ſervir dans les Negotiations entre le General de la Tranſylvanie & l'Hoſpodar. Vous me ferez donc, Monſieur, un tres grand plaiſir, ſi vous pourriez obtenir cette permiſſion, ſi cela ſe peut faire ſans quelque prejudice aux Affaires de l'Empire : Puiſque je ſeray contraint d'oreſenavant d'envoyer la pluſpart de mes Lettres par la Valachie, la Tranſylvanie, & l'Hongrie, à Vienne, & de là en Hollande : Ce qui ſe pourrà faire tant plus aiſement, parce que, comme on m'a averty, il y à une tresbonne correſpondence entre le General Veterani, & le dit Hoſpodar de Valachie.

Le Grand Vizir reüſſit extremement bien dans toutes ſes entrepriſes dans cet Empire, juſques à l'étonnement de tout le monde. Il a ces jours paſſez fait Gouverneur d'Iſmit le Haſſan Paſcià, beaufils du dernier Sultan Mohamed, étant de retour de ſon Gouvernement d'Egypte : & celà pour luy ôter tout le credit, & autorité, luy donnant une charge de treſpetite conſideration, & qui le mettrà hors des yeux & de la ſouvenance du peuple.

Le même a inventé ſur les Sujets Chretiens & Juifs une Taxe par tête de dix, cinq, & de deux & demy ecus, les ayant diviſez en trois ſortes, des riches, de moyenne condition, & des pauvres ; & oté toutes les autres Impoſitions : Ce qui luy ferà ramaſſer des treſgrandes ſommes d'Argent.

J'envoye cellecy par la Valachie, & la Tranſylvanie : & je vous prie, Monſieur, de me faire l'honneur par le même chemin, d'un petit mot, de reſcription : Ce que j'attendray avec impatience, demeurant,

Monſieur,

Votre tres humble Serviteur,

COLYER.

A Péra di Conſtantinople le dernier de Mars, 1691.

Mr. Herbert at Belgrade.

In this manner Mr. Herbert came provided to Belgrade, with Inſtructions for proſecution of the Treaty which Sir William Huſſey had begun ; but he ſoon found that the minds of the Turks were not as yet inclined to a Peace, and that all his labours and endeavours would prove ineffectual, whilſt the Turks harkned to the Suggeſtions of the French, who had now got ſo far into their good Opinion, that their Intereſts being made the ſame, their Counſels could not be other than ſincere, and their friendſhips of advantage ; and therefore it was apparent to Mr. Herbert, that the Turks regarding no other Ambaſſador but the French, reſolved to take no other Methods than ſuch as ſhould be dictated by them. The caſe being thus manifeſt, ſtruck Mr. Herbert to the heart, who was a hot-ſpirited, and a paſſionate man, and not able to endure to ſee that a Frenchman, which lately came from France, named Monſieur Marquis de Lorain, placed in the Affections of the Grand Vizier, with deſign to thwart him in all his Negotiations, he grew ſo impatient, that his blood boyl'd within him, to ſuch a degree, as Fevour'd him into a kind of Madneſs, which joyn'd with his old Enemy the Gout, he died thereof on the 31ſt of July, 1692. The death of theſe two Ambaſſadors, ſo near the time to each other, ſeemed as if there had been a kind of fatallity in the Treaty of Peace ; or that the French had by unlawful means contrived the death of theſe Miniſters : but for my part, I have no belief or jealouſie thereof ; not but that the French may be ready enough to enter into ſuch ſecret Machinations, where the Intereſt of their Monarch may be advanced ; but like as the Devil, when he hath catched a Sinner cloſe within his Clutches, is not very haſty to bring him to his end, ſo the French who had wholly poſſeſſed themſelves of the minds and humours of the 1692. Turks, had no need of having recourſe to facinorous actions which were deteſtable to God and Man. And thus did the Marquis de Loran remain with the Vizier at Belgrade, whilſt the late Ambaſſador Monſieur de Chauteauneuf returned by order of the King into France.

The Grand Vizier at Belgrade.

The Campagne (as we have ſaid) being ended, nothing of action happened during the reſidence of the Vizier at Belgrade, who kept himſelf wholly on the defenſive; and leſt the Germans ſhould think fit to attack his Forces which lay encampt on the other ſide of the Rivers near Belgrade, he made two Bridges, one over the Save, and the other over the Danube; over which, upon news that the Chriſtians were advancing, he cauſed his Army to retreat, and to paſs the Bridges into the Town, where their Head-quarters were kept during the Winter ſeaſon; and thus all Military Actions ceaſing, licenſe was given to the Militia of Anatolia to return home about the 20th of October unto their own Countries; the which was more readily granted, in regard to the great Mutinies, and Inſurrection of the People in the Leſſer Aſia, and to the Venetian Succeſſes at Sea in the Archipelago.

A thouſand French deſert the Venetian Service.

During the whole courſe of this Years Actions the Venetians were unproſperous, their Deſign upon Canea failing them; which they had ſtreightly beſieged for the ſpace of a full Month; and had hopes of carrying the Place, had not a Thouſand French, leavied for Service of the Venetians, deſerted, and at their firſt landing gone over to the Turks; by whoſe aſſiſtance the Venetians were obliged moſt ſhamefully to raiſe the Siege, with the loſs of many Men, and of moſt of their Cannon; which was the ſubſtance, and ſum of all their Expedition for this Year, 1692.

Fires in Conſtantinople.

About the end whereof the Grand Seignior had two Sons born to him, who were Twins, the one named Ibrahim, and the other Selim; on which occaſion great rejoycing being ſhown, amidſt thereof a dreadful fire happened at Conſtantinople, which began at Balaſa, and conſumed above 4000 Houſes, with about 2000 Shops. This Fire happened in three ſeveral places of the City; one of which being near the Great Moſche of Sultan Soliman, one of the Menarees or Steeples thereof fell to the ground, which the People interpreted for an evil Omen, and Preſage for the ſucceeding Year.

The Grand Vizier being returned from the War towards the end of October, gave an account to the Grand Seignior of the ſtate of the War, and that he had given the Command of the Army unto Lame Huſaein Paſcia, and odered him with 10000 men to watch the Motions of the Enemy, and eſpecially to take care of Temeſwaer. 1692.

THIS Year begins with the Death of the depoſed Sultan Mahomet IV. who died of a Dropſie on the 4th of January, 1693, which had like to have produced a Peace; for the great Officers of the Empire being at that time aſſembled together at Adrianople, a Council was held, in which it was debated and concluded, that the preſent ſtate of the Ottoman Empire was ſuch as required a Peace: Howſoever another Party prevailed, excited by the French Ambaſſador, who very liberally diſpenſed his Preſents amongſt the Military Men, in whoſe Hands at that time remained the Balance of War and Peace; the which was actuated by two different Principles, the one by the Preſents given by the French, and by the Arrival of ſeveral French Officers, Engineers, Gunners, Artificial Fire-workers, and ſome Money diſtributed amongſt the Chief Turkiſh Officers for carrying on the War. On the other ſide the Mediators, as the Engliſh, and Hollanders, whoſe Buſineſs it was to procure a Peace, ſeemed to over-act their Parts, and by their Sollicitations, and earneſt Importunities, enhanſed the Price thereof, and made the Turks believe, that either the Emperor could not ſubſiſt without a Peace, or that ſome Fraud lay couched under ſuch Specious and Importunate Preſſures. 1693.

Debates about a Peace.

March.

My Lord Paget (as we have ſaid) arriving at Adrianople the 31ſt of January, and having receiv'd his firſt Audiences with the Grand Seignior, and Vizier, he had another on the 14th of March following in Company with the two Ambaſſadors of Holland, Heemskirk and Colyer, wholly relating to the Peace, at which were preſent, the Chief Officers of the Empire; but nothing more was done, beſides reading their Credentials publickly, with the Propoſitions; and ſo were diſmiſſed for that time without a final Anſwer; telling them that they ſhould receive the ſame in four or five Days; but on the 18th of this Month the Grand Vizier being diſplaced, (as was reported) at his own ſeeking, Muſtapha Paſha the Chimacam ſucceeded him in the Sublime Office, ſo that all Matters of the Treaty were at a ſtand, and were to begin again; but for the better underſtanding the true ſtate of theſe Affairs, nothing can be more authentick and particular, than what was Written in a Letter from Mr. Coke the Secretary to Sir William Trumball, which was as followeth.

The Copy of a Letter from Mr. Coke, to Sir William Trumball, late Ambaſſador with the Grand Seignior.

Adrianople 28. May O. S. 1693.

As to the Negotiations of Peace, I know it will be no ſurprize to hear they are in the ſame ſtate as you left them. For my part I was too ſhort-ſighted to diſcover thoſe great Inclinations in the Port towards it, which Seignior Colyer repreſented, which had made ſuch Impreſſions in Seignior Heemskirk, that upon Mr. Herbert's Death, he came flying with a full Sail down the Danube, not to begin the Treaty, but conclude the Peace; and thought it was ſo eaſie, that it was only to ſpeak with the Vizier, and the Buſineſs was done.

He arrived at Belgrade the firſt of October S. V. 1692, the next Day had Audience of the Vizier, and the third he gave in Writing to Mauro Cordato to Tranſlate and give the Vizier his Propoſals for a Peace or Truce for 30 Years: The ſubſtance of which for the Emperor was on the Foot of Uti poſſidetis; under which Notion Tranſylvania to retain to him, each liberty to fortifie in their Confines; Teckely to be delivered up; the Republick of Raguſa not to be called to Accounts for Arrears of Tribute, or for the future pay any to the Port: For Poland, Reſtitution of Caminieck, and with-hold in Podolia, all Ucrania, the Caſtelli on the Boryſthenes, Moldavia, and Wallachia; and if the Tartars made any Incurſions into their Territories, the Port to pay the Damages that Crown receiv'd: For Venice, the Province of Levadia, Athens and Thebes to be given them as an Equivalent for the Morea, and in like manner ſeveral Territories on the ſide of Lepanto, and in Dalmatia: He expected an Anſwer to this, and that the Port would change their Old Style of receiving Propoſals, and making none, into an open Negotiation by Writing; but he found all this imaginary, and not to be reduced to Practice.

Mauro Cordato told him, Theſe Propoſals were injurious to the Empire; and ask'd, If he had no other to make? The Reply was, He had no more to ſay, till he had an Anſwer to what he had already propoſed, which he had earneſtly preſſed for many Days in ſix Letters to Mauro Cordato: The Anſwer was, The Vizier was returning to Adrianople, and muſt acquaint the Grand Seignior with what paſſed, and he muſt go thither for his Anſwer. This ſtartled him, who thought to have concluded the Treaty at Belgrade, and immediately return'd, ſo he preſſed for an Anſwer, or to be diſmiſſed; but was told, He could not deveſt himſelf of his Character, which remained till my Lord Paget arrived, to whom Accidents might happen, as had to other Ambaſſadors, ſo he was forced to go by the Danube to Ruſic, and ſo to Adrianople, where he arrived the 24*th of* November, departing from Belgrade the 23*d of* October.

When he arrived firſt at Belgrade, Marquis D'Orat, who was with Teckely and the French, ſaid, He was no Engliſhman, but a German, and came from the Emperor. The Port had been ſenſible it was too great a Condeſcenſion to ſend their Ambaſſadors at Vienna; which Point of Honour they thought regain'd, by having one come to make Overtures to them, and a particular Miniſter for that Buſineſs in their Hands, whom perhaps they may not eaſily part with.

When Seignior Heemskirk was come to Adrianople, he would have Viſited the Chimacam, who excus'd it, the Grand Vizier not being arrived, who came the 2*d of* December, and a few Days after an Audience was deſired of him, which he put off, as not having diſcourſed with the Grand Seignior. A private Council was held, Orders ſent out to all parts for raiſing Men, and to the Treaſurer to give Money for providing Cannon, Ammunition, and all things neceſſary, to be early in the Field. The Staſſaki-Aga was ſent to the Tartar Han, with Money to be diſtributed among them to meet the Grand Vizier with a conſiderable Force at Belgrade.

Seignior Heemskirk continued his Sollicitations all December, and the beginning of January, by his own Druggerman, to the Vizier's Kiab, and by Letters to Mauro Cordato; and wrote a Complaining Letter to the Vizier of his being come hither for an Anſwer, and after ſo long time, and being come ſo far nothing was done. To which he was anſwer'd by Word of Mouth, never in Writing, That my Lord Paget being come to Belgrade, and in his way hither, it was thought fit in a Council to attend his Arrival, to ſee if he brought no other Propoſals; for if they were the ſame, one Anſwer would ſerve them both.

Lord Paget arrives at Adrianople.

The

1693. The ſixth of January Seignior Colyer came to Adrianople againſt the Deſire of Seignior Heemskirk, who wrote to him not to come; and at firſt there was great Coldneſs between them, and Tyles was never employed by Seignior Heemskirk.

The laſt of January, his Excellency my Lord Paget arrived; he would have enter'd privately, but the Vizier deſired the contrary, that it might not be thought the Port had wanted in their Reſpect to him, and his Lordſhip was received with a great deal of Ceremony, and Numerous Attendance of Chiauſes and Janiſaries.

His Audiences. The 18th of February his Excellency had his firſt Audience of the Grand Vizier, and gave him his Credentials, one for his Reſidence, the other for the Mediation.

The ſeventh of March his Lordſhip had his Audience of the Grand Seignior, and was very kindly received: He ſpoke his Complement, which was Interpreted by Mauro Cordato; and the Grand Seignior anſwered, That His Majeſty was a good Friend to the Port, and all ſuch ſhould be ever kindly received by him.

The ſeventeenth of March, his Excellency had a private Audience of the Vizier, where was the Mufti. His Lordſhip made the Offers of His Majeſty's Mediation for a Peace, or Truce between the Emperor, and his Allies, and the Port, on the Foot of Uti poſſidetis, only Caminieck to be reſtored, or razed. The Vizier ſaid in a Buſineſs of ſo great Import, he muſt conſult the Heads of the Law, and the Militia, and an Anſwer ſhou'd be given.

The 14th ditto, his Excellency Signior Heemskirk, and Colyer, were called to the Vizier to a Publick Audience, where on the Safra ſate the Vizier, the Mufti and Cadelesker on his Left Hand; on his Right the Chimacam, Iſmael Paſſa Janiſar-Aga, the Niſangi Paſſa, and the Teſterdar, and the three Ambaſſadors, the two Generals on Stools; below the Safra, the Kiah-Beg and all the Heads and Ojacks of the Janiſaries, the two Generals, chief of the Spahy's, and chief of the Treaſury in all near 100 Perſons: The Rais Effendi came into the middle of the Safra, and read aloud Signior Heemskirk's Propoſals, which he owned. This was done only to exaſperate the Militia: The Vizier ſaid, They muſt conſider of them, and give an Anſwer.

1693. The 17th the Vizier was turned out, and his Excellency finding the Vizier had his Deſign in Irritating the People by ſuch Extravagant Demands, went to the new Vizier, Mufti, Cadelesker, and Janiſar-Aga, telling them theſe Propoſals read were none of his, which was only one plain Propoſition on a Uti poſſeditis, which His Majeſty thinking equal, was willing to interpoſe his Offices thereon, if the Port thought fit, out of real Friendſhip. The Vizier ſaid, They would conſider of it, and give an Anſwer. The Mufti ſaid, The coming of three Embaſſadors had rais'd great Expectations in the People, and they could do no leſs than make known what Propoſals had been made: They were very well ſatisfied of His Majeſty's Friendſhip. The Cadelesker and Teſterdar ſaid, Without Reſtitution of the Morea, there could be no Peace. The Janiſar-Aga, who was come from Conſtantinople ſaid he had ſeen the Propoſals; That God would humble the Pride of the Enemy, and chaſtize it, he hop'd, this Tear.

But his Excellency Lord Paget, had vindicated himſelf clearly to all Miniſters, as his Propoſal was, but the other was ſent over all the Empire to prepoſſeſs the People; but Signior * Tyles had ſet all right in three Days.

* Interpreter.

It is obſervable, when Signior Heemskirk had no Intimacy with Tyles, he wrote to my Lord Paget in January, and to the Emperor, there was no hopes of Peace; but when he came into a Familiarity with Tyles, he was Illuminated, and in March wrote His Majeſty, the Peace was in a fair way, and he hoped to be himſelf the bringer of the News of it; and yet now Tyles ſays to us, in eight Months he has been here, they have never done any thing, and the Port will not have Peace, nor were inclin'd to it.

Signior Heemskirk was much Embroil'd, and preſſed my Lord Paget much to ſollicite the Vizier with Memorials; but his Excellency had ſeen ſo ill Effects of his Writing, that he thought it much better to ſeem Indifferent, than Importune, and to attend their Anſwer to his Propoſal.

Extract of my Lord Paget's Letter to a Friend, of the ſame Date with the preceding.

NOTWITHSTANDING all their ſeeming Reluctancies, and high Words, I am of Opinion the Turks may be perſwaded to hearken to Peace, eſpecially if the Imperial Army do any thing to purpoſe this Summer: The State here is ſhortly thus.

This preſent 7th of June, N. S. the Janiſſar-Aga is not yet gone into the Camp, nor will he go (as I think this 10 Days: About a Week after him the Grand Vizier goes; and about a Fortnight after that, the Army will begin to March.

It is not at preſent ſtrong, not of above 5 or 6000 Men, but the Aſiaticks and Tartars are to joyn them at Sofia: How many they may be is very uncertainly reported; the firſt however will not be Numerous; they reckon upon 20000 Tartars, that will be their greateſt Strength, and theſe altogether cannot be at Belgrade till the latter end of July at ſooneſt; ſo that if the Imperial Army be as ſtrong and as ready, as when I came from Vienna, I thought it would be, they will have time enough to attempt any thing, before theſe Forces can appear to hinder them.

And ſuch was the true State of Affairs at this time in the Ottoman Court in relation to a Peace.

COLYER.

All thoughts of Peace, and Treaties, being thus laid aſide, the Government employed its utmoſt Endeavours, and Counſel were taken in Matters and Contrivances tending to the War: It was reported, That the Grand Seignior, Sultan Achmet, had reſolved to go as far as Sophia, where he would paſs the Summer, being nearer to Belgrade, and the Frontiers in Hungary; but the Phyſicians perſwaded the contrary, as being prejudicial to the Health of the Sultan, who was already affected with the Dropſie, (the fatal and common Diſeaſe of that Ottoman Family) for Cure of which, many Conſultations were held by the Phyſicians; who, in regard that they found as yet a Schirrus only upon the Liver, they gave great hopes of his Recovery; howſoever the People took occaſion from hence to diſcourſe, That in caſe this Sultan Achmet were Dead, he would be ſucceeded by Sultan Muſtapha his Nephew, and Son to the late Sultan Mahomet, who had been Depoſed; which would be a happy Change for the whole Empire, he being Young and Brave, and as to all appearance, of a Martial Spirit, and a Lover of Juſtice.

Sultan Achmet ſick of the Dropſie.

To forward the Preparations for the War with all Expedition poſſible, ſtrict Orders were given to provide Caminieck with Proviſions, and neceſſary Food, for want of which, the Place laboured under the greateſt Extremity.

Preparations for the War.

Letters alſo, and Commands were diſpatched to all Parts in Aſia, to haſten the March of the Janiſaries and Spahees, and to enroll new Janiſaries, a Method not uſed in former Times; by which, taking every Pitiful Fellow that offered to come in, they compoſed ſuch a Band of raw Soldiers, not only unexperienced in War, but Poor, and Feeble, and Old, that ſcarce one half of them were judged able to hold out a March to Belgrade.

The Turks alſo diſpatched away 2000 Janiſaries to reinforce the Garriſon at Negropont; likewiſe they reinforced Canea with Men and Proviſions; as they alſo did their Army in and about the Morea, and ſtrengthned their Caſtles at the Dardanelli, with Soldiers, Gunners, and Engineers, under Command of Huſaein Paſha, who had formerly been Chimacam with the Grand Seignior, but the Troops deſigned for Hungary, marched ſlowly. Theſe Preparations being much retarded by the late Change of thoſe two great Officers, namely, the Grand Vizier, who, as we ſaid, voluntarily reſigned, and the Teſterdar, or Lord Treaſurer, called Iſmael Effendi Matulled, or put out, Diſgraced, and Exiled; tho' ſome reported, That he was ſecretly Strangled; which was a ſtrange, and an unſeaſonable Policy at ſuch a time as this, to put all things backward by the Death of two prime Officers of State, who perhaps were Innocent, and Good Miniſters: But under ſuch a Government as this, it is not ſufficient to be Wiſe, Honeſt, and Induſtrious, but you muſt alſo be Succeſsful, and free of Enemies, which are things not in our power.

Changes at Court.

By theſe Changes, place was made for other Officers; for Oſman Paſha, a Cunning, Knaviſh Candiot (as moſt of that Nation are) was made Chimacam in Adrianople. Muſtapha Paſha, who had been Chimacam, and Seraskier on the Danube was declared Grand Vizier; and Cantemir the Son of Dica Bey, who had for 30 Years paſt been Prince of Moldavia, was made Succeſſor to his Father. This Grand Vizier, before he could be warm in his Place, or provided with things neceſſary for the War, or acquainted with his Soul-

diery,

The New Vizier ſent to the Army.

diery, and the Chief Commanders, which were to fight under him, was commanded to be gone with all expedition to the Army; which he prepared to do with what ſpeed was poſſible. And in regard that all intentions for Peace were laid aſide, the Mediators were diſmiſſed from their further Attendance, and Mr. Heemskirk was licenſed to return to Vienna; tho' ſome difficulties aroſe thereupon at the inſtance of the French, who ſuggeſted, that Heemſkirk was an Inſtrument, and Spye of the Emperor, and a German; and not ſent as a Mediator from the King of England, whoſe true Miniſter my Lord Paget was: And this colour had like to have coſt Heemskirk dear, had not my Lord Paget own'd him for a Miniſter of the King, and unridled the Secret of the two Ambaſſadors. In like manner my Lord Paget had leave to go to his Houſe at Pera near Conſtantinople, which is the uſual place of the Engliſh Ambaſſadar's reſidence.

May. The Mediators diſmiſſed.

But as to the French Ambaſſador he continued ſtill at Adrianople; and when the Vizier marched, he ſent Fontaine his Dragoman, or Interpreter with him to attend all the Motions of the Vizier, and his Camp.

Whilſt theſe things were in Action, the news from Aſia was unpleaſing, and adminiſtred Matter for ſerious Conſideration at the Ottoman Court; where it was reported, That the Army of Baſſora, under their New Arabian Prince did daily increaſe, and that the Paſha of Sivas, or Sebaſſe, on the Frontiers of Perſia were in Arms; and that ſuch was the confuſion in thoſe Eaſtern Countries, as obliged the moſt powerful of the Aſiatick Spahees to remain at home on the guard of their own Country and Eſtates; ſo that the preſent Ottoman Force was inferiour to that of the preceding year; and by reaſon of the forementioned Changes; to which we may farther add, that of the Seimen Paſha, who was Lieutenant General of the Janiſaries, and advanced to be Aga, or General of the Janiſaries, in the place of Iſmael Paſha. Likewiſe divers Captains, who had been Creatures and Favourites of the late General, were deprived of their Commands, leaſt they ſhould make Deſturbances, or raiſe Factions in the Army; all which, as it dimimiſhed and enfeebled their Force, ſo it hindered the early appearance of the Turks in the Field.

Preparations for the Seas.

But the Preparations at Sea againſt the Venetians proceded more briskly than they did at Land; for in the Month of May, 22 Sail of Gallies, and 13 Great Men of War were provided and fitted out of the Arſenal at Conſtantinople, and ordered to ſail down to the Caſtles of the Dardanelli, there to join with the Gallies of the Beyes of the Archipelago; to which ſome Ships of the Barbarouſes being added, they computed, that they might form a Fleet of 24 Sail of Men of War, beſides Gallies.

Things proceding thus ſlowly by Land, for the Cauſes before-mention'd, the Vizier did not begin his March from Adrianople towards the Chriſtians, until the 26th of June Old Syle, deſigning at firſt for Belgrade; when on a ſudden, expreſs Orders were given to the Army to change the courſe of their March, and leave the Road to Belgrade, and take that for Valachia, and through that Country to enter into Tranſilvania: This alteration was the more ſurpriſing to the Germans, who expected not the Turks on that ſide, becauſe it was not known above a Week or 10 Days before the departure of the Vizier, the which Counſel was judged to have been given by the French Ambaſſador, or otherwiſe by the Tartars, who propounded to the Vizier to join him on the way with ſuch a Force, as ſhould make up his Army at leaſt 80000 Men.

The Vizier begins his march from Adrianople.

But whilſt theſe Matters were conſulting, news came that the Germans had a deſign to lay ſiege to Belgrade; and on their way thither had deſigned againſt the Palancha's of Jeno, and Julia, and threatned the Turks with devaſtations over all the plain Countries; and ſince the taking of Great Waradin, ſtreightned Temeſwaer with want of Proviſions; which put the Turks into ſome confuſion both at home and abroad, and diverted entirely the deſign of the Turks upon Tranſilvania, where the moſt miſchief might have been done on the Imperial Dominions; becauſe Tranſilvania hath ever been eſteemed the moſt convenient Door to let the Turks into Germany.

Fire at Conſtantinople.

But what about the ſame time alſo cauſed ſome deſturbances at home, was a Terrible Conflagration which happened at Conſtantinople: the Fire began firſt in the Street called Zubali, where they make the Muſquets, and all ſorts of Arms for the Grand Seignior's ſervice, deſtroying all the Forges, and Inſtruments belonging to that Work: and the fire taking its way, conſumed all before it, untill it came to the great Capan, which is the chief, and only Magazine for Flour, and Corn, and all Proviſions whatſoever, laid up for the Uſe of the City; and afterwards taking up the Hill, it took its courſe down by the way of Balata, and conſumed at leaſt a third part of that Diviſion, ſo that the Turks report, that above 20000 Shops, and Houſes were conſumed.

This great Conflagration being over, People began to enquire after the News which the Expreſſes brought from the Armies, from all parts; and particularly that from Aſia was of conſiderable importance; giving a Relation, that the New Arab Prince, Emir by Name, who reckned his Deſcent in a Direct Line from their Prophet Mahomet, brought an Army into the Field, pretending to make himſelf Soveraign of Baſſora, to which he had an Hereditary Right, and Title: His Army daily increaſing, obliged the Grand Seignior to ſend many of his Troops out of Europe under the Command of the Paſha of Boſnia to reinforce the Militia of thoſe Countries.

July. The European Generals being unacquainted with the ſituation, and qualities of thoſe Countries, and not knowing that in the Month of July the Rivers upon the melting of the Snows ſwell to a prodigious heighth, were ſtrangely ſurprized to find themſelves without any cauſe, or knowing how it came about, in the midſt of a deep Water: For being encamped in the Vally of a flat Country, the Arabs opened their Sluces, and having made ſome Channels like Aquæducts, they let ſo great a Flood of Waters out of the Neighbouring Rivers into the Turkiſh Camp, that before the Turks underſtood from whence that Inundation proceded, 6 or 7000 of them were drowned, and the reſt being put into confuſion, and endeavouring to ſave themſelves, fell into the hands of the Arabs, and were all cut in pieces, or made Priſoners; only the Paſha of Boſnia with 14 more eſcaped of all that multitude: And ſoon after this defeat the Arabs attacked, and took a Caravan, with the Spoils of which they enriched themſelves.

The Turks in Aſia drowned in the Waters.

The news of this Defeat very much diſcouraged the Turks in Europe, having loſt by this accident 25000 Men of their own Friends and Acquaintance, which became the more ſenſible to them at that time, when the Turkiſh Army became ſo feeble in Hungary, that had not the Tartars aſſiſted them with great Numbers, the Vizier would have been forced to return home with Confuſion, and Diſhonour.

The Tartars being made ſenſible of the great need that the Turks had of them, ſtood the more ſtrongly on their Terms, and made ſome difficulties of joining with them, but at length ſuffered themſelves to be worked upon, when they ſaw the rich Preſents which the Grand Signior had ſent to the New Tartan Han, to engage him to come early this Year into the Field; and when they ſaw the rich Veſts lined with Sables, and the Sword ſet with great Diamonds, with 40000 Zaichins in Mony, they needed no other Rhetorick, or perſuaſive Arguments to prevail upon them, but all unanimouſly prepared to make an early Campagne.

Upon the news that the Chriſtians deſign'd to beſiege Belgrade, the Vizier haſtned his march thither; where by reaſon of the many loſſes which that Garriſon had ſuſtained, a Recruit was ſent of 1000 men out of Boſnia, and 2000 Arnouts to reinforce the Garriſon. And alſo 15000 Turks more were detached from the Army in Boſnia to recognize, or take a view of the Chriſtian Forces in thoſe Countries; and having paſſed the Save over three ſeveral Bridges, came and ſhewed themſelves before Oſeck, which was commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Baron Ogiley: This Governor finding himſelf unable to oppoſe the Turks in the Field, kept himſelf within his Bulwarks and Fortifications; until the Turks having at their leiſure taken a view of the Place, and Country round about, retired back towards Belgrade, plundering every thing they could carry with them, together with Men, Women and Children, which they carried into ſlavery, to the number of about 3000 Souls. After which Ogiley drawing together a Body of about 800 ſelect and choiſe Men, he paſſed the Save, and with them ſurpriz'd a Town called Bratzein, to which having given fire, 200 Turks were burn'd therein, and the like number endeavouring to ſave themſelves from the flames, ran out of the City, of which near 100 men were killed on the Place; and many Chriſtians lately taken by the Turks, were releaſed, and ſent back to their own Habitations.

Since the taking of Great Waradin, Temeſwaer, Giula, and Geno, were ſo ſtreightned for want of Proviſions, that they were forced to ſend away all Women, and Children, and unneceſſary Perſons from the Places, the better to conſerve the Victuals, and Proviſions for the uſe of the Garriſon: For General Heuſler having for ſome time blocked up Geno, he made a nearer approach to it; and on the 16th and 17th day of June placing his Camp within half a mile of the place, he attacked the Suburbs, which were ſurrounded with a Ditch, and fortified with Paliſadoes; howſoever the Germans forced the place and took it, the Turks retiring with much confuſion into the City. June.

The next day being the 18th, General Heuſler having received four pieces of Cannon, 1693. non, he fired with them into the City, and threw ſome Bombs thereinto; after which he ſummoned the Place, and threatned them, that in caſe they did not immediately ſurrender, he would afterwards give them no Quarter. But the Turks not hearkning hereunto, a Battery was raiſ'd, from whence the Guns fired without ceaſing; and thereby in the ſpace of five or ſix days a Breach being made, all matters were prepared for a Storm on the Place; which the Turks not daring to withſtand, and adventure, they reſolved to capitulate; and on the 27th hung out a White Flag, and ſent out three of their Principal Men into the German Camp: Where entring into a Treaty, it was agreed, that the next day one of their Gates, and Bulwarks ſhould be delivered up into the Hands of the Beſiegers; which being performed the following day, the Garriſon of the Turks conſiſting of about 800 fighting Men, with 200 Horſe, were convoyed within half an hour's march from Lippa.

This City was provided with four Bulwarks, fortified with a high and ſtrong Wall, broad and deep Ditches, into which the River Kerez hath a paſſage; and within it hath another retreat fortified with four Towers. In this Place the Germans found 35 Braſs, and three Iron Guns, with other Warlike Stores, as 20000 pounds of Powder, and other Ammunition proportionable. In this Siege, within the Town, 350 Men were killed, and wounded.

Immediately after the ſurrender of Geno, General Heuſler inveſted the ſtrong Fortreſs of Philagoras, ſituated between Geno and Lippa, which yielded unto him; and having repaired the Breaches of Geno, and placed a ſmall Body of Men in thoſe parts, under the Command of General Hoſkirken, he returned to Great Waradin with his remaining Forces.

The Grand Vizier being on his march to Belgrade, the news of what had happened at Geno, and Philagoras was brought to him; and thereby ſuſpecting that Temeſwaer would be the next enterprize of Heuſtler, diſpatched immediately Orders to the Paſha of Belgrade to ſend another Convoy, and more Troops thither to reinforce the Garriſon of Temeſwaer with Men and Proviſions. But the Paſha with ſeveral other Commanders refuſing to obey, upon certain pretences, that ſuch a Detachment would be the Ruin of the Place, and that to ſave Temeſwaer, they ſhould loſe Belgrade; the Vizier became ſo enraged, that with his own Hand he killed July 11. ſix of the Principal Turks, who were Complices with the Paſha, and left their Dead Bodies in the Streets to the view and terror of others. 1693.

Whilſt theſe things paſſed at Belgrade, the Duke of Croy, who commanded the Imperial Army, prepared all neceſſaries to beſiege the Place. And in the firſt place he cauſed a Bridge to be laid over the Danube at Vereſmarton, of an hours journey in length; over which he paſſed one half of his Army, and the other half he tranſported in Ships and Boats, and were followed by the Hanover Troops, and the Artillery: And tho' he had by theſe means gotten together in a Body, yet many things were wanting to begin, and carry on the ſiege; to ſupply which, being encamped on the 25th of this Month near Peter Waradin, he diſpatched an Expreſs to ſome Brandenburgher Troops, which remained in the Rear, to advance forwards, and haſten their march: And having aſſembled a Council of War, it was reſolved forthwith to paſs the Save over the Bridge of Peter Waradin, and proceed to Belgrade. And accordingly towards the end of this Month, marching with great diligence, the Huſſars having the Vanguard, ſurprized the Turks near Belgrade, of whom they took many Priſoners, with ſome Cattle, which they brought back into the Army; by which the Turks were ſo alarm'd, and by the march of the Imperial Army towards them, that they endeavoured to carry away, and ſave the beſt of their Goods, but the Imperial Horſe prevented their deſign.

The Christians approaching near the August. Turks on the firſt of Auguſt, began to fire on all ſides from the Town; whilſt the Germans on the contrary, were buſily working on their Lines of Circumvallation, had not finiſhed any Battery until the fifth, when they likewiſe began to fire on the City. It was farther at that time deſigned that two of the Chriſtian Gallies, well armed, ſhould drive away from before the Town ſome light Turkiſh Gallies, by which means that ſide lying open, they could eaſily encompaſs the City on all ſides.

On the ninth the Brandenburgher Troops joyned the Army, and on the ſame day, ſome Turks belonging to the Garriſon of a Palanca called Boskona, ſituated about The Palanca of Boſkona capitulates. three hours diſtance from the Army, came to the Camp, and offered to capitulate; the which being granted with ſuch Conditions as were propoſed, the Fortreſs ſurrendred, and the Soldiers and Inhabitants were convoyed ſafe to Semendria: In the Palanca they found nine Guns with ſome Ammunition, with good ſtore of Hay and Corn.

On

1693. August.

On the 12th of this Month the Turks, to celebrate their Annual Feaſt of the Bairam, fired all the Guns round the City and Caſtle; and the Day following made a briſk Sally with ſuch Bravery, that at the firſt they brought the Germans into ſome Confuſion; but rallying themſelves again into good Order, they beat the Turks back into the City.

The Turks make a Sally. Are driven in with loſs.

On the 14th they made another Sally more furious than the former, but with leſs Succeſs, being repulſed with the loſs of 500 Men killed and taken Priſoners: This Blow gave the Chriſtians an advantageous Opportunity, in the ſpace of two Days to advance their Approaches to 150 Paces from the Counterſcarp.

Another Sally.

On the 17th another Sally was made by the Turks, but were repulſed with the loſs of about 100 Men; by which the Germans advanced their Works within 80 Paces of the Counterſcarp. And Bombs thrown into the Town.

On the 19th threw ſeveral Bombs into the City, which did great execution; and poſted ſix Regiments on the other ſide of the Danube; by which all Succours coming to the Town from Temeſwaer, or other Parts on that ſide, were hindred from giving any Relief; and the Turks Ships were bridled, and obliged to keep at a diſtance.

On the 26th the great Battery of 36 Guns was finiſhed, from which the Beſiegers continually fired on the City, and the Turks again on the Battery, where the Duke of Croy ſtanding open was ſhot through the Hat with a Musket-Bullet, and his Adjutant-General killed by his ſide with the like.

The next Day being the 30th of Auguſt, Kathana Muſtapha Paſha, with a Body of 300 Horſe, Attacked the Emperor's advanced Troops near Semblin, but were ſo received by them, that 40 of them remained upon the Spot, ſeveral Wounded, and many made Priſoners. The ſame Day Intelligence was brought to the Duke of Croy, That the Grand Vizier had drawn together from all Parts, as many Forces as he had been able to do, with Reſolution to relieve the Town.

The Grand Vizier marches to relief of the Town.

On the laſt Day of Auguſt, the Chief Ingineer Keyſerfelt entering the Trenches, was killed by a Musket-ſhot.

Septemb.

In the firſt ſix Days of September nothing was performed which was conſiderable, but that the Approaches were ſtill advancing; ſo that on the 7th, the Beſiegers Stormed the Counterſcarp, which continued until the going down of the Moon, when the Darkneſs of the Night put an end to the Aſſault, in which the Chriſtians loſt 1000 Men, killed and wounded, on the Place, and amongſt them the Bavarian General Sybeldorf, with two Lieutenant-Colonels, and other Officers.

The Chriſtians loſs.

1693. Septemb.

The ill Succeſs that the Chriſtians had ſuſtained by the Storm made on the Counterſcarp, being the cauſe of Raiſing the Siege, it may be very proper to inſert here a Relation, which a principal Officer gave thereof, who was preſent at the Attack made thereon the 7th of September 1693. in this manner.

Whilſt theſe things were acting, News came, That the Tartars had appeared in the Neighbourhood with a Body of 2000 Men, and had droven away with them ſome Cattle: And

On the 10th Inſtant News was brought by ſeveral Expreſſes, That the Grand Vizier with an Army of 80000 Men, was arrived, together with a great Fleet of Ships and Gallies, before Widin: Upon which News, and the ſharp Blow received ſome few Days before, upon the Counterſcarp of the Town, it much diſcouraged the Proceedings of the Germans: Upon which a Council of War being called, it was judged dangerous to expect the Arrival of ſo great an Army, or to attend and ſtand their Shock; and therefore it was concluded beſt to Decamp, and quit the Siege, which accordingly was executed with good Order, and the whole Army drew off with Bag and Baggage, Guns, and all other Materials; and ſo paſſing the River Save, over the Bridge which they had made, they Burnt and Deſtroy'd it: And thus ended this Expedition with no ſmall Charge and Expence of Blood and Men to the Emperor.

The Siege of Belgrade raiſed.

In the Management of which, many Errors and Blunders were committed: The Trenches were not opened until 13 Days after the Place was Inveſted; and that the Batteries were not ready until 13 Days after that: It was another Overſight, That the Fleet, which ſhould have hindered all Proviſions from the Town, coming from Temeſwaer, was not ready before the Town was Inveſted; which was as ridiculous, as when the King of Devmark forgot his Mortars, going before Hamburg; and ſo were the Germans Cannon, which were not brought before the Town till five Weeks after it was Inveſted.

Copie de la Relation envoyée à & ſur l'aſſaut de la Contreſcarpe de Belgrade, du 7 Septembre, 1693.

QUOYQUE je n'aye pas manqué de rappreſenter icy qu'il étoit dangereux de donner un aſſaut de Contreſcarpe, quand elle ſe trouve encore eloignée plus de cent pas des approches, comme effectivement étoit celle de Belgrade le 7 Septembre, parceque ceux qui portent la faſcine devant venir de ſi loin à decouvert ſont la plus part tués ou bleſſéz avant qu'ils arrivent a la Palliſade, & par conſequent n'en peuvent fournir aſſez, ny aſſez vite pour faire le Logement requis & ſa Communication aux approches avant l'arrivée du jour, outre que par cette grande diſtance on expoſe plus dangereux de commencer le dit aſſaut aprés la nuit clauſe par les Raiſons ſuivantes: Et

I. Parceque nôtre Artillerie, & nos Fuſeliers ne pouvant ajuſter leurs coups aux Parapets, & defences de l'Ennemy ne ſcavroient auſſi l'empecher de plonger à decouvert ſon feu ſur les aſſailants, & ſur les travailleurs.

II. Puiſque nos Grenadiers par l'Obſcurité ne voyant pas la contenance de l'Ennemy, ny pouvant reconnoître ſa foibleſſe dans les poſtes, qu' il occupe pandant la Chaluer de l'aſſaut, ils n'ont pas lieu auſſy de profiter du moindre avantage, que la Confuſion du d'Ennemy luy peut donner dans l'action, apres quoy il peut ſe remettre, & revenir a ſon devoir.

III. Parceque les Turques ont accouteméz de redoubler la garde dans chacun de leurs poſtes pendant la nuit ſeulement.

IV. Le Soldat, & bien ſouvent l'Officier ne ſe piquant pas d'une égale bravoure, quand ils ne ſont pas obſervés de leurs ſuperieurs comme ils feroient s'ils agiſoient pendant la lumiere, ils profitent ſouvent de la Moindre confuſion pour ſe cacher ou ſe derober a leur devoir.

V. Parceque le tems du travail devenant par ce moyen plus court on né ſcavroit ſe mettre a couvert ſur la Palliſade par un bon Logement, ny faire la Communication en arriere avant l'arrivée du jour ſans la quelle on ſeroit enſuite forcé par l'Ennemy d'abandonner le poſte.

On ne laiſſa neantmoins pas le jour 7 Septembre deux heures apres le ſoleil couché d'ordonner l'aſſaut de la Contreſcarpe de cette place, qui fût diſposé comme il s'en ſuit. A ſcavoir 400 Grenadiers avec deux Capitaines ſous le commandement du Baron de Flouk major du vieux Staremberg partagéz moitié à la gauche, & moité a la droite devoient donner depuis le Ravelin du Roy juſques a la Contregarde de la gauche de nôtre attacque ſoutenu par 200 Fuſiliers, qui étoient auſſi commandéz par deux Capitaines, les quels devoient être ſecondés par 400 autres Fuſiliers, a ſcavoir par 200 ſous le commandement du Lieutenant Colonel de Thaun, qui étoit deſtiné a la droite, & ſontenu par le Colonel Comte Marſigli avec deux Bataillons, & les autres 200 ſous le commandement du Lieutenant Colonel d'Anali qui étoit deſtiné a la gauche ſoutenu par le Colonel Danois Stockamer avec deux autres Bataillons. L'attacque ſudit étant mené par le General Seiberſtorf ſous la direction, & commandement du General Comte Guido Staremberg. Ce qui fût executé immediatement aprés le ſignal donné. Quand nos Grenadiers virent l'Ennemy qui ſortit en même temps auſſi de ſa Palliſade, ſur le Glacis vers l'ouvrage à Corne, chacun tenant un Flambeau allumé d'une main, & le ſabre de l'autre pour les recevoir, mais pouſſez par la vigueur des nôtres, & par le grand feu qu'ils luy firent deſſus il fût obligé de rentrer au plus vite dans ſon chemin couvert, & dans ſes contre-approches, ou nos gens le chargerent avec une ſi grande quantité de Grenades, & le Fuſil creviſé a la palliſade qu'ils en firent reſter un grand nombre, ſur la place, & le mirent partie en confuſion, lors qu'on Capitaine des dits Grenadiers ayant fait dire a Monſieur le General Séiberſtorf de luy envoyer du monde pour le ſoutenir & pour faire le Logement ſur la Palliſade; Le dit General luy fit reſpondre, qu'il ſcauroit bien luy envoyer tout cela, quand il ſeroit temps il étant pas ſon Affaire d'entrer dans ces ſortes de diſpoſitions, de maniere que nos Gens furent une grande heure & demy a decouvert ſur la Palliſade, ſans qu'on leur envoya ny les Fuſiliers deſtinés pour les ſoutenir, ny les travailleurs avec les Faſcines, & Gabions pour les Loger, quoyqu'ils en fiſſent toutes les inſtances poſſibles, aprés quoy les dits 400 Grenadiers ne ſe trouvant plus fort qu'au nombre d'environ 150 le reſte ayant été tuéz ou bleſſés, on fit ſortir les Fuſiliers pour les ſoutenir; &

Monſieur

Quoyque la bravoure de nos Gens alla juſques a l'opiniatreté celle des Ennemies fut aſſurement toute extraordinaire puiſqu' il ſe deffendit avec une telle conſtance, & fit un feu du Mouſquet ſi continué pendant deux bonnes heures, qu'on ne pouvoit diſtinguer un coup de l'autre, outre les Bombes, & Grenades, qu'il tirá ſans ceſſe particulierement du chemin couvert entre l'ouvrage a Corne & le Ravelin du Roy, ou nos Gens attaquerent parme priſe contre la diſpoſition faite, & ou il y avoit trois Palliſades l'une devant l'autre, dont de la plus avancée l'Ennemy ſe deffendoit avec le Mouſquet, de la ſeconde il jettoit des pierres, & de la troiſiême des Grenades avec des Cuilleres ſans diſcontinuer un moment.

S'il eſt extraordinaire, qu'on aye manqué de faire un logement de Contreſcarpe particulierement avec des ſi braves Gens, comme nous avions, il doit l'être encore plus qu'on n'aye pu reuſſir devant un Ennemy, qui ne'n a jamais deffendu juſques a preſent, & on ne ſcauroit en attribuer la faute qu'a la mauvaiſe diſpoſition a ſcavoir parceque on l'a attaquée de trop loin, que l'on a voulu attacquer la nuit contre les raiſons adduites, que l'Artillerie n'a jamais tiré aux deffenſes, & Palliſades des lieux que nous devions attaquer. 1693. Que les Ingenieurs (Particulierement Morando) Abandonnerent d'abord le poſte. Que les Grenadiers de la droit en'attaquerent pas ou il falloit. Que ceux-cy, & ceux de la Gauche ne furent pas ſoutenús, & parceque enfin l'Ingenieur, qui avoit la direction du travail ſur les autres ne ſortit jamais le fiant aux faux rapports qu'on luy faiſoit.

Cependant ſi le mallieur vouloit qu'il fallut quitter cette Place, il eſt conſtant que, Laiſſant a part la principale raiſon de n'avoir pas coupé a l'Ennemy la communication de la Riviere, Les Ingenieurs, & l'Artillerie ont par leur negligence, particulierement contribués a cette perte, puiſque les premiers ont commencés travailler a la ſappe êtant encore à 150 pas loin, faiſant ainſi les paraleles, & 4 ou 5. Clôter d'ouvrage en 24 heurs, & les ſeconds n'ont jamais voulu avancer leurs Batteries, on il falloit pour rompre les deffenſes de l'Ennemy, ny tirer cette quantite de Bombes, & Canons neceſſaries pour ruiner cette place, particulierement le jour de l' aſſaut ſuſdit pendant le quel jour ils ne tirerent jamais ny aux Palliſades du Chemin couvert, ny aux deffences des Contreaproches, & pieces, que nous devions attaquer, ce qui donna lieu a l'Ennemy de ſoutenir ſi bien ſes Ouvrages, qui êtoient encore touts entiers.

L'on aura perdu dans cette aſſaut environ 1000 hommes, tant tuéz que bleſſes parmy les uqels il y a 254 Grenadiers bien comptéz & beaucoup d'Officiers, & entre autres Monſieur le General Seiberſtorf tué.

Nous ſommes environ 80 pas de la Palliſade de la Place, de ſort que Samedy 12 du mois nous ſerons en êtat d'attaquer la Contreſcarpe une ſeconde fois qui ne reuſſira pas mieux que la premiere, ſi les diſpoſitions n'en ſeront meilleures.

Ce matin 9 de Septembre, ſur les 9 heures, les Tartares ſont venus juſques à nôtre retranchement & ont emmenéz plus de 800 Beufs, & quelques chevaux de l'Armée, & partrois ou deux faits Priſonniers on eſt averti, que le ſecour ſera icy dans cinque a ſix jours fort de 90000 Hommes, avec 80 pieces de Canon, cecy cependant ne ſe conforme point, avec les nouvelles du General Veterani ; De quelle facon que cela ſoit, ſi le ſecours vient je ne vois pas que nous ayons aſſez d'Infanterie pour ſoutenir les Approches, Garner les Lignes pour mettre au de la du Danube, & empecher

1693, cher le ſecour, & pour Garder les ponts, & proviande, qui ſerà ſans doute coupée par les Tartares, qui paſſeront là Sauve ou a la nage ou à Sabagg de ſorte que, non obſtant que ſur le commencement nous ayons eu aſſez de temps, & moyens, pour emporter cette place, Je vois tres neceſſaire d'en abandonner le Siege, & repaſſer au plus vite la Sauve, ſi l'on veut conſerver l'Armée, le Royaume d'Hongrie, & toutes ſes Conquêtes, &c.

Continuation du Journal de Siege de Belgrade, depuis le 5 juſqu'au 9 Septembre, 1693.

LE 5 le feu de nos Batteries fut fort grand, & nous jettemes quantité de Bombes & de Carcaſſes ſur l'ouvrage à Corne. Nous commencâmes auſſi a faire une grande Ligne parallele a notre droite.

Le General Archinto fut dangereuſement bleſſe d'un coup de Mouſquet, & pendanr tout le travail nous n'eûmes qu'un Soldat de bleſſé & pas un de tué.

Sur le ſoir un transfuge de la ville, qui étoit Chrêtien & qui avoit travaillé aux Mines des Ennemis rapporta qu'il n'y en avoit encore pas une de remplie. Il s'offrit a nous decouvrir toutes celles qui avoient été faites contre notre Attaque ce qu'il fit le lendemain, & on a trouvé que cela étoit conforme aux avis que quelques uns de nos Ingenieurs, qui avoient fortifié autrefois Belgrade, avoienr donné & a ceux qu'on a eu depuis.

Le 6 il arriva 2 Expres que le General Veterani renvoya de Tranſylvanie avec nouvelle certain que le Grand Viſir avoit paſſé le Danube avec les Turcs, & que parmy les Tartares il regnoit une Maladie contagieuſe qui en faiſoit mourir pluſieurs.

Le méme jour on fit la Parallele gauche & on l'avanca beaucoup, & en pluſieurs endroits on ſappa. Nous commencames auſſi a fermer le Danube avec des bateaux de Moulins a la Turque & une maniere des chaiſnes Flottantes, au deſſous de la Ville, entre deux Forts que nous avons aux deux bords de la jiviere depuis nos Lignes de Circonvallation. 1693.

Le 7, a 4 heures du Matin le General Archinto mourut de ſa bleſſûre & a 7 heures on fit aſſembler les Generaux de l'Infanterie & on tint conſeil pour ſcavoir de quelle maniere on attaqueroit la Contreſcarpe & on reſolut pour mieux tromper l'Ennemy d'attaquer le poligone par pluſieurs endroits a la fois, & a chaque endroit premierement avec 100 Grenadiers enſemble, enſuite avec 300, qui devoient pourſuivre ceux des Ennemis qu'ils trouveroient. Ceux ci devoient étre ſuivis de 300 autres qui avoient ordre de prendre poſte ſur les Paliſſades.

Les Grenadiers devoient étre ſontenus de 600 Fuſeliers, & tous enſemble devoient étre couverts de 1200 Mouſquetaires des dernieres Lignes. On deſtina 1700 hommes pour toutes ſortes de travaux & 6 Bataillons de reſerve. Excepté ce qui étoit de reſerve il n'y eut que 4100 hommes pour l'Attaque, dont 2 tiers des Imperiaux & un tiers des Brandebourgeois & Lunebourgeois devoient donner à la droite.

Le General Guido Stahremberg eut l'Attaque droite, & le General Bavarien Monſieur Seybelſdorf la gauche. Les Auxiliaires avoient leur poſte au milieu, chacun devoit commander les ſiens & avoir ſon Corps de reſerve particulier en cas de beſoin.

L'Attaquc devoit commencet une demi-heure avant la nuit, afin que pendant la nuit on puſt ſe fortifier & avoir toutes les Communications neceſſaires.

A midi on amena tout le monde dont on avoit beſoin & a 2 heures apres Midi S. A. le Duc de Croy & le General Heuſler vinrent eux mémes donner les ordres ſur la place ainſi on fit en toute diligence apporter des Faſcines, des Gabions & autres choſes neceſſaires; mais avant qu'on fuſt preſt non ſeulement le tems deſtiné pour l'atraque ſe paſſa, mais on traſſna juſqu'a 10 heures du ſoir lorſque la lune ſe couchoit de ſorte qu'on croioit de renvoyer au lendemain, mais l'ardeur des Soldats & des Officiers etoit ſi grande & la contenance de l'Ennemi qui ſe tenoit pres de ſes feux donna ſi bonne eſperance qu'on voulut faire une tentative.

Les

Les Grenadiers qui coururent d'abord, firent fort bien, & ſauterent en pluſieurs endroits dans la Contreſcarpe, les autres commencerent a prendre poſte : Nos Canons & nos Bombes les ſeconderent a merveille, & c'etoit un beau feu a voir ; mais les Ennemis qui etoient aſſembléz dans la Contreſcarpe & dans les ouvrages de dehors en ayant eu le vent ſans qu'on s'en doutaſt, illuminerent tout par le moyen de leurs feux d'Artifice.

Ils firent une opiniatre reſiſtance & attirerent a eux avec des Crochets nos Faſcines & Gabions, & en jettant continuellement des Sacs de Poudre, des pierres & des Grenades ils empecherent que nous ne gardaſſions poſte ſi prés de la Contreſcarpe.

Outre que pendant l'obſcurité ceux qui étoient a l'Attaque gauche s'avancerent ſi fort de là droite & y pouſſerent tellement ceux du milieu, que chacun n'etant pas dans ſa veritable place, & ce poſte etant ſi eloigné de nos Lignes qu'on ne pouvoit s'y maintenir de nuit, encore moins de jour, on trouva bon de faire reculer nôtre Monde & de le faire avancer peu a peu juſqu'a l'endroit on nous ſommes preſentement. Ce qui ſe fit aprés un rude choc qui dura pendant 2 heures, & nous nous ſommes logés a 24 pas par le Moyen d'une nouvelle Ligne. Nous avons eu 6 ou 700 Hommes de tuéz & bleſſez.

Le General des Bavarois Monſieur Seyberſdorf a été tué dans cette occaſion, comme auſſi le Lieutenant Colonel Horn, le jeune Comte Beck : Parmi les bleſſez ſe trouverent le Colonel Marſigli, le Colonel Blankenſee, le Comte de Thaun Lieutenant Colonel de Guido Stahremberg, les Barons d'Alman & d'Andremont Capitaines. Les Ennemis doivent avoir auſſi beaucoup perdu de Monde.

Le 8 on a beaucoup avancée la nouvelle Ligne, & on a achevé un grand travail ſans faire aucune perte, en ſorte que dans 3 jours on eſpere d'étre pres de la Contreſcarpe. On a detaché des Partys pour aller reconnoitre l'Ennemi qu'on croit d'etre bientot icy aux environs.

Le 9 un Party de Tartares vint juſques vers nôtre Camp. Il a emmené quantité de beſtail, qu'on faiſoit paitre malgré la deffenſe au de la des Sentinelles. On les a pourſuivi & on a fait 2 Priſonniers qui diſent que le Grand Viſir eſt vers la Morava avec ſon Armée & qu'il doit inceſſamment s'avancer vers Semendria.

Septemb.

The Grand Vizier having entered the Town on the 15th, the Chriſtians retired from before it, the Vizier cauſed all the Works which the Germans had made, to be filled, and levelled; and what damage the Cannon and Bombs had made, to be repaired ; and ſent freſh Proviſions for Temeſwaer under a ſtrong Convoy ; and having cauſed the Tartars to make ſome Excurſion near Peter Waradin, and taken a view of the Imperial Camp, the Vizier attempted nothing more of moment. Nor did the Imperial Army undertake any thing farther, than to Retrench it ſelf near to Peter Waradin, and act on the Defenſive, which was all that had been done of moment, during the remainder of this whole Campaign, unleſs in theſe two Particulars following.

On the 17th of September, Count Batheim Ban of Croatia, Dalmatia, and Sclavonia, marched from the River Unna, and Coſtannizza, with the Land Militia, and arrived on the 19th at three a Clock in the Afternoon, before the Turkiſh City call'd Brunzein Maidan; where having taken a Survey of the Ground, the following Night the Trenches were opened : And Brunzien taken by Storm.

On the 20th, they began to fire their great Guns, and to throw Bombs into the City : The Garriſon, and the Inhabitants defended themſelves bravely ; for tho' they were twice Summoned, they refuſed to Surrender, ſaying, That the Place was a Magazine belonging to the Sultan, which therefore they were obliged to maintain to the laſt Drop of their Blood : The Place was alſo of greater importance, by reaſon of the Iron and Copper Mines, which aroſe in the Neighbourhood, out of which they forged Mortar-pieces, and great Quantities of Iron Bullets.

The Beſieged defended themſelves very valiantly for the ſpace of two Hours ; but at laſt the Palliſadoes being pulled up, or cut down, the Walls of the City were forced, and taken, and above 500 Men and Women were put to the Sword, amongſt which there were two Chief Commanders, and a third, Chachilovich by Name, was taken Priſoner, together with many principal Perſons more of both Sexes.

Within the Town the Beſiegers found great quantities of Bombs, of which ſome were of 200 weight, with ſtore of Braſs of rare and cunning Workmanſhip, together with other very rich Booty ; of all which having Plundered the Inhabitants, and carried away all that was worth the taking, they burned the City and Suburbs to Aſhes, with the Houſes that were in the Neighbourhood, with the loſs only of about 40 Men.

The other Succeſsful Enterprize was executed on the 19th of October by General Hoffkirken, againſt Giula, of which the General himſelf gave this Narrative in a Letter to the Duke of Croy, ſent him by an Expreſs in this manner.

General Hoffkirken's Letter to the Duke of Croy.

‘THIS Morning I fell upon the Turks and Tartars very early, when they leaſt expected me, and having at the firſt onſet forced them to retreat beyond the firſt Palanca, I cauſed the Dragoons, with 500 Horſemen to alight from their Horſes, and with their Swords in their Hands to paſs the Ditch : The Enterprize was bold, but vigorouſly executed. The Turks were very ſtrong, their Force conſiſting of 40 Troops of Horſe, 1200 Janiſaries, with 2800 Tartars newly arrived to Convoy Proviſion into that Fortreſs ; but being on the other ſide of it, they were ſo hotly attacked, that they were driven to the Caſtle, and upwards of 1000 of them were killed, and 2500 Horſes and Camels taken from them. All the Proviſions which ſhould have been brought into Giula were yet lying in their Moſques within the Palancha, together with ſome thouſands of Meaſures of Corn which came laden on Camels, were burn'd in the ſight of the Turks, and thereby all their coſt and labours loſt, which were deſigned to ſupply that Place with Proviſions. Had I come but eight Hours ſooner, I had alſo met with the Tartars marching to Debrezin; howſoever I am now preparing to follow them, and hope to come up with them to morrow, or the day following.

The Tartars returning homewards to Budziack, and paſſing through Walachia, they entirely ruin'd and deſtroyed the Country. But before we end this Year, and the Accidents which happened therein, we are to take notice of another terrible fire at Conſtantinople : For as there happened one before in the Month of May laſt paſt, ſo now another broke out on the 26th of Auguſt, more grievous and terrible than any had done for many years before. The former Fire in May began at Balata, as we have related ; but that in the Month of Auguſt broke out at Odun Scheleſi, or the Wood-wharf, being the common place where all the Timber for building Houſes and Ships is laid, and in which are many hundreds of Chambers of vaſt bigneſs for receiving all ſorts and ſizes of ſquar'd Timber, with millions of Boards, and other Timber fitted for building ; the Damage of which amounted to an incredible ſum ; and was of ſuch a general terror and conſternation, that had it happened at the time when Belgrade was laſt beſieged, the People for very affrightment would have fled from Philopopolis and Adrianople ; and at Conſtantinople it ſelf the People were poſſeſſed with ſuch a Panick Fear, that thouſands of Families were ready to abandon the City, and to fly into Aſia, for a quarter part of the City was burn'd down ; and to encreaſe this terror amongſt the People, it was given out, that the Germans were coming upon them with a very numerous Army. And it is here very obſervable, that about that time things being in a doubtful condition, and no news coming from the Army, nor from Belgrade, the Grand Seignior in a moſt furious rage ſwore, that if that City were loſt, he would take off the Heads of the Grand Vizier, and of Oſman Paſha, the Chimacam, who affrighted with this Menace, fell ſick, and died with fear. The Eunuchs alſo in the Seraglio took the confidence from hence to ſpeak againſt the Government, exclaiming openly, that if ſuch Miſcarriages were permitted in, and amongſt the Principal Officers, the Sultan would be forced to quit Europe, and take refuge in Anatolia.

August:

Conſtantinople burn'd a ſecond time this Year.

But when the news came that the Siege of Belgrade was raiſed, the Anger of the Sultan began to abate, and to be appeaſed againſt the Chief Officers ; and then the language of the People changed its tone, and praiſed the Officers, who but a few days before they had curſed and condemned to utter Ruine, ſaying that the raiſing of this Siege was a Miracle of God, who had heard their Prayers ; which brought a vaſt Confluence of People to their Moſches, to give Thanks to God, and to make Corban, as they call it, which is a kind of Sacrifice, offered in this manner ; they who are of the richer ſort, kill Sheep and Lambs, and having prepared them, they cut them in pieces, and give them to the Poor, which is a great Charity and Relief to them ; and Corban made at Conſtantinople and Adrianople.

1693. this in ſuch caſes of Joy, and Thankſgiving, is the moſt Solemn Act in all their Religion.

The Turks before this Action were grievouſly dejected and caſt down, but were again revived by the news that the Siege of Belgrade was raiſed. To theſe Misfortunes and Miſeries the raging Peſtilence of this Year contributed very much, of which thouſands of People died in all parts of the Ottoman Dominions; and thus the Turks had three Judgments of God upon them this laſt Year, namely Fire, Sword, and Peſtilence.

And this is all that paſſed this Year of any moment; for the Venetians had neither done, nor attempted any thing; and the Turks having loſt nothing, took courage againſt the next Year to be early in the field, with a far greater Army than they had this, and likewiſe at Sea with a ſtronger, and a more numerous Fleet, having 20 Sail of Stout Men of War in the Archipelago already fitted, from 50 to 80 Guns, beſides the increaſe of their Galiots, and Brigantines on the Danube. Theſe and ſuch like matters encouraging the Turks, with the Expectation of a Peace with Poland, which the French Ambaſſador fomented, and forwarded ſo far, that an Ambaſſador being ſent from Varſovia to Adrianople to treat, the ſame backed with the French Intereſt; it was generally believed that the Peace was concluded; but how true that was, the Succeſſes of the next Year will demonſtrate unto us.

Anno 1694.

1694. THIS following Year of 1694 produced no greater Actions than the former, but yet continued ſtill to be ſucceſsful to the Emperor. In the beginning of March the Grand Vizier was diſpoſſeſſed of his High Office, and ſucceeded by Ali, Paſha of Tripoli; the cauſe whereof was on a ſlight occaſion, which was this; the Vizier being deſirous to take ſome recreation with hunting Hares on a certain day, his Enemies took the opportunity to bring the Sultan that way, where he unluckily met with the Vizier's Dogs, and a noiſe of hunting; of which the Grand Seignior enquiring what it meant, ſome Enemies to the Vizier anſwered, that it was the Grand Vizier, who might have employed his time in management of the Affairs of the Empire, better than in Sports and Recreations, reſerved, and more becoming the pleaſures of his Maſter, than his own; but this (as they added) was no wonder, it being his conſtant trade and practice. With which the Sultan became ſo enraged, that he immediately ſent for him, and taking the Seals from him, he deprived him of his Office.

1694. The Grand Vizier depoſed.

Hereupon Ali Paſha was ſent for, being eſteemed a Man of great Courage, and Experience in all State Affairs, and being Arrived at Adrianople in the beginning of May, he immediately put forth the Horſe-Tail, which is a Signal that the Vizier deſigns his march for the Camp in 40 days afterwards; and to ſhew his readineſs, and zeal for the Grand Seignior's Service, he raiſed and equipped 3000 Men at his own Charge, and out of his own Eſtate. But here we may obſerve, that before the former Vizier was depos'd, Orders had been given, that henceforward no Venetian Ships ſhould be permitted to come into any of the Ottoman Ports under Engliſh or French Colours, upon confiſcation of Ship and Lading; howſoever two Months were allowed for execution of the Penalty, on thoſe Ships which were already arrived within the Ports.

As the Grand Vizier was depos'd for the reaſons aforeſaid, ſo alſo was the Chimacam, called Calailicos Ahmet Paſha, of Greek Extraction, in danger of being ſtrangled, had not the Queen Mother, and the Kuzlir Aga, or Chief Eunuch procured the favour to have his Puniſhment altered, and changed to an Exile into Egypt, for the many Tyrannies and Cruelties he had committed; and particularly for that he had taken away the Ancient Church called St. George at Conſtantinople, belonging to the Patriarchate for ſome hundreds of Years before that time: In his place Jeien Paſha, a prudent Perſon, and one very well practiſed in Affairs, was conſtituted Chimacam; and being the Nephew of the famous Kupriogli, gave genoral ſatisfaction to all People, and particularly to the Greeks and Chriſtians, to whom he always ſhewed much favour.

Chimacam Ahmet Paſha baniſhed.

At this time, as is uſual, there were two great Factions at Adrianople, one in the Seraglio, conſiſting of the Queen Regent, the Kuzlir-Aga, and other Principal Courtiers; the other Party in oppoſition to theſe, were the Mufti, the Grand Vizier, and Principal Officers of the Janizaries, and Spahees: To ſtrengthen theſe, after the Death of Oſman Paſha, the Selictar-Aga was choſen Chimacam, being a Young Man, a Chircaſſian by Nation, of a very good underſtanding, and for his years very well verſed in Affairs: This Perſon being promoted to this Office without the knowledge or conſent either of the Grand Vizier, 1694. zier, or the Muſti, but only by the Machination or Contrivance of the Kuzlir-Aga and Queen Mother, rendred his Condition the more unſetled, and uncertain. And indeed not only the Court, but all the Empire was in great Confuſion by reaſon of the weakneſs of three or four Sultans ſucceſſively, of whom we have already given a Character, and particularly of this Sultan Achmet, of whom the beſt we can ſay is, that he was a Good Natur'd Jolly Prince, and feared no hurt, nor wiſhed it to any Perſon whatſoever.

But how the ſtate of Affairs were in thoſe days, we may learn from a Letter, which my Lord Paget wrote to a Perſon of Quality at Vienna, dated April 24. N.S. 1694.

Lord Paget's Letter.

SIR,

THEY ſo often change their Miniſters here, that an Ambaſſador can ſcarce come to treat twice with the ſame Perſon. Since my arrival here at the Port, they have had three Grand Viziers, three Chimacams of Adrianople , four Chimacams, of Conſtantinople, three Aga's of the Janiſaries, three Teſterdars or Lord Treaſurers, two New Cadileſchers or Judges of Aſia, and Romelia; and in ſhort, all the Great Officers of the Empire were changed, (the Muſti only excepted) by which there was ſuch a New Set of Idiots and Fools got into Places, as would overturn the beſt ſettled Government in the World. For theſe Officers being only ſuch, as Chance offers, it is a doubtful Wager, whether he proves a Fool, or a Wiſe Man; and in caſe he ſhould prove a Man of Parts, yet he is ſuffered ſo ſhort a time to remain in his Office, that he is in no capacity to improve them.

Ambaſſadors, unleſs it be at their firſt Audience, and at that of Congedie, have no Converſation or Acceſs to the Grand Seigniors, and then they affect ſuch a ſort of Grandeur, as may beſt cover all their Thoughts by a Silence, ſo that they give no place for any debate; and a Man can never lay any foundation upon their Words: For as their Ally of France ſcorns to be a Slave to his word; ſo they hold it to be no diſhonour to be open, and eſteem nothing for a Secret. It is true, that very ſeldom or never, a Miniſter ſhall receive a flat denial from a Turk, for he ſhall train you on to the very laſt point; and when you come to the laſt Argument, and Upſhot of all, then a Sum of Money muſt make the Concluſion. 1694.

The diſorders made by the Arabian Princes in the Countries about Aleppo did ſtill continue, which cauſed great fears, and apprehenſions at Conſtantinople it ſelf: but thoſe Countries being far remote, and diſtant made little alterations or noiſe at Court.

April. The Negotiations of Poland at Adrianople had no ſucceſs, ſo that the Envoy was diſpatched away, re infecta. Some few days afterwards, the Tartar Han quitted the Court with diſſatisfaction, and all things ſeemed in much diſorder; however they talked high of great preparations for the following Campagne: And to make ſome evidences thereof, they diſpatched away 1200 Janiſaries from Adrianople to Belgrade; moreover they ſent away 32 Saiques for the Danube.

About this time the Grand Vizier arrived from Tripoli de Soria, where he had been Paſha, and was ſent for by the Grand Seignior to head the Army in Hungary, having been recommended by ſome Favourites to have been the wiſeſt and moſt experienced General in the Empire, but the trial ſhewed him to be a Man rather of the Pen and good Language, than of Arms.

But to ſpeak more fully and pertinently concerning the Negotiations of the Poliſh Envoy at Adrianople, he was lodged at Demerdeſh, about an Engliſh Mile from the City, in a poor Village, without Ceremony, or any great Equipage; he had a Coach with ſix Horſes, in which was a French Jeſuit: His Buſineſs was declared rather to be deſigned to the Tartar Han, who was at that time at Adrianople, than to the Grand Seignior, and accordingly had Audience of him.

Poliſh Envoy's Audience with the Tartar Han at Adrianople.

In the firſt place it was obſervable, that during the time of his Audience with the Tartar Han, the Poliſh Envoy kept his Cap off, until he was bid to ſit down and be covered; after a few words of Complement, he aroſe up and delivered his Letter. The Han asked him, whether he had any other Letters for him; to which he replied no. He asked him from whom that Letter was, he anſwered, from the King his Maſter. The Han asked him, whether he had any thing to ſay to him by word of Mouth, to which he anſwered no, for that all was contained within the Letter. The Han ſpake in the Tartar Language, and the Pole in his own. The Audience ended, the the Pole aroſe, kiſſed the Han's Veſt, retired backwards with his Face towards the Han, which is a part of reſpect amongſt Turks and Tartars, and moſt of the Eaſtern People, all which was over in leſs than half an Hours time.

A ſham Envoy from Poland.

The which Paſſage ſeemed very Myſterious, and not well underſtood, from whence, and from whom this Envoy was ſent; but being gone out of the Preſence of the Han, the Negotiation appeared to concern War and Peace, and a Treaty propoſed to be held in order thereunto, between the Turk and Tartar on one ſide, and of the Emperor, King of Poland, and the Venetian State on the other. Hereof intelligence was given by my Lord Paget, Monſieur Heemskirk, and Heer Colyer, to the Emperor, Venetians, and all the Allies whom it might concern; the which ſeemed very ſtrange, that ſuch a Negotiation ſhould be ſet on foot unknown to them, or to the Mediators of the Peace; the which was ſtill more ſurprizing, when the Orders for ſuch a Treaty given to a Poliſh Miniſter, were diſavowed, and unexpected by the Emperor and the Venetians; and what made the Buſineſs the more doubtful, was, That this Envoy brought no Letters for the Mediators, from any of the Allies, or Princes concerned; nor did he admit of any Salutes from the Foreign Chriſtian Miniſters; for tho' my Lord Paget had his Secretary Mr. Coke, and the Ambaſſador Colyer had his Chief Interpreter upon the Place, yet the Pole would admit of none of their Addreſſes, or Viſits, but adhered cloſe to the French Ambaſſadors, with whom he had long and frequent Conferences.

The Turks averſe to a Peace, with the Surrender of Caminiect

This unuſual way of management of Treaties, gave juſt reaſon of ſuſpicion to all Perſons, that this Negotiation was nothing but an Artifice of the French, to bring Poland into a ſeparate Peace with the Turk, which perhaps by the Cunning and Crafty Inſinuations of the French might have ſucceeded, had not the Pole too earneſtly inſiſted on the Surrender of Caminieck into their Hands, with all the Proviſions, Arms, and Fortreſſes, and with the Uti Poſſidetis; which was a Term at that time, and during the late Treaty, mortally hateful to the Turks: Had not that Term, I ſay, been unluckily ſtarted, it is very probable, that the Turks would have accepted of a ſeparate Peace with the Poles: And moreover this particular Article would go down the worſe, in regard that the Turks had lately repaired that ſtrong Fortreſs, and ſupplied it with all ſorts of Proviſions, and of all Parts had made it almoſt impregnable: And another Difficulty was, That Poland was not willing to Surrender ſome ſmall Places which they had taken on the Frontiers of Moldavia; by which it plainly appears, That all this Treaty was nothing but an Artifice of the French, to amuſe the Turks, and try, if poſſible, by ſome Overtures of this Nature, to bring the Poles into a ſeparate Peace.

The Poliſh Envoy ſent away with Diſgrace.

The Cham of Tartary being a Chief Actor, and deſigned to bear a principal part in this diſguiſed Treaty, finding that hereby he began by his Friendſhip with the Poliſh Envoy, to loſe his Credit, and Reputation, and that his good Friend the Grand Vizier, (tho' newly put into Place) was tottering, and near being Depoſed, and to be himſelf commanded to return into his own Country, he haſtned away this ſuppoſititious Envoy all he could, and accordingly, by Order of the Grand Seignior, he was diſpatched away with ſome Indignity, and Diſgrace; neither the Tartar Cham, nor the Grand Vizier daring to open their Mouths in his Behalf, or to mention any of the Conditions he had propoſed for a Peace: And ſuch a Perſon muſt have been endued with a good Stock of Confidence, and Impudence to manage a Buſineſs of the higheſt Importance on ſuch weak Grounds as he had to pretend, eſpecially at a time when all the Grand Officers of the Empire were upon their Change. But ſuch as ſpeak moſt favourably of this Buſineſs ſay, That this Poliſh Envoy, or Agent, was not ſent to make a ſeparate Peace, but to prepare things in order thereunto, by advancing their Conditions, on which the Port might afterwards treat with the Emperor and the Venetians, ſending their Miniſters into Tranſylvania with Powers to that purpoſe; but all this came to nothing as will appear by the ſequel of this Hiſtory.

In the mean time all things were in great diſorder in the Court between thoſe Officers who live within and without the Seraglio, to make up theſe Differences. The Grand Vizier, with the Tartar Han, Teſterdar, Paſha, and Janiſar Aga, and ſome others held a Council in the Month of February, where it was reſolved, To move the Grand Seignior, to remove the Kuzlir-Aga, and the Haznadar-Aga; and to that end the Vizier made Talkiſh to the Grand Seignior, and the other Arz, for removal of thoſe Perſons, who were Mutinous, and Intriguing in Matters of State.

Upon this Complaint the Grand Seignior grew very angry, and told the Vizier, That the Kuzlir-Aga deſerved indeed to be puniſhed, for recommending him, the Vizier, to that high Office; adding, That he was neither a Fool, nor a Child, to be governed by other Mens Humours; and that the 1694. Report was falſe, That the Kuzlir-Aga medled in Affairs of State.

The Grand Seignior ſhowing in this manner ſome Diſpleaſure againſt the Vizier, who had now but little Support beſides the Tartar Cham; it was inſinuated to the Sultan, That it was improper for two Princes to live in the ſame City; and that it had never been the Practice of former times, for the Cham to reſide at the Port, there to pry into the Secrets of the Empire.

Hereof the Cham having had ſome Intimation, and ſeeing the Diſorders ariſing in the Court, and fearing to be ſent away, he deſired to be diſmiſt, pretending that his Preſence was neceſſary in his own Country, he took leave of the Sultan at a Solemn Audience; and being richly preſented, he began his Journey homewards, being accompanied out of Adrianople by the Grand Vizier.

After the Departure of the Cham, the Grand Vizier's Wife, who was Siſter to the Grand Seignior, was forbidden the Court, which was an evident demonſtration that her Husband was not likely to continue long in that Office.

The Heer Heemskirk, who had been ſent to the Aſſiſtance of Monſieur Colyer, Ambaſſador for the States-General at Conſtantinople, for management of the Peace between the Emperor and the Turks; or rather for want of an Engliſh Ambaſſador, the two former, Sir William Huſſey, and Mr. Herbert being both Dead, At that time the Turks ſeeming inclinable to a Peace, King William thought it not fit to let paſs this Opportunity for want of an Ambaſſador from England; but rather qualified Monſieur Heemskirk then at Vienna, with the Title of Engliſh Ambaſſador to the Grand Seignior (of which we have formerly made ſome mention) the which had currantly paſſed with the Turks, had not the French diſcovered the matter, and declared that this Heemskirk was no Engliſh Man, nor no Miniſter of the King of Enland, but a German; and one under Notion of an Ambaſſador, ſent for a Spy to deceive the Turks.

Mr. Heemskirk ſent back.

Upon which Inſinuation, Heemskirk was not able afterwards to treat with the Turks, nor would they accept of any Propoſitions from him, or acknowledge him for a publick Miniſter, but committed him to Cuſtody, and kept him under a ſtrict Guard; and ſo was detained for ſome Months, until the Lord Paget was ſent to ſupply the Office of a true and undoubted Ambaſſador; at which time Heer Heemskirk was called to Audience, and had his Diſmiſſion.

Upon Departure Heemskirk ſaid, He was ſorry that his Endeavours for putting an end to this Bloody War, had been unſucceſsful. To which the Vizier anſwered, That Peace would be, when God pleaſed, and was not at the Pleaſure and Will of Man: And ſo without ſaying any thing more material, Heemskirk was diſmiſſed; and began his Journey from Adrianople towards Belgrade on the 2d of March.

During theſe Matters, great were the Diſorders at Court; the Grand Vizier grew weary of his Office, and would gladly have been rid of it, could he have done it with ſafety, and Name his Succeſſor; and in the mean time his Wife endeavoured to accommodate Matters between her Husband, and the Kuzlir-Aga: Notwithſtanding which Differences, and the great Animoſities, yet they ſlackned nothing of their Diligences to be early this Year in the Field, and accordingly Commands were iſſued out to diſpoſe all things thereunto: And an Aga was ſent to Walachia for 500 Horſes to carry Flour to Belgrade.

The French Ambaſſador perſwaded the Turks to open their Campaign this Year, by way of Tranſylvania; and to induce them to follow his Advice, he aſſured them that his King would have an Army this Year in Germany of 100000 Men, but the Turks never gave much Credence to the Boaſtings of the French, whom they commonly ſtyled with the Name of Talangi Francos: And to ſecond this Opinion of the French, the Nogay Tartars, who were ſetled in a Part of Moldavia, made an Incurſion through that Province into Tranſylvania, and took from thence about 6000 Captives, and a conſiderable Booty.

The Nogay Tartar.

Theſe Nogay Tartars were called into thoſe Countries by the Tartar Han, to ſuccour and aſſiſt him at the time, when the Moſcovites came againſt Crim, and were then placed with their Families in good Numbers about Budziac, and part of Moldavia; the Prince of which made Complaint to the Grand Seignior, that being deprived of a great part of his Country by his new come Gueſts; the Provinces were entirely ruined, and the People no longer able to ſupport the Charge, and pay their Tribute: But this Complaint having but little Effect, the whole Blame of theſe Miſcarriages were attributed to the ill Conduct of the Grand Vizier; for which cauſe he was Depoſed, and the Embrahor, or Maſter of the Horſe, was ſent to demand and receive the Seals from him, and the Chimacam of Adrianople employed to Seal up his Houſe.

The Grand Vizier depoſed.

Hereupon

1694. Hereupon the Depoſed Vizier obtained by the aſſiſtance of Friends, a Hatteſhetiffe, or Royal Command from the Grand Seignior, to return towards his Government of Tripoli de Soria, without moleſtation; for which he gave the Meſſenger that brought it five Purſes of Money.

Notwithſtanding which, a Capigi, with ſeveral Boſtangees, were diſpatched after him to bring him back, and having overtaken him, he was committed Priſoner between the Ports, from whence very few eſcape with their Lives; nor did he long ſurvive, his Eſtate being all ſeized, and confiſcated to the Uſe of the Sultan.

Another Capigi-Baſha was likewiſe ſent to fetch the Head of Ali Paſha, who was Great Vizier before this laſt Depoſed Vizier. Likewiſe about the ſame time, the Kahya of Oſman Paſha, the lately deceaſed Chimacam of Adrianople, was put under Arreſt, and his Maſter's Money, Jewels, and Goods, with his own, were demanded to bring Money into the Seraglio.

But before we proceed any farther, it may not be from our Purpoſe to declare an Action which happened in the Port of Smyrna, in the Month of March, as follows. March.

One Capt. Hely Commander of a Merchant's Ship of 30 Guns, having brought ſome Goods to Smyrna from Legorne, and finding no Goods that preſented for a Voyage back again, he reſolved to ſeek his Fortune in ſome other Port: The ſame Morning Captain Marine, a French Merchant-Man, and Captain Teiſſere another French Man weighed alſo, and accompanied the Engliſh Ship half way to the Caſtle, where they remained a Back-ſtays for ſeveral Hours; and ſeeing Captain Hely turning out, watched an Opportunity to bear down upon him; which Hely endeavouring to avoid all that was poſſible, could not yet hinder the French Man from falling foul of him, by which he broke his Sprit-ſail Yard, and Jack-ſtaff, and preſented many Muſquets, and Piſtols at the Men to provoke them to Fight, or commit ſome raſh Action, to the Breach of the Peace in the Grand Seignior's Port; but Captain Hely managed his Buſineſs with ſuch Moderation, and Courage, that he ſaved the King's Jack, and took it in, and then hoiſted it again; and the French cutting ſome of their own Mizen-Shrouds, Hely got clear, and Sailed away towards the Caſtle, with a good part of the French Man's Colours, being foul of a Block.

That Night Hely having procured Materials to repair his Damage, ſailed away, and the next Day got within five Miles of Marine, Rowing to come up to him, which he did near Cape Caraborno, and there engaged him, and after four Hours Fight, in which Hely fired above 200 of his Cannon, he took the French Ship, which was ſaid to be worth more than a 100000 Lyon Dollars. 1694.

The New Vizier. There being two Viziers lately Depoſed, it was commanded, That the New Vizier ſhould be actually at Adrianople on the 15th of April, ſo as that he might be with the Army in the Field before the Month of June.

This New Vizier was called Ali Paſha, as was alſo his Predeceſſor, and both had been Paſha's at Tripoli of Soria, and came from thence; but as to this, he had no great Reputation for his Qualities: He had five Years ago been Tefterdar, or Lord Treaſurer, at the Port; he had been a great Favourite, and an old Friend of the late Kuzlir-Aga; but others who knew him well, had no great Opinion of him, but looked upon him, as a Man of little Experience, without Parts, or Abilities for ſo great a Charge, and eſteemed for a Perſon not likely to continue long in that Sublime Station. Character of the New Vizier.

Whilſt Matters were preparing for the Camp, againſt the Arrival of the New Vizier. Ahmet Paſha who had been Chimacam of Conſtantinople, was declared Paſha of Arzrum in Armenia Major, and was actually Liſting Soldiers in Nicomedia; at which every one wondered, and commonly reported, That he having been diſobliged by the Court, was there Raiſing and Liſting Soldiers to joyn with the Rebels in Aſia; of which ſome Murmurings coming to the Ears of the Kuzlir-Aga his Friend, he adviſed him to haſten away with all diligence poſſible, for that his loytering in thoſe Parts, gave juſt Jealouſie and Ground to the contrary Faction, to report Evil and Dangerous Matters concerning him; and for that reaſon he urged him to be gone on the Buſineſs for which he was employed; promiſing, That in caſe he dealt Faithfully and Wiſely in this Buſineſs, he would at his Return uſe his beſt Endeavors to make him Grand Vizier. The leaſt Whiſperings of this Nature in the Time of another Sultan, had been ſufficient to have taken the Heads both of the Paſha, and of his Friend the Kuzlir-Aga, but this preſent Grand Seignior feared no Evil, nor deſigned it unto others; ſo that Ahmet Paſha lived boldly, and without controul in Nicomedia, being Proud, Obſtinate, and Capricious, carrying no reſpect to the Commands and Orders of the Port; but gave out his own Commands to ſeveral Places, to raiſe ſome Thouſands of Segmen, which are a ſort of Foot Soldiers; which he acted 1694. ſo openly, that the World could not but take notice thereof, and declare him a Rebel: Upon which, fearing ſome worſe Proceedings, he quitted Nicomedia, and marched towards his Brethren in Aſia, to take part with them in their Rebellious Deſigns.

In the mean time News came that the Grand Vizier was ſpeedily expected at Adrianople, and that he was already arrived at Chalcedon, which was a Place anciently famous for one of the four General Councils, and oppoſite to Conſtantinople; from whence on the 18th of April he paſſed the Channel into Europe, and taking the ready Road leading to Adrianople, he entered that City on the 21ſt of that Month, where he was received with all imaginable Kindneſs by the Faction then predominant in the Seraglio.

And the Vizier to demonſtrate all Duty and Obedience to the Sultan, as alſo Affection to the People, and Militia, he iſſued forth the Horſe-Tails on the ſecond Day after his Arrival, which denotes the Intentions of the Grand Vizier to begin his March in 40 Days from the time, or at fartheſt on the firſt of the following June.

According to this Ancient Cuſtom, the Vizier 20 Days before his Departure pitched his Tents, and ſent out the Horſe-Tails into the Camp near Adrianople, with intent as was reported, to march towards Belgrade; but Tranſylvania was this Year chiefly in their Eye, as was adviſed by the French Ambaſſador; but it appearing, that great Preparations were making by the Imperialiſts, to fall upon Belgrade, the Turks altered their Deſign, and took their way towards that Place, to Fortifie, and Strengthen it with what Forces they were able.

Upon the Arrival of the Grand Vizier at Belgrade, many ſad Complaints and Lamentations were brought him from Temeſwaer, and Giula, complaining of their ſtreightned Condition for want of Proviſions; upon which it was reſolved to ſupply them with Rice and Corn of all ſorts; and the Chimacam of Adrianople, in the abſence of the Vizier, ſent them ſeveral Horſe Ladings of Proviſions, and Money to the value of 40000 Dollars, or 80 Purſes, under the Convoy of 800 Janiſaries.

Whilſt the Grand Vizier was acting in Hungary, Advices came from all Hands in Aſia, and was reported as well from Europeans, as from Aſiaticks, that the Sheriffs Army increaſed daily, and had Plundered a very rich City, in which were great Quantities of Rich Goods of all ſorts, and that this Army lived under exact Diſcipline; the which Army (as was reported) was divided into two Parts, one Diviſion remained with the Sheriff, and lay Encamped between Mecca and Medina; and another part of this Army was encamped in the Province, or Kingdom of Baſſora, where they made Head againſt thoſe Paſha's which were Conſtituted by the Sultan, endeavouring to obſtruct all thoſe Ways leading to Aleppo. The News hereof did not a little trouble the Mind of the Grand Seignior, and ſerved to increaſe his Diſeaſe of the Dropſie, which had been very fatal to the Ottoman Family; howſoever a certain famous Phyſician gave hopes of his Recovery, pretending to Cure him, by opening four Iſſues in his Legs and Feet; but an acute Fever coming thereupon, People began to deſpair of his Life, which cauſed a great Silence in all Parts, particularly in the Army in Hungary, where it was reported, That the Sultan was Dead, or out of all hopes of Recovery; beſides which, all things went ill for the Turks, for the three Paſha's which were diſpatched from Sofia to receive Taxes from the Venetians, not far from Narenta, returned back without Contributions towards the War; which ſo grievouſly troubled the Grand Vizier, that he diſpatched away three other Beyes with a good Detachment of the Albanian Militia, to force and collect his Taxes. And tho' the Turks put a good Face on their Misfortunes; yet the Villanous Rebels, and Tumultuous Robbers in Aſia continued their Outrages, ſo that nothing came from thence, but Complaints and Unhappy Tydings: All the force that they could make, or expect from thence, was no more than the Yearly Succours for guard of the Caſtles upon the Helleſpont, together with three Paſha's, and two Beys, making in all 3600 Men appointed for Recruits for the Grand Vizier.

Sultan Achmet in danger of Death.

To add farther to all theſe Misfortunes Advices were carried to all Places, That the Venetian Fleet was arrived before Mytilene with 30 Gallies, four Galleaſſes, 12 Ships of War, on which were Shipped 15000 Soldiers, the greateſt part of which conſiſted of Albanians, Greeks, and Sclavonians.

Moreover farther intelligence came from Salonica, or Theſſalonica, That they greatly feared the Venetian Fleet, which threatned to make a Deſcent within that Gulf, and were in ſome apprehenſions leaſt the Enemy ſhould make an attempt on the Iſland of Scio.

About

1694. August. About the middle of Auguſt the Turkiſh Forces began to arrive at ſeveral Quarters about Belgrade, where the 14th at Night, all was in Alarm by a Turkiſh Gally, which took Fire by the Negligence of the Men, and having much Powder and Ammunition aboard, blew up, to the terrible affrightment of the Turks in Belgrade, who apprehended, that the German Army was already under the Walls of the City; tho' at the ſame time they were no nearer than Peter Waradin, within the Rettenchment of laſt Year; where finding their Troops increaſe but ſlowly from other Quarters, they reſolved there to remain Encamped, and act upon the Defenſive.

Septemb. On the 8th of September, the Day before the Vanguard of the Turkiſh Army appeared in ſight of that Retrenchment, a moſt Terrible Storm happened, which carried away the Tents of the Imperial Army, ſunk ſeveral of their Ships, broke their Bridge of Boats, and drove five Ships of the Fleet down to the Iſlands. All which they had much adoe to repair, and bring in order again before the whole Turkiſh Army came to aſſault them; for the Grand Vizier having received a poſitive Order from the Sultan, to Attack and Fight the Imperialiſts whereever they could meet with them, in compliance therewith Decamped on the ſeventh Inſtant from Salankement, and marched directly for Peter Waradin: And

A Storm on the Danube.

On the ninth, ſome of the Van-guard appeared in ſight of that Place; the Grand Vizier with the Body of the Army then Encamping at Carlowitz, three Hours diſtant from the Imperial Army.

On the 10th, the whole Army came within half an Hour of the Imperial Retrenchment, the Foot taking their Quarters next to our Front, and the Horſe placing themſelves to the left of their Foot, and on the left of theſe were Camped the Tartars. Their Fleet conſiſting in 110 Ships, came likewiſe within Cannon-ſhot of the Imperial Ships, and caſt their Anchor there, being poſted in a Line of Battle.

The whole Day the Huſſars were Skirmiſhing with the Turks and Tartars; and on the 11th it was thought the Turks would have Stormed the Imperial Camp; wherefore all was prepared to receive them: They appeared with 3 or 400 Enſigns, or Companies, within 800 Paces of the Retrenchment, but behind the Earth of a Ditch which they had made, and which covered them ſo well, that the Imperial Guns could but little annoy them.

A Fight by Water and Land. On the 12th the Turks begun to fire from all ſides on the Imperial Camp, with their Great Guns: Their Fleet alſo advanced higher up, and fired furiouſly on the Imperial Ships, and on the Bridge, but were anſwered as hotly both from the Imperial Ships, and from the Batteries on the Shore: Two Waggons with Ammunition were ſet on fire by a Shot of the Turks, and about 30 Men were thereby Killed or Burnt. Count Solms, Major of the Regiment of Cuiraſſes of Count Herberſteyn, was alſo Killed with a Cannon-Bullet.

1694. Septemb. On the 13th, the firing both by Water and by Land, was again renewed: The Attack made by the Turks, ſeeming to be a formal Seige both of Peter Waradin, and of the Imperial Camp; they having either on their Ships, or Batteries, upwards of 500 Great Guns continually firing, tho' with little damage to the Germans: The Deſign of the Turks being to ruine the Imperial Bridge.

This great Shooting continued at the ſame rate the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th; which laſt Day the Turks not only threw Bombs out of three Mortar-Pieces into the Imperial Retrenchments, but alſo from the Point of the Iſland with two Mortars, into Peter Waradin, and carried more Guns on their Batteries.

But the Night betwixt the 17th and 18th, the Turks were pretty quiet, but after Break of Day they again fired more hotly than ever, and ſhewed themſelves beyond the Imperial Retrenchments; but being briskly Attacked by the Huſſars, they were droven back to their Camp. The Turks alſo drew a new Parallel-Line 60 Paces nearer to the Imperial Camp, and were very buſie to cloſe the ſaid Line with their Line of Communication.

On the 19th in the Afternoon, the German Right Wing fired with Great Guns and Muſquets from an Eminence on the firſt Lines of the Turks, and annoyed them very much, ſo that a great Alarm aroſe amongſt them, and the Turks came running from all ſides with Horſe and Foot, to ſtrengthen and aſſiſt their Left Wing: That Evening the Brandenburgh Foot, conſiſting of ſix Battallions, arrived in the Camp; which were received with three Salvo's of the Guns from the Caſtle and the Batteries on the Water-ſide: This Reinforcement being arrived, the Turks ſeemed leſs brisk in their Attack; but that which moſt incommoded them, was, That the Governour of Titul ſurprized and took 25 Turkiſh Ships laden with Proviſions for their Army, and ſunk two or three of their Frigats. That the Tartars having at the Requeſt of the Grand Vizier ſwam over the Donau near Cobila, (where indeed they had taken about 1000 Horſe, and part of the Imperial Baggage) were overtaken in their

Retreat

The Grand Vizier raiſes the Siege.

Retreat by General Baſſompiere, who cut down above 1500 of the Tartars, amongſt which was the Han's Son; and that thereupon the Tartar Han fell out with the Grand Vizier and Commanded his Troops, conſiſting of 7000 Tartars which remained, to prepare for their return Home; notwithſtanding the Grand Vizier continued his Endeavours againſt the Imperial Retrenchments, and Peter Waradin, and the Bridge, till the 13th of October; but ſeeing that they loſt more than they got at this ſport, and that alſo becauſe the ſix or ſeven following Days of great Rains, the Turkiſh Soldiers were up to their Knees in the Water in their Approaches, which cauſed Numbers of 'em to Die, having alſo been ſeveral Days without Bread, by the taking of the aboveſaid Ships; and not knowing when any would arrive, the Grand Vizier on the 13th at Night, cauſed all the Guns from the Forts and Batteries to be carried off, and Shipped on their Gallies; and thereupon quitted at once all his Approaches, Guards, and Retrenchments, and marched back with the whole Army to Salankement, leaving nothing in his Camp but ſome few Shovels, and three Dead Bodies; neither could the Germans follow them, their Horſe being Encamped on the other ſide of the River, and the Retreat of the Turks not having been perceived till the next Day; when immediately upon the diſcovery ſome Horſe were ſent after them, which returned with ſome ſtragling Turks only, the reſt of their Army having paſſed the Save, and broke their Bridge down after 'em: And thus the Turks ended this Campaign; but the Germans had the good fortune to joyn the City of Giula to their other Conqueſts.

Scio taken by the Venetians.

Towards the end of this Month of September, News came in an unexpected and aſtoniſhing manner to Adrianople, That the Venetians had Surprized the Iſland of Scio, and in a few Days, without much difficulty, had made themſelves Maſters of the whole Iſland.

At firſt both the Caſtle and the Forts Capitulated, and on the 19th all was yielded up; and the ſame Day the Turkiſh Garriſon was by agreement Tranſported into Anatolia, and Disbarked at Chiſme, (as the Turks call it) being the neareſt Land unto the Iſland.

With this News the Turks were affected with a moſt Terrible Conſternation; and then thoſe two long Words might have been ſaid of them Conſternabantur Conſtantinopolitani. The News was ſo ſurprizing at firſt, that no Man would believe it; but various and frequent Reports confirmed the Truth thereof; and tho' to the great Mortification of the Turks, the News came confirmed from all Hands, yet the Turks comforted themſelves with the Thoughts, that that Iſland could not remain long in the Hands of the Venetians.

The Sultan howſoever cheared himſelf up with better Succeſſes by Land; and gave order to the Grand Vizier to fight the Germans upon what Terms ſoever ſhould be offered; but the Vizier returned for Anſwer, That his Forces were ſo weak this Year for want of the Aſiatick Troops, that he was unable to fight the Chriſtians; which if he ſhould attempt to do, he ſhould undoubtedly Sacrifice all to the Ruine of the Muſſelman Cauſe, and Deſtruction of the Ottoman Army. For the truth was, the Grand Vizier had then but a very ſmall Army, conſiſting of 11000 Janiſaries, and 6000 Albanians under their General Mehmet Oghla, an Albanian, together with 20000 between Spahees and Segmen, with ſome Troops belonging to Paſhees, and 7000 Tartars: Beſides which, Money was all this Year very ſcarce.

The ill condition of the Turkiſh Affairs.

Aſia was all in Confuſion, and in want of every thing; ſo that it was no wonder that the Number of true Janiſaries ſhould be no greater in the Field; for Kara Muſtapha when he went againſt Vienna, had no more than 14000; and the famous Sultan Morat, when he went againſt Bagdat, had no more than 16000, which would not appear ſtrange, in caſe it were conſidered, that in the whole Empire, the entire number of Janiſaries conſiſts not of more than 40000 truly Lawful, and Legitimate Janiſaries; three parts of which, in the times of Peace, are lodged in Garriſons, as Candia, Negropont, Rhodes, Cyprus, and in other Iſlands, as alſo in Greece, which are parts of the Morea, and on the Confines of Perſia, where the moſt conſiderable Numbers are lodged; to which may be added Caminieck, Oſi, Aſack in the Black-Sea, as alſo in Dalmatia, Boſnia, and other Confines. With this Anſwer of the Grand Vizier to the Sultan, and repreſentation of the preſent State of the War, the Grand Seignior yielded to the Urgency of the Times, and permitted the Vizier to return to Adrianople, and the Soldiers to their Winter-Quarters; the which was done with ſo much Precipitancy, that the Motion looked more like a Flight, than a Retreat.

The which News being on the 18th of October brought to Adrianople, all things looked very melancholy, and the People began to droop with ſad Countenances, the Grand Vizier returning back with Shame and Silence; when on the 15th of the Month all things appeared in a moſt Tumultuous

1694. multuous manner at Adrianople, and particularly in the chief Moſch there, called Sultan Solim, in which at all times of Prayer, there is a great Concourſe of People, and thoſe of the beſt ſort, and of the greateſt Officers of State, having their beſt and moſt ſumptuous Palaces near that Moſch, which is the fineſt and ſtatelieſt part of all the City.

A Seditious Preacher.

It was now early about the time of Morning Prayer, or ſo ſoon as the Sabbana Maaz was ended, People being ſtill upon their Knees with much Silence and Devotion, as their cuſtom is, when a bold Turk well Learned, and of a ſmooth Tongue, mounted the Pulpit, having ſeveral Complices attending beneath to defend him, in caſe any Attempt ſhould be made upon: He began with a daring Speech, to inveigh againſt the Government; crying out,

Muſſelmen, or Believers,

YOU are all at this time obliged to ſtand up for the Faith, for your Country, and Government.

You cannot but be ſenſible that the Chriſtians Attack us both by Sea and Land: That we have a Sultan who Attends to nothing; and a Great Vizier who is not Acquainted, or Practiſed in Affairs either Civil, or Military: Wherefore let us all run to the Gate of our Mufti, and there cry out, and exclaim for a Change of Government.

Do you not obſerve what a Capricious Fool we have for a Vizier, how Obſtinate, and Ignorant, and how he daily commits a thouſand Follies?

Whilſt all People were attentive to hear him, two Aga's belonging to the Chimacam, being near the Gate of the Moſch, and over-hearing the Diſcourſe, run away with it to the Chimacam their Maſter; who immediately without any delay, or ſtop, in a trembling manner mounted on Horſeback, and taking with him his Servants, Officers, and Janiſaries all Armed, and Commanded by the Lieutenant-General of the Janiſaries, ran to the Moſch, and made this Seditious Preacher to be ſeized, which cauſed great Confuſion and Noiſe through the whole City; for appeaſing which, the Chimacam took a large Turn through all the High Streets of Adrianople.

1694. October.

At that time it happened that a certain Paſha arrived within a few Hours of Adrianople, who had been Baniſhed by Command of the Sultan, for many Robberies and Thefts he had committed in the Publick Treaſury; his Name was Benli Huſaein Paſha, whoſe Head he took off; as he did in like manner, and at the ſame time the Head of one Muſa Aga, and threw them both into the firſt Court-yard of the Seraglio, before the Gate of the Divan, declaring that theſe two were of the Seditious Mutineers, who had raiſed the Tumult in the City, which terrified a little for the preſent; which when the Chimacam perceived, he was encouraged to proceed, and took 11 Officers, who were Ring-leaders of the Sedition, whoſe Heads were heaped up together before the Divan-Door, and their Bodies thrown into the Cannels in divers parts of the City: Amongſt theſe, was an Officer of the Grand Seignior's Stables, called Bekir Aga, a Talking, Mutinous Fellow; as alſo a Fooliſh Aſtrologer, with 22 others, who were one Night all Strangled, and their Bodies thrown into the River Tongr, (which runs near to the Grand Seignior's Palace at Adrianople) and in this manner the Chimacam prevented a Mutiny, and quaſhed a Rebellion which was riſing to a dangerous height: Howſoever the People murmured, but durſt not ſpeak ſo Audaciouſly as before.

A Sedition quelled.

After theſe Tumults were over at Adrianople, People began to diſcourſe of Prodigies, ſtrange Sights, and Apparitions; and among others, a Report was at Conſtantinople, That an Owl was ſeen at Noon-day, ſitting on the Old Pyramid in the Market-place; which as was reported, fell down of it ſelf that Night, and next Morning there was found within the Baſis of the Pyramid, a piece of Wax, on which was inſcribed in Greek Characters, theſe Words.

After 300 Years, this Monarchy will ſuffer Great Deſtruction and Ruine, both by Enemies at Home and Abroad; And this City will be Infeſted by Peſtilence, and by Earthquakes reduced to a Heap of Stones.

All theſe Stories and Reports being aggravated to the Grand Seignior, put him into a grievous Affrightment, ſo that in all haſte he diſpatched Poſts one after the other to fetch the Grand Vizier from Belgrade to Adrianople; but howſoever he would not move until firſt he had ſupplied Temeſwaer with all ſorts of Proviſions; for want of which the Turks died of Fluxes, and all ſorts of Camp Diſeaſes; and lying 1694. on wet Grounds, and upon Moraſſes, more Men died than would have done in a Day of Battle.

By theſe means the whole Turkiſh Army was reduced to 30000 fighting Men; to repair which, and make the Numbers to ſeem a little more formidable, they forced, and Preſſed about 10000 Artiſans and Country Men, Raw, and Unexperienced Fellows, to make a Shew of, which had they moſt died, the World would ſcarce have miſſed them, only the Albanians, a Stout and Valiant People, were to be lamented, of which not one half returned into their own Country.

The Mufti and others growing ſenſible of their Low and Miſerable Condition, and overwhelmed on all ſides by Enemies, by Sickneſſes, by Famine, and Poverty, wrote a Letter to the Scheriff, exhorting him to Peace, at ſuch a time as this is, when the Enemies to the Mahometan Cauſe overwhelmed them in all Parts; declaring, That without betraying the Muſſelman Cauſe, they could not perſiſt in their Wars againſt the Sultan; and therefore they exhorted them to retire into their own Dominions, and to live quietly there, rather than to expoſe the Holy Religion to the Inſults of Infidels.

The Mufti's Letter to the Scheriff

Letters to Exhort the Scheriff to Peace.

By this Letter, and other Advices, which were ſeconded by many Exhortations of the Religious, and Holy Seighs, or Preachers, in their reſpective Monaſteries, the Scheriff ſeemed to be ſomewhat appeaſed, and to relent a little of his revengeful Humour againſt the Turks: Beſides the meaner Princes of the Arabians, who are the moſt Religious, and Superſtitious of all the others, falling off from the Alliance with the Scheriff, on the ſcore of Religion, things became more quiet in Arabia, and gave the Turks leſs Fears, and Apprehenſions than before.

Moreover Calailicos Ahmet Paſha, a cunning Sophiſter (of whom we gave lately an Account) having been ſent from Conſtantinople with ſome Forces againſt the Scheriff, changed his Method from Arms, to Epiſtles, Sermons, and Exhortations, perſwading him, that ſince he ſaw ſo many Martyrs on all ſides, Dying for the Mahometan Cauſe, that he ſhould not add to the Slaughter of the Muſſelmen, nor joyn with Infidels to the Deſtruction of the True Faith.

To theſe were added alſo divers Letters from other Paſha's, as alſo from Mulla's, Seighs, and Cadi's of the moſt eſteem in Aſia; which ſo prevailed upon the Mind of the Scheriff, that he for ſome time deſiſted from all Hoſtilities upon the Turks.

Notwithſtanding which, the Eaſtern Princes bordering on Arabia, were a little cautious how they truſted the ſincerity of the Scheriff; for in deſpight of all his fair Words, they would not be decoyed to leave their Country open, and expoſed to the Mercy of the Iſhmaelites, a People that never kept Faith; ſo that the Turks received no more Forces from Aſia, the following Year, than they had done in this preſent, by reaſon of the Jealouſie they conceived of the Arabians. 1694.

The Vizier delays his return.

Notwithſtanding the preſſing Deſires of the Sultan, to haſten the return of his Vizier, he made his Excuſes to delay his Journey; alledging, That Prince Lewis had been reinforced by conſiderable Recruits, and therefore it was neceſſary to obſerve his Motions; that the Floods by the Land-Waters, cauſed by perpetual Rains, made it impoſſible for the Army to march without Hardſhips, and unſupportable Labours: But at length the old Year drawing towards an end, and it becoming neceſſary to provide for the Actions, Wars, and Counſels of the New, the Vizier was forced to leave the Army; which he did with great haſte, and arrived before Adrianople about the 8th or 10th of December; where he remained under his Tents, making a ſhow as if he intended to march into the Morea, with intention to recover Scio; but before this Deſign was reſolved, a Conference was held in the Vizier's Tents, where the Mufti was preſent; after which the Chimacam was called, as alſo the Aga of the Janiſaries, and the Aga of the Spahee's, with divers other Officers, who returned back with the Grand Vizier; at which Aſſembly it was concluded, That by reaſon of the urgency of the Times, and that the Imperialiſts were chiefly to be attended, as being the ſtrongeſt, and moſt conſiderable Party, the Grand Vizier ſhould remain at Adrianople, to raiſe new Forces, and prepare for the Wars of the following Year. But as to the preſent, that all their Thoughts and Stratagems ſhould be employed for the recovery of the Iſland of Scio, the which obſtructed all Correſpondencies and Commerce with Smyrna, Rhodes, and even with Egypt it ſelf; ſo that Coffee, Rice, and Sugar, were raiſed to an exceſſive Price: Wherefore coſt what it would, it was agreed, That that place was the firſt to be taken; for which Expedition Miſir-Oghli was appointed Captain-Paſha, an old experienced Sea-Captain. To provide againſt which Attempt, the Venetians put all things in good order both by Sea, and Land; and in all Places where they ſuſpected that the Enemy might Land, and make their Deſcent, they

The good Qualities of Muſtapha Paſha.

The Sultan being ſenſible that his People were become much diſheartned and weakned by the many Misfortunes and Troubles which they had ſuſtained, gave Orders to the Chimacam of Adrianople, named Muſtapha Paſha, to treat the People with Kindneſs and Civility: This Chimacam was a prudent Perſon, and being a lover of Juſtice, and tender of the Welfare of the People, was eſteemed and well ſpoken of by all; and having known Miſeries and Hardſhips during the time that he had undergone a Slavery in Poland, he knew the better how to commiſerate the Afflictions of others: But above all, as Matters ſtood now in theſe Times, the great Concern of a Chief Governour was to prevent Tumults and Inſurrections of the People; of the danger of which the late Diſturbances had given a pregnant Example, and ſo moved the Spirit of the Chimacam to proſecute the Offenders, that 315 were put to Death at Adrianople, for the aforeſaid Sedition; and ſix of the principal Officers being forced to fly to Conſtantinople, were there taken, and being put into Sacks, were ſtrangled, and after the Ancient Faſhion thrown into the Sea; the which had been amongſt the Romans the Puniſhment for Parricides, > Inſui voluerunt in culeum vives & dejici in mare.

After the Conference which the Grand Vizier had held at his Tents with the Principal Miniſters of State, he made divers Diſpatches into ſeveral Parts; namely Halil Paſha, whom he made Seraskier in the Morea, with Inſtructions to keep a watchful Eye upon the Iſland of Negropont.

Likewiſe three Aga's were diſpatched to Algier, Tripoli, and Tunis, to haſten their Maritime Preparations, tho' with little hopes of ſucceſs, by reaſon that thoſe Governments in Barbary were at Wars one with the other, and had great Jealouſies amongſt them.

At this time alſo Orders came from Adrianople directed to the Chimacam, and Lieutenant-General of the Janiſaries, to provide Quantities of Rice, and other Proviſions for the Relief of Temeſwaer, which for want thereof was greatly diſtreſſed; and ſo Orders were given all the way on the Road thither, to take up all the Waggons and Carts that they could meet with, by that time that they came to Philippopolis and Sophia, might make up a Number of 1694. 300; which might probably prove a ſufficient Convoy to ſecure them; And for a better Reinforcement, Orders were given for the enrolling of 300 Janiſaries, being new raiſed Soldiers; and with ſuch Preparations as theſe for the next Campaign, ended this Year.

1695. THIS Year began with a moſt Terrible Fire in Conſtantinople, which conſumed 4000 Houſes and Shops towards that part where ſtands the Hiſtorical Pillar, which is about the middle of the City; which Accident gave ſome ſtop to the Counſels then in hand; howſoever the Preparations for the next Years War by Sea and Land proceeded.

The Tartar came to Adrianople, where he ſpent the remainder of the Winter in Conferences with the Grand Vizier, and other Principal Officers of State, in order to carry on the War both by Sea and Land: And whereas all ſorts of Proviſions were become very dear both in Adrianople and Conſtantinople, by reaſon that the Seas were obſtructed by the Venetians, ſo that no Coffee, Rice, nor Sugar, could be tranſported from Egypt into thoſe Parts; the French Ambaſſador undertook to ſupply the ſame with French Ships, demanding only, That when ſuch Commodities arrive, the Turks ſhould pay no more for them, than in Times of Peace; which beſides ſome other private Contracts were very pleaſing to the Turks, and ſerved to confirm the Friendſhip, and increaſe the Confidence between the two People.

As the Eyes of all the Turkiſh Officers were intent on the War, there being a Deſign to recover Scio in the Winter Seaſon, before the Venetians could come forth with their Fleet, the Sultan ſent for Mezzo Morto, who was Admiral of the Fleet, together with ſix Captains of the Men of War, reproaching them for Cowardice; for that in caſe they had done their Duty in the laſt Engagement againſt the Venetians, Scio had not been loſt; wherefore theſe Officers were diſcharged of their Commands, and Sarbos or Drunken Chuſaein Paſcha, was declared Captain Paſha, or Admiral, in the Place of Mezzo Morto; being eſteemed a Man of more Boldneſs, and Courage, and Conduct, than the other; and ſuch was the Shame, and Confuſion that the Turks conceived for the loſs of Scio, that even in the Winter, a thing not practiſed by the Turks, Orders were given to the New Admiral to prepare, and equip an hundred Frigats.

Sultan Achmet's Death.

Whilſt all things were preparing for this Years War, and in an eſpecial manner for the recovery of Scio, on the 27th of January, Old Stile, the Grand Seignior Sultan Achmet dyed, which for that preſent put a ſtop to all Buſineſs then in agitation both in regard to the War, or Peace: For as to the latter my Lord Paget arrived at Adrianople on the 23d, and next Day deſired an Audience of the Grand Vizier, which was promiſed to him on the 31ſt, when the Propoſitions he had to make, were ſo reaſonable, and the Turks in ſo good a Temper that the Ambaſſador perſwaded himſelf that they would be accepted, the Great Vizier, and Chimacam ſhowing themſelves not averſe, but rather well inclined to a reaſonable Peace.

But whilſt they were thinking of theſe things, the Court, and City, and all People were ſurprized to hear the News of the Death of the Sultan; who at the time of his laſt Agony, deſired to ſee and ſpeak with his Succeſſour Sultan Muſtapha, who could not be perſwaded to go to him, and ſo he died without that Satisfaction, by a great Defluxion, or Catarrh, which fell upon his Lungs: Only he left it in Commiſſion to his Servants, to acquaint his Nephew, Sultan Muſtapha, who was undoubtedly to ſucceed him, That all he had to deſire of him was, to deſire him that he would permit his Son to live; but whether this Requeſt was granted him or not, is not yet known; for Matters of this Nature are ſeldom reported without the Walls of the Seraglio.

So ſoon as he was dead, Muſtapha Eldeſt Son to Sultan Mahomet IV. was proclaimed, and ſaluted Emperor, and all paſſed without any Diſturbance, Diſorder, or Inconvenience whatſoever.

In very few Hours afterwards the Body of the Deceaſed Achmet was hurried away to Conſtantinople, and with a ſmall Attendance buried in the Sepulcher of his Brother, and immediately the Sultana, his Mother, was required to haſten thither and retire, and Expreſſes diſpatched to all Parts to carry and divulge the News, and moſt eſpecially acquaint the New Valide Sultana with the Exaltation of her Son to the Throne of his Father. For the preſent Sultan Muſtapha being about 33 Years of Age, and in his Prime, appeared very Robuſt, and Comely, and to ſhow a mildneſs of Spirit at the beginning, he for the preſent confirmed the Great Vizier in his Place, by reſtoring the Seals to him which he had reſigned into his Hands, and giving him a Caftan lined with Sables. His Mother was now every Day expected at Adrianople, until whoſe coming thither, nothing was to be done; for as ſhe was a Perſon highly beloved, and eſteemed by her late Husband Sultan Mahomet, Father of the preſent Sultan Muſtapha (as we have manifeſted in our foregoing Hiſtory) ſo ſhe was a Woman of Intrigue, and one who had ſo great a Power over her Son, that he entirely gave himſelf up to the Government and Guidance of his Mother. She was a Native of Canea (tho' ſome ſay ſhe was a Circaſſian born) and taken from thence when the Place was firſt poſſeſſed by the Turks; her Father was a Protopapa, or Biſhop of that place.

The Queen Mother.

Sultan Muſtapha's Beginnings.

His firſt entrance into Buſineſs was to enquire after the State of the Treaſury; and to inform himſelf therein, he called for the Treaſurer, and demanded of him, How much Money there was in the Treaſury? To which Anſwer was made, Fifteen Purſes: What then (ſaid he) is become of all the reſt? To which it was anſwered, That his Predeceſſor had diſpoſed of it: It is well, (ſaid he) and I ſhall take it from them who have received it.

With theſe Beginnings it was much feared that he would prove a troubleſome Neighbour to all Chriſtendom; and a Cruel and a Severe Maſter to all the ſurviving Miniſters of State; but things were carried ſo cloſely, that the Government had no News of any thing until the Succeſſor had carried his Point, and ſecured every thing for his Eſtabliſhment; to which many things concurred, as that he was the Son, and lineally deſcended from Sultan Mahomet IV, who after a Reign of 48 Years, was Depoſed, by reaſon of the Ill Fortune, and Avaritious Temper of ſome of his Miniſters, or to pleaſe the Soldiers, who ſaid, That he had Lived and Reigned long enough. Moreover the People had a great Eſteem for this his Son, being Young and Handſome, and in his Robuſt and Mature Age; nor was there any Perſon able to ſtand againſt him, nor capable of being offered to the Soldiery for their Emperor: There was none of the Ottoman Family known unto the World, but a Child of two Years old, the Son of the late Sultan Achmet, and of ſuch an one in ſuch a Conjuncture of time, it was not ſo much as to be thought of; tho' moſt of the Miniſters in Power did all they could to keep Sultan Muſtapha from the Throne.

The Grand Vizier put into fear.

His Beginnings were very briſk, (for beſides what he ſaid to the Treaſurer) he ſtartled the Grand Vizier, and all the Pa-ſha's of the Bench, who knew not what to ſay, or act, or reſolve, or whom to truſt, 1695. This ſuddain change humbled much of the Spirit of the Grand Vizier, ſo that he did not adventure to act ſo freely in Buſineſs as he had formerly done in the time of Sultan Achmet: For tho' he had received ſeveral Favours of his New Maſter, which ſerved to encourage him at firſt, yet they were ſo mixed with his Frowns, and Imperious Threats, that he thought not himſelf ſafe, but lived in a continual apprehenſion of Death.

When the Grand Seignior Veſted him, as is commonly done by every Sultan at his Inauguration; he told him, 'That he 'ſhould be careful what he did, that he 'ſhould treat his Soldiers well, and above 'all, that he be ſure to tell him the truth; 'and if not, he ſhould ſoon know and be 'ſenſible of what would follow: But ſince this Severity, and ſharp Saying, he remitted ſomething of his Angry Temper, and became more mild and eaſie; ſo that to encourage and raiſe his Spirit a little, he ſent his Kuzlir-Aga in Ceremony with a great Attendance, to carry to the Grand Vizier a Prayer, which he himſelf had compoſed in the time of his Solitude, and Secluſion from the World, which were received with profound Reſpect; the Bearer himſelf had five Purſes preſented to him, and the Chief of his Attendants was treated with ſeveral Rich Veſts, and the others of meaner Degree had a good number of Zaichins diſtributed amongſt them. The Grand Seignior alſo would not want his own Preſent, which was in Horſes, and Jewels, ſeveral Young Damſels, richly adorned, with above 100 Purſes of Money; and yet for all this the Vizier thought not himſelf ſafe, nor did the bitter Thoughts of Death paſs from him: for whilſt he was trembling for himſelf, he received a Hatteſheriff, or a Royal Command from the Hand of the Grand Seignior, requiring him to command the Chiaus Paſha to Arreſt the Chimacam of Adrianople, the Vizier's own chief Creature and Confident, and to put him between the Gates, a Priſon for great Perſonages: The Fault objected to his Charge was, That in the time of the late Sultan Achmet, he had put to Death two of this preſent Sultan's Favourites, for endeavouring to promote the Intereſt of their Maſter, to the Prejudice of the Riſing Prince. Notwithſtanding all which Mortifying Commands, and Accidents, the Grand Vizier appeared outwardly with a chearful Countenance, for the leaſt Sadneſs would have been interpreted for Contumacy, and a Diſcontented Spirit againſt the Commands and Pleaſure of his Maſter; for which reaſon he bore up bravely againſt all Misfortunes, concealing the Agitations of his Mind from all thoſe who had Buſineſs with him, and even from his own Domeſticks. 1695.

The Sultan's Humour.

February.

At this time my Lord Paget Ambaſſador from His Majeſty King William, was then at Adrianople, watching an Opportunity to make Propoſals for a Peace with the Emperor, of which, tho' about the latter time of Sultan Achmet, there was a great and a fair appearance; yet after his Deceaſe this young Sultan mounting the Throne, all the hopes vaniſhed, he himſelf being of a hot and fiery Spirit, was fully reſolved to try his Fortune in the War, from which Deſign neither his Mother, nor his Women, nor his greateſt Favourites could divert them. And the Kiah-Bey himſelf, who was Lieutenant-General, of the Janiſaries, a Perſon of great Eſteem, and Power in the Army, was diſgraced, and put out of Office, for arguing in the Divan againſt the Grand Seignior's taking ths Field this Year in Perſon.

Lord Paget at Adrianople.

Theſe Changes had diſconcerted all the Meaſures which my Lord Paget had taken towards a Peace, of which there now remained no hopes for this Year; for the Sultan was not to be removed from his Reſolution, nor the Soldiery averſe to it, having fixed it in their Minds, that this Sultan was Lucky and Fortunate, and was to reſtore all that had been loſt, ſince the Siege of Vienna, and the fatal Managements of the Grand Vizier Kara Muſtapha. And to this purpoſe the Grand Seignior diſcourſing with the Vizier, he told him, how ſenſible he was of the evil management of Affairs in the Empire, and that they were much worſe than they had been in the time of his Father; to reſtore which to a better Condition, he again declared his Reſolution to try his Fortune for another Year; the which not ſucceeding well, he was of an Opinion, That he could at any time make a Truce with the Chriſtians, which perhaps he might be inclined to accept next Year, not out of a Neceſſity thereof, but in conſideration to his People, to whom, after a long War of 17 or 18 Years, he was glad to give Eaſe and Quiet; for he was ſenſible, that the Ottoman Empire was in great Diſorder, by reaſon of the Ignorance, Negligence, and ill Adminiſtration of ſome of the principal Miniſters of State, which he would make it his Care to remedy.

With theſe Reſolutions of the Sultan, all things were preparing to take the Field early with a ſtrong Army; it being divulged, and publiſhed amongſt the Soldiery, that their firſt March ſhould be to-1695. wards Belgrade, from whence if they could have made any Conqueſt on the other ſide of the Save, the Turks might yet (as low as they were) have proved a troubleſome, and a dreadful Enemy to all Germany. And indeed the Chriſtians were more ſenſible hereof than formerly; for the Turks had lately had many lucky Hits to encourage them, and which did indeed animate the People very much, ſeeming to them like good Omens of Change of Fortune in their favour: For the Venetians had in two ſeveral Engagements at Sea been worſted by the Turks, which was the cauſe of the Surrender of Scio to the Turks, of which they poſſeſſed themſelves without any great Difficulty; where tho' the loſs the Venetians had ſuſtained both in Ships, and Men, was very conſiderable, yet the loſs of their Reputation at Sea, was much more, and of a more evil Conſequence; for the Turks animated hereby, fell boldly upon the Venetians in the Morea, and put them to the Rout, fanſying the Summer following to regain all again, deſpiſing now the Enemy which lately they durſt not ſee, and were affraid to approach.

To theſe good Fortunes of the Sultan, the News was added by way of Moldāvia, of a great Victory that the Tartars had obtained againſt the Poles; which with the Succeſſes the Ottoman Paſha's had obtained againſt the Rebels in Aſia, put all things at the Port into a ſmiling Condition, no Man doubting, but that the influence of theſe proſperous Beginnings would crown all the Actions of this New Sultan, with Succeſs and Victory.

The Fight between the Poles and the Tartars, in the Suburbs of Leopolis, happened on the 11th of February of this Year, being Extracted out of a Letter of the Great General, Written to the Envoy Cavalier Proſki, of the 16th of February from Leopolis.

An Extract of the Great General's Letter, Written to the Envoy Cavalier Proſki.

‘WE have not only in the Seaſon of the laſt Spring, but during the whole Summer, and Autumn, lived in continual Alarms, and Skirmiſhes with our Enemies, but even in this very Winter been engaged with them in divers Bloody Fights: And particularly on the 1695. 11th of this Month of February, a Battle was made between 3000 of our Soldiers, againſt 70000 Tartars, within the Suburbs, and under the Walls of Leopolis: The Particulars of which, are theſe.

A Fight between the Poles and the Tartars.

‘Sultan Zabas Gerei, Son of the Tartar-Han, who in the Month of October laſt, gave up to our Hands, all the Proviſions belonging to the Turks, which he had taken into his Care and Conduct to be Convoyed to Kaminieck; of which Diſgrace, and Diſhonour his Father being very ſenſible, urged the Son to repair his Credit by ſome great Action worthy the Fame of his Valour, and his Proweſs in War: Accordingly being aſſiſted by all the Power of the Tartars, as well thoſe of Budziac, Bialogrod, and Dobrucz, as thoſe of Crim, who the laſt Year had joyned with the Turks under Peter Waradin, came on the 10th of this Month of February, and Encamped themſelves in the Plains of that Town, which is called the Cracovian Leopolis, with intention to fix his Camp there; and from thence to ſend out his Parties to all Places, where they could Burn and Spoil, make Slaves, and put all to Fire and Sword; and ſo they Ravaged every where for the ſpace of eight Days, until at length all the Countries round being alarm'd hereat, I raiſed all the Forces that I was able, and brought them together from their reſpective Quarters, which alas, was a moſt inconſiderable Power againſt ſo Mighty an Enemy; for all that we could gather, and unite, did not amount to more than 3000 fighting Men.

‘The Day following about Eight of the Clock in the Morning, the Sultan Tartar drew out his Men into form of Battle; and I alſo having my Confidence in God, drew out that Handful of Men which I had with me, and made a Sally out of the City to cover the Suburbs. The Enemy ſtaid not long to look on us, but ſeeing ſome Poliſh Companies to march boldly againſt them, they Detached a Party of Tartars to meet and engage them, and to force the Outworks, which were only fortified with Hedges, and a kind of Wall made up with Mats and Ruſhes well woven together. This Command was executed with ſuch Vigour, that doubtleſs the Place had been carried at the firſt Attack, had not the danger wherein they were of loſing their Lives, and Eſtates, and all they had, made them deſperate, 1695. ‘and forced them to make all the reſiſtance that they were able; and in effect they fought like Lyons, receiving the Enemy ſo bravely, that in a ſhort time all the Fields were covered with the Dead Bodies of the Slain. The Tartars made Thirteen Attacks to try their Fortune, and were as often repulſed by the Chriſtians, without any great loſs on their ſide.

‘This Fight continued four Hours, until at length the Enemy obſerving that all their Aſſaults prevailed little, but were very Bloody, and of great loſs, they reſolved, That at the ſame time, when they engaged us in the Front with one Party, they ſhould break in upon the Hedge with another, and whatever loſs, or Blood it ſhould coſt, to carry it by main force, as it immediately proved; for the Enemy having by this means got between us and the City, we remained without any hopes imaginable of relief; howſoever with a Courage full of reſolution to overcome, or die like Brave Men, turning our Faces upon them, to whom we had but newly turned our Backs, we did not only overcome them, but cut a great Number of them in pieces; and after another Engagement, which laſted about two Hours more, drove them out of the Suburbs of the City; tho' in the time of this Fight, the Tartars having ſet Fire thereunto, the Wind, and Smoak, and Duſt did ſo incommode our People, that they were in a manner Blinded, and knew not which courſe to take; howſoever their Invincible Courage was ſuch, as that the Enemy was put to Flight.

The Tartars beaten.

‘This Fight continued until Three a Clock in the Afternoon, by which time they had been ſo beaten, that they were forced to withdraw before the Evening, about a League and a half from the City, and the next Day proceeded on their March; and the third Day paſſed the Neiſter, on their way homewards.

The Tartars withdraw.

‘The Number of the Slain on the Chriſtian ſide did not exceed above 100, and about 160 Wounded; what the Enemy loſt, is not to be known.

But ſuch Matters as theſe, at ſo far a diſtance, and between Tartars and Poles, did not much affect, or trouble the Ottoman Court; but ſuch as were nearer hand, as Naval Fights, and the Taking and Recovering of the Iſland of Scio, being near the Royal Cities, made great noiſe both in Europe and Aſia, and raiſed the hopes of the People to great and high Expectations of the future Fortune of this New Sultan, as if he had been born to be Reſtorer of the decaying Condition of the Ottoman Empire. 1695.

Scio regained by the Turks.

We have related already the ill Succeſs which the Venetians had had in two ſeveral Fights at Sea againſt the Turks, which being unuſual, and of many Years not known, made it matter of Wonder to all the World. For after the Turks had beaten the Venetian Fleet, all things were put into great Conſternation at Scio, ſo that the Venetian Commanders moſt ſhamefully abandoned the Place, ſtealing away in the Night without giving time for ſome of their Troops which were abroad to guard the Iſland, to Embark with them, which gave cauſe to ſome of their Officers, who thereby became Slaves to the Turks, to vent out Thouſands of Imprecations and Curſes upon them; and indeed their Caſe was ſad, but Neceſſity had no Law, for the Venetians had now been beaten twice at Sea by the Turks, who had they followed their Blow, might have utterly deſtroyed the Venetian Fleet; but the Turks being contented with this unuſual Succeſs, a thing not known to them for more than a hundred Years paſt, were contented with the Flight of the Enemy, and therewith a Ceſſion to them of the whole Iſland; and the Turks entered triumphant thereupon without any Oppoſition.

The firſt Act of the Turkiſh Clemency was to Hang up four Men of the Latine Rite, who were of the Romiſh Church, and of the Italian Race; namely, Signior Pietro Giuſtiniani di Antonio, Signior Domenico Stella, who were Deputies, ordained to protect that Religion; Signior Franceſco Draco, and Giovanni Caſtelli di Brecci. Signior Soſiati, who was Vice-Conſul for the Engliſh Nation in that Iſland, fled with his Family, and was well received at Tino; Domenico Caſtelli Son of Vincenzo Caſtelli, eſcaped alſo, (with whom I was well acquainted) together with forty of the chief Families of the Latine Rite, leaving their Poſſeſſions, and Moveables behind them: Antonio Rendi happened to be then at Smyrna; but his Family deferring their Departure, his Houſe was Plundered, and all his Eſtate ruined like that of his Neighbours; for tho' they fled to Smyrna for refuge, by this Revolution the Greeks gained a clear Victory and Aſcendant over the Latines: For whereas formerly there were great Animoſities between thoſe two Rites; the Latines by reaſon of their Riches, having the Pope on their ſide, were always eſteemed ed the Superiors, and by the great Collections made for them, and Legacies bequeathed, they gained much more of the Hearts and Favour of the Turks, than the Poverty of the Greeks was able to purchaſe; but now a fair Opportunity happening of gaining and Confiſcating all that appertained to the Latines, they ſeized on all that belonged to them; treating the Greeks more favourably, becauſe they believed them to be the leſs culpable, having the leſs Riches; and in reality the Greeks having been under the Dominion of the Turks for ſome Ages, were become almoſt their Natural Lord, from whom they expected better Quarter than from the Venetians, or other Italians; and ſo always wiſhed well to the Turks. Thus was Scio in a ſhort time fallen again into the Hands of the Turks, from whence they are never again likely to recover it, unleſs the Venetians amend their Politicks, and prove more Vigilant and Brave in the Wars both by Sea and Land; but that is not now to be expected, nor thoſe of the Latines permitted to live in that Iſland, unleſs they conform to the Rites of the Greek Church, the greateſt part of which were reſtored to the Enjoyment of their Eſtates, with their Ancient Privileges; but the Latines were deprived of both, by the Inſtigation of their old Inveterate Enemies the Greeks; tho' at firſt they were put in hopes of obtaining the like, or equal Favours with them.

The Greeks in Scio favoured by the Turks.

After the Death of Sultan Achmet, and that Sultan Muſtapha was exalted to the Throne; in the firſt place Achmet Paſha, Chimacam of Adrianople was Diſgraced, and all his Goods and Eſtate Confiſcated to the Uſe of the Grand Seignior, and he himſelf made a Priſoner in the Seraglio, but pardoned at the Interceſſion of the Grand Vizier, and ſent Governour to the Iſland of Mytilene, where I had once a Paſha for a Friend Married to a Sultana, which had like to have coſt me dear; but (God be praiſed) I eſcaped him without much loſs.

Changes at Court.

In the Place of this Chimacam, the Niſangi Paſha, who ſets the Grand Seignior's Firme to certain Writings, was put in his place; and the Vizier's Kahya into the Place of the Niſangi, and Gelegi Ibrahim Aga, was made Kahya.

1695. March.

Upon the Arrival of the Valide Sultana at Adrianople, Iaſtiff Aga, who had been formerly Kahya to the Haſaki Sultana, or the Royal Queen, was Conſtituted Aga, or General of the Janiſaries, and at the ſame time Vizier of the Bench: Theſe were ſucceeded by the Spahyler Agaſi, who is General of the Horſe, and his Place ſupplied by a Salakiar of the Seraglio.

About the beginning of March, Tmam-Sade Mahomet Effendi, then Kadileſker of Romelia, was created Mufti by the Grand Seignior; and his Predeceſſor was ſent to Conſtantinople, from whence the Sultan ſent for Mimadi Effendi to be Kadileſker of Anatolia.

The Nakib, who is the Chief of the Green Heads, or thoſe of the Race of Mahomet, was deprived of this Office, and Mahomet Effendi, Kadi of Conſtantinople, which was as much as Recorder of that City, was put into his Place.

In like manner the Teſterdar-Kahyaſi, or the Lord Treaſurer's Steward, or Secretary, called Galil Effendi, was alſo changed, who had been Treaſurer in the Time of the foregoing Vizier Ali Paſca; and thus had he formed all his Court according to his own Humour and Fancy.

And as to the High and Sublime Offices Abroad, he began alſo to form and modelize them: That of Egypt, he Conferred upon Iſhmael Paſha, who had been lately Beglerbeg of Damaſcus; and the Government of this latter he beſtowed on the Kadileſker of the Deceaſed Sultan Achmet.

Haſſan Paſha, who was Kinſman to the Queen Regent, late Governour of Scio, was called back to Court from his Baniſhment at Hatſack, and made the Deputy-Chimacam, or Vikil-Chimacam, to Govern at any time during the Grand Seignior's Abſence.

Theſe following were Baniſhed.

Fiſula Effendi, formerly Muſti, who had been Baniſhed to, and afterwards Exiled into the Upper Egypt.

Johain Effendi, late Kadileſcher, ſent to Aleppo.

Mahomet Effendi Nakib, Baniſhed to Aleppo.

Gahziack Effendi, under Kadi of Galata, was ſent to Lemnos.

As was alſo Niſſani Oglu Huſſaein Aga, Favourite to the aforementioned Vizier, Ali Paſha.

Beſides theſe, were above a Hundred more Strangled of Inferiour Quality, whoſe Bodies were thrown into the River Meritz, which runs by Adrianople.

The Valide Sultana being arrived at Adrianople, was received with open Arms by her Son, who governed himſelf much by the Meaſures had been given him by his Mother, who made ſeveral Changes and Alterations every Day amongſt the Officers of State; only the Grand Vizier and Muſti continued in their Offices, and the greateſt part of the others conſiſted of Old Servants of the Court, eſtabliſhed in the time of his Father Sultan Mahomet IV. of which the Queen-Mother had an Opinion that they would prove the moſt Faithful Servants of any in the Court. To make room for theſe Men, the Chimacam, the Great Maſter of the Horſe to the Sultan, the Chehaya Bey, or Lieutenant General of the Janiſaries, (who is always more feared, and eſteemed by the Soldiery than the Aga himſelf) were all diſplaced, with the Janiſar-Aga, as alſo the Principal Officers of the Spahees; having an Opinion, That the Youngeſt are always the more Bold, and Daring, their Courages being excited with Ambition, and Vain-Glory.

Things being in this manner modellized both for Domeſtick and Martial Affairs, the Grand Seignior again confirmed, and publiſhed his Reſolution to go this Year to the War; and to make Proviſions of Money to maintain the ſame, with the uſual Donative to the Soldiery, which was always given in former times, whenſoever the Sultan made his firſt Years Campaign.

Thoſe who were againſt the Grand Seignior's going in Perſon to the War, preſſed very hard the prevailing Argument of want of Money, to raiſe which, all means poſſible were contrived; for the Sultan would not be put by his Reſolution, alledging, That the Negligence of his Father and Unkle's not going to War in Perſon, had been the Ruine of the Ottoman Army, and the Cauſe of all thoſe Loſſes, and Diſgraces which his Empire had ſuſtained; but Money muſt be found by one way or other; to do which, the Grand Vizier was ſtrictly enjoyned to give an Account of Eighteen Millions in the ſpace of Thirty Days, beſides the Arrears due to the Soldiery, in the Time of the laſt Sultan Achmet: And tho' the Grand Vizier alledged, That it ſeemed reaſonable, that ſuch as had managed the Publick Offices during the two preceding Reigns, ſhould be anſwerable for the Miſcarriages, and not he, who had been employed therein but only ſome few Months before; yet the Sultan would not admit of this Excuſe for a Reaſon, but required the Account of the Eighteen Millions: His Mother alſo furniſhed her Son with Seven Millions and a half in ready Money, and Fifteen Millions in Jewels, which ſhe had been collecting in the ſpace of fifteen Years that ſhe had been the Wife of his Father; and from the Widow of the late Deceaſed Sultan Achmet, they took another half Million; the Vizier was Taxed at a Million and a half, and five Millions in Jewels; likewiſe a good round Sum was demanded from the Chimacam, and other Paſha's and Perſons in great Offices.

There was a farther Propoſition made to ſcrew Money out of all the Arabians, and Negro's at Court: The Kuzlir-Aga was the firſt of that Rank from whom the moſt conſiderable Sums were exacted; to pay which, their Eſtates and Faculties ſent and conveyed out of ſight to Conſtantinople, were all called from thence. The like was alſo demanded from the Ulema, and all the Eccleſiaſtical Lands and Eſtates were Taxed.

March.

All Perſons Taxed.

To execute all theſe Contrivances and Ways for raiſing Money, the Grand Seignior was ſolely intent, labouring Day and Night to amaſs Money; and ſpent his whole time to heap up Riches; to do which, he acted many things without the knowledge of the Vizier, and wrote Letters, and received Anſwers relating to the raiſing Men, and providing Subſiſtence for the Troops without intereſting his Grand Vizier therein; the which ſtruck ſuch a Fear and Terrour into the Minds of all thoſe who had to do with the Publick Intereſt, that none durſt to act any thing privately, or in an obſcure manner, which might be of prejudice to the Grand Seignior, and his Government.

To keep this Sultan in the Humour of going to the War, his Mother laboured to keep up his Spirits; which being obſerved by the great Men, ſuch as the Mufti, the Grand Vizier, the Lord Treaſurer, and the Generals of the Janiſaries, and of the Spahees, they all ſubmitted thereunto, only they gave in a Petition to be delivered to the Sultan by the Hand of the Valide Soltana, or Queen-Mother; repreſenting, That ſince they had obſerved that it was His Majeſty's Reſolution to go in Perſon to the War, they were concurring with him in the ſame, promiſing to be helpful therein to the beſt of their Powers; beſeeching only, That His Ottoman Majeſty would be pleaſed to Indulge them ſo much time, as might ſerve to aſſemble, and gather their Militia into a Body, and to make Proviſions for their Subſiſtence, as alſo Ammunition, and Cannon, with Powder and Bullet ſufficient to attend ſo great an Army: Of all which they gave the Sultan in Writing a particular Account in what forwardneſs all things were; and concluded, That ſince it is the Cuſtom of the Germans to be late in the Field, they did not doubt but to be more forward than they, and to Grace and Honour the Sultan's firſt Expedition with the Succeſs of Glorious Archievements, of which the Miſcarriage would prove of evil Conſequence, as the contrary would be of mighty advantage to the whole Ottoman Empire, which languiſhing after a Fortunate Sultan, would then think the Wheel turned in caſe they could ſee the end of a Campaign concluded with Honour of a New Sultan.

The Grand Seignior being ſenſible hereof, raiſed all the Forces he was able, both in Aſia and Europe: And to Engage the Tartar Han on his ſide, certain Aga's were diſpatched to Tartary with Purſes of Money, with Preſents of a Sword richly adorned with Diamonds, and with rich Coftans; as alſo with Preſents to the other Kinſmen of the Han, and to the Mirzees, who are the Noble Men, and Chief Officers both of War and Peace, deſiring them all to be early at the War; by which great Aſſiduity of the Sultan, all the Great Officers were in fear of him, knowing that as he Rewarded generouſly, ſo he Puniſhed ſeverely.

The Grand Vizier in the mean time conſidering the Troubles under which he was to labour, as alſo the Invincible Difficulties of the preſent War, in caſe the Sultan ſhould perſiſt in his Reſolution of going in Perſon to Command the Army, he endeavoured what he could to obtain the Favour that he might lay down his Office, and quietly and ſafely retire from all Buſineſs; for which he made Talkiſh to the Grand Seignior, which is a Petition made by the Maſter of Requeſts; (of which there is but one belonging to the Court called Talkiſhgee) the ſubſtance of which was to lay before the Grand Seignior the impoſſibility of making the Donative to the Soldiers, amounting unto Twelve Millions, the which was always given by the Sultans to the Soldiers, whenſoever they 1695. made their firſt Campaign: This was ſo reaſonable an Exception, and Excuſe, that there was no reply to be made thereunto, but the abſolute Will and Pleaſure not to pay it; for beſides the want of Money in the Treaſury, which had been exhauſted by a long and an unfortunate War, the Grand Seignior added, That he did not eſteem himſelf obliged to a Cuſtom which was begun in the moſt Flouriſhing Times of the Empire, when Succeſs crowned all their Enterprizes with Victory, when the Enemies were forced to pay all Charges of the War, with an Overplus of Riches and Increaſe, which filled the Royal Exchequer, and that Wars maintained the Empire: But thoſe Days, added the Grand Seignior, are now paſt; and that it would be an Inſolence in the Soldiery, to expect a Donative from him, who was not in the leaſt beholding to them for his being placed in the Throne, to which he came by Succeſſion, and a Juſt Title, and not by the Favour and Aſſiſtance of the Soldiery; and that whoſoever had oppoſed him therein (who was their True and Lawful Soveraign) would have been guilty of High-Treaſon, and ought to Die by the Juſt Laws of the Empire.

A Donative refuſed, to the Soldiers.

In this manner, the Wiſeſt and moſt Experienced Officers obſerving how difficult, and almoſt impoſſible it was to divert the Grand Seignior from his Reſolution of going in Perſon to the War, they all agreed to joyn with their Maſter, and to applaud his happy Deſigns, which they prayed to God might be proſperous, promiſing to give all Aſſiſtance with their Lives and Fortunes, that he might return with Victory and Succeſs: So ſoon were their Minds changed to the Will and Pleaſure of their Abſolute and Uncontroulable Lord, that none durſt open his Mouth againſt his Determination, nor no Murmurings heard unleſs by ſome few Janiſaries, who Talked a little, without any Notice taken thereof.

The Grand Vizier finding himſelf alſo under Invincible Difficulties, thought it the ſafeſt way to cloſe with the Sultan, which he accordingly did, and with much outward Zeal diſſembled a Chearfulneſs of Spirit in Compliance with his Maſter.

This Matter being reſolved, it was concluded, That an Army ſhould be formed of 80000 Fighting Men, and the Tugh, or Horſe-Tail, being with Prayers, after the uſual manner, expoſed at the Vizier's Gate, the 30th of March, was appointed to take the Field, and enter the Tents, which are commonly pitched about two Engliſh Miles diſtant from the Gates: And the Grand Seignior to loſe no time, Commanded that 2000 of his Pages, and as many others on Horſeback, appointed for his Guard, ſhould be at the appointed time in a readineſs to attend the Sultan: But yet things went but ſlowly on, by reaſon of the great Diſcords ariſen in Aſia, whereby many of the Chief Men had been killed, which gave a ſtop to the March of the Militia.

Retardments to the Motion of the War.

To which alſo another ſtop was given by the News which the Tartar Han received, That the Czar of Muſcovy being joyned with the Coſſacks, was paſſing down the Tanais, with deſign to fall upon Aſac; of which he gave Advice to the Grand Seignior, by an Expreſs diſpatched to Adrianople, acquainting him, That the Enemies were grown ſo numerous, that he could not this Year ſend his Troops to Hungary, having hard Work to defend his own Country, and People, from ſo numerous an Army as that of the Muſcovites joyned with the Coſſacks. But the Grand Seignior not ſatisfied with this Excuſe, returned an Anſwer, That notwithſtanding all Impediments to the contrary, he muſt by all means come with a Numerous Army, and appear in his Preſence; but this was impoſſible to be done, the Soldiers and People not being contented to pleaſe the Grand Seignior to ſee their Country laid open, and expoſed to ſuch a Powerful Enemy.

This Grand Seignior Sultan Muſtapha, when he came firſt to the Throne, was Feared, Eſteemed, Loved, and Obeyed; but the Affection of his People was ſoon eſtranged from him, ſince he Depoſed the late Mufti, and cauſed the Grand Vizier, with many other Perſons, Innocent and Worthy, to be Strangled, with Ignominy and Diſhonour. But the Mufti was moſt of all lamented, having the Reputation of a Juſt, Sincere, Honeſt, and a Holy Man, in whoſe place the Sultan eſtabliſhed his late Hogia, or School-Maſter, named Feizulah Effendi, a Wicked, Falſe, Perfidious, and Covetous Wretch, as he was generally eſteemed to be.

The Mufti Depoſed, the Vizier Strangled.

The Grand Vizier, (as we have ſaid) was always affraid of the Changeable Humour of the Sultan, and could not cover his Paſſion, nor diſſemble his Countenance; of which the Sultan taking notice, deprived him of his Office, and Baniſhed him at Midnight to Chiſme, which is a ſmall Village on the Coaſt of Anatolia over againſt Scio; but this Proſcription continued not long, before he was brought back again to Adrianople, and Strangled, and his Body flung out at the Seraglio-Gate, where it remained until the next Day at Noon, with the Face and Beard all beſmeared with a ———

At Adrianople all the Court was changed; only the Grand Seignior when he firſt entered upon the Throne, confirmed the Janiſar-Aga in his Place, who was an Honeſt Man, and a good Soldier, but ſoon afterwards he put him out, and Conſtituted another in his Place, called Baltagée Deli, which ſignifies Mad Battle-Axe Man, the Son of an Armenian Renegade, a Vile Fellow, without Sence, or Manners: Likewiſe the Kahya-Bey, or Lieutenant-General of the Janiſaries; and the Kuzlir-Aga, or Eunuch of the Women were diſplaced; and in ſhort ſince this Sultan came to the Throne, there was nothing done but placing and diſplacing of the Principal Officers; all which was acted by the Counſels of Women, and Favourites in the Seraglio, who neither had Sence, nor Experience in the Affairs of the World. The like ſoon after happened to the Chimacam, who being a Friend to the late Vizier, and one of his Creatures, was Baniſhed firſt to Mytilene, where he was likewiſe Strangled; from whence his Head being brought to Adrianople, was thrown before the Gate of the Seraglio, with divers others eſteemed Innocent by the People.

June.

Thus the Sultan, as he thought, having purged his Army of Cowards, and his Counſels of Ill-affected Miniſters, began his March from Adrianople on the 10th of June; the Janiſar-Aga marched away on the 3d: The Army was ſaid to be very powerful, and compoſed of Choice Men, which ſo encouraged the Turks, that they talked of nothing leſs than the taking of Buda; and about that time News came from Stalida de Zetuns, a ſmall Iſland near Negropont, That Ibrahim, Paſha of that Iſland, had entered into the Morea with 30000 Men, and was Encamped under Corinth, expecting the Captain-Paſha, who was then deſigning to depart from Conſtantinople in ten Days, where he had been detained longer than was uſual, to repair the Damages which the Turks had received in their late Engagement againſt the Venetians: Belonging to this Fleet, ſeven Ships were appointed for Alexandria to fetch Soldiers thence for the Morea; and likewiſe about this time Recruits were ſent to the Black-Sea to ſeveral Ports there, the Turks being in fear of the Moſcovites, who being very ſtrong, the Tartars were affraid to encounter them, and would have excuſed themſelves this Year from the War, but the Sultan would not hearken thereunto, but proceeded with Reſolution on his March.

But before the Sultan began the ſame, he cauſed the Tallol, or Common-Cryer, to make Publication, That the Grand Seignior's Will and Pleaſure was,

New Orders for the Army.

'That no Man going to the Wars,
'ſhould be ſerved by Young Boys.

'That good Order and Diſcipline ſhould
'be obſerved in the March.

'That no Man ſhould ride out of the 'Common High-Road, or by Bye-Ways,
'into the Corn-Fields, or Vine-yards,
'or other Grounds belonging to the Huſ-
'band-Man.

The Grand Seignior's Severities.

In purſuance of theſe Commands, the Sultan on the very Day that he departed from the Camp before Adrianople, being then Teptil, or in Diſguiſe, he found a Man cutting another's Corn to give his Horſe; and only asking him, Whether he had heard of the Grand Seignior's Command? He ordered the Selictar-Aga, who was General of the Spahee's, for he had no other with him (excepting the Kapugiler-Kahyaſe) at the ſame time to kill him, which he preſently executed with his Lancet, not giving the Unhappy Wretch one Moment to ſpeak for his Life. At the ſame time alſo, the Grand Seignior eſpyed another walking through the Corn, whom he took and carried to the Tents, where he cauſed his Head to be cut off. The Topgibaſhee, or Maſter of the Ordnance, likewiſe the Day or two before very hardly eſcaped; for having a Boy in his Company, of whom the Grand Seignior had ſome Jealouſie, or ill Thoughts, had certainly been put to Death for the ſame, had he not had ſome preſent Witneſſes at hand to prove him to be his Son.

Theſe and ſuch like Acts of Severity, rendered this Sultan very formidable, ſo that all People were afraid of him, not only in their Publick Actions, but even in their Private Converſation, ſcarce truſting their own Thoughts. Amongſt theſe Severities Achmet Paſha, late Chimacam to Sultan Achmet, was turn'd out of his Office by this preſent Sultan, and Baniſhed to Mytilene; and after having taken from him an hundred Purſes of Money, his Head was brought to Adrianople, about two Days after the Vizier had been Strangled.

All things being now prepared for the March of the Army towards Belgrade, the Janiſar-Aga with his Janiſaries, according to the uſual Cuſtom took the Van, and marched away one Days March before the reſt of the Army, ſo that the Grand Seignior, attended by the Mufti, Grand Vizier, Spahilar-Aga, or General of the Spahees, Tefterdar, or Lord-Treaſurer, began their March, following the Janiſaries, on the 20th of June, but after ſome few Hours, they made a Halt to give time to three of the greateſt Paſhas, or Beglerbeys of the Empire, to come up with them; that is to ſay, to the Paſha of Damaſcus, the Paſha of Aleppo, and Beglerbey of Anatolia, every one of which brought with him about 1200 Men, recounting Spahees, and Sarigiaus, and Segmen on Horſeback, with all which and others attending the Sultan in his March, they did not amount to more than 12000 Horſe, with which he marched from Adrianople in ſix Days to Philippopolis, and Encamped over againſt that City in thoſe Plains, where a great Council of War was held, touching the Methods which were to be obſerved in the War, and the Places which were to be Attacked.

The Numbers of this Army appeared ſo ſmall and inconſiderable, that the Sultan remained very much unſatisfied, and would not be contented, unleſs the Tartar Han would follow him with all his Force unto the Camp at Belgrade; but he poſitively refuſed it, and ſaid, That it could not be done, unleſs he ſhould expoſe, and lay his People open to the Incurſions of the Muſcovites, who were coming down in vaſt Numbers to over-run all the Regions of the Tartars: Howſoever not to diſpleaſe overmuch the Grand Seignior, the Tartar Han forced himſelf to appear in the Turkiſh Camp with an Army of about 5000 Tartars, which was a good addition to the Turkiſh Force, ſo that in all they compoſed an Army of about 50000 Men.

The Chriſtian Army led by the Elector of Saxony, was not much ſtronger, but very deſirous to meet the Turks, who had taken their March towards Tranſylvania: But in regard the Turks were ſo far advanced before the Imperial Army, that it was impoſſible for the Elector to come in opportunely, and in ſeaſon to ſuccour the Places which the Sultan deſigned to Inveſt, unleſs they could take a ſhorter way, which was offered unto them, being guided by ſome of that Country; but the Ways proved ſo bad, being all Marſhes and Wet Grounds, that it was impoſſible to paſs them with the Cannon and heavy Baggage of an Army; ſo that after great Fatigues of three or four Days Marches, the Elector was obliged to return back again to his former Camp; and in the mean time the Turks had got ſuch a way before them towards Tranſylvania, that it was impoſſible for them to be overtaken by the Chriſtian Army; and having liberty to rove every where without any Oppoſition equal to them, they fell in upon the Palanca of Lippa on the 7th of September, without Breaſt-works, or Parapets, or any Approaches, Defence, or Shelter before them, but only with the Scimiter in their Hands, they Attacked the Palanca at four ſeveral Places, with ſuch incredible Reſolution, that after four Hours Engagement, they took the Place by Storm, and put all to the Sword, excepting only Major Toldo, who was Governour of the Place, with ſome others of the Principal Officers, whom the Turks after their uſual Cuſtom, reſerved to carry in Triumph, and to ſhow them to the People at the Port, as one Signal of their Victory.

Septemb.

In the mean time the Imperial Army continued their March near to Chonad, ſituate upon the River Maros; and on the 13th of that Month, pitched their Camp before Natla, where they repoſed that Day, and the 14th marched directly to Lippa, hoping to overtake the Turks, and to come time enough to Attack the Enemy, and relieve the Place, but they found it too late, and the Turks reinforced with an Army of 6000 Tartars, Commanded by the Han in Perſon: This News gave a ſtop to the March of the Imperial Army under the Command of the Elector of Saxony; and what was moſt diſcouraging, was the News, That the Turks lead by the Sultan himſelf in Perſon were marched into Tranſylvania, to Attack Count Veterani in his Camp, which conſiſted not of above 6500 Men; who tho' they were very well fortified, and Reſolute Men, and good Soldiers, yet being too unequal a March for the whole Turkiſh Army, which conſiſted of 18000 Janiſaries, and 40000 Spahees, they were all cut off, with the moſt part of their Officers, and as to General Veterani himſelf he was ſhot through the Body with a Muſquet-Bullet, and cut over the Head with a Scimiter; notwithſtanding which, he being ſtill alive, Endeavours were uſed for his Recovery, but he Died of his Wounds.

Veterani defeated.

This ill News was followed by the unfortunate Loſs of Titul, which the Turks having Attacked by Land and Water with 15000 Men, the Place Surrendered it ſelf to the Turks by Treaty, in vertue of which the Garriſon conſiſting of 1600 Men, ought according to Articles, to have been Convoyed to Peter Waradin; but the Turks re-

1695. turning after they had Burnt, and Abandoned the Place, carried all the Garriſon with them to Salankement.

This Place was taken by the Turks, before that General Herberville, who was Encamped with 6000 Men near Kobila, as alſo fortified with 8 Galleys and 16 Frigats, could hinder the Enemies Approaches: After which the Turks leaving the Place, the Imperialiſts entered into the ſame, and took Poſſeſſion of all what the Turks had ruined, for nothing was left but heaps of Rubbiſh.

In the mean time the great Army under the Command of the Elector of Saxony, advanced ſo far as Solnak, where the Grand Seignior having received intelligence, That the Chriſtian Army was marching towards him, haſtned with all ſpeed for Temeſwaer, with intention to enter into Sclavonia; Upon which the Elector of Saxony made a Halt, and on the 17th marched back, and pitched his Camp about half an Hours diſtance from Chonad; and the next Day being the 18th, continued his March as far as Mokoua. But whereas Advices came, That the Enemy deſigned to enter Tranſylvania, the Elector reſolved to ſend all the Infantry to Peter Waradin, whilſt he in Perſon, marched with the Horſe to oppoſe the Enemy, giving Commands to the National Militia of Sclavonia to joyn with the Croats, to oppoſe the Entrance of the Turks into that Province: And here it was, that certain Intelligence was given of the Defeat of that Worthy General Veterani, and that he was dead of his Wounds; which News was received with much grief of all Brave and Worthy Champions for the Chriſtian Cauſe.

After which Count Heiſler took the Van of the Army, and marched before them for Deva, there to provide all ſorts of Proviſions for ſuſtenance of thoſe who were to follow and to aſſemble the Eſtates of Tranſylvania, commanding them to meet His Electoral Highneſs, and conſult with him in the beſt manner, how things might be put into a poſture of Defence for the Safety and Security of that Province. At which time alſo came the unhappy News of the loſs of Titul taken by the Turks.

It was the common Opinion at that time of all the well experienced Soldiers, That the Martial Affairs of the Empire, were all very ill managed for that Year: For had the Chriſtians inſtead of Ingulfing themſelves amongſt Maraſſes and Mooriſh Grounds unpaſſable for an Army, in which they loſt ſix or ſeven Days, and gave the Turks the advantage of marching ſo many Days before them to Temeſwaer, and thence to Lippa, they had ſaved the loſs of Veterani and his Forces at Lugos, as alſo Titul, and Karanſebes, all which fell that Year for want of good Conduct; for the Turks were eſteemed not ſtronger at that time than 40000 Men, and one half of them Raw and Undiſciplined Soldiers; but the Slowneſs, and Negligence of the Chriſtians in that Years Expedition, broke all Meaſures, as if there had been a Fatality attending this Years Actions: For no ſooner did the Turks underſtand that the Imperial Army was marching after them, but being ſtruck with a ſuddain Conſternation, they Decamped with their whole Army from Lippa, more like Cowards flying before the Enemy, than in Order and Poſture of War, marching Day and Night to get into Temeſwaer before the Enemy could overtake them. But ſo ſoon as it was known to the Turks, that the Imperial Army was marched to Segedin, they took Courage, and gave a ſtop to their precipitate Flight. And here it was that Fortune changed, and gave unexpected Succeſs to the Turks in this Years Expedition, which turned greatly to the Fame and Renown of this New Sultan Muſtapha: For conſidering that he was but a raw Soldier, and kept himſelf in every Action at a diſtance and out of Musket-ſhot, yet the whole matter being carried on againſt the Opinion of all his Miniſters, and the Inclinations of almoſt all his Soldiers, eſpecially the Janiſaries, and all the prime Officers of the Army and the State, things looked at firſt with a very bad Face, and promiſed nothing but Deſtruction. 1695.

The ill Conduct of the Imperial Army, in Anno 1695.

Yet afterwards ſucceeding quite otherwiſe than were expected, all was attributed to the Courage, Wiſdom, and Conduct of the Sultan; ſo that it became a Wonder to the World how it was poſſible for a Sultan without Experience, who had but newly come out from an Impriſonment of eight Years, and known nothing yet of War, to be attended with ſuch Succeſs, that all his Army did avow, That his Victories were due to his Valour and Conduct, which gained him a wonderful Eſteem amongſt all the great Men of his Empire, both Martial and Civil; the Effect of which was found in the following Year, when all the Soldiery being fluſhed with Blood and Spoil, came willingly to the War, and ſtruck an Awe and Fear into the Hearts of all the Ottoman Subjects, believing this Prince to be ſent them from God, to reſcue them and the Empire from Ruine and utter Deſolation.

Great Honour gained by the Sultan.

The

1695. The Sultan being ſenſible of the great Honour and Fame which he had gained by the unexpected Succeſſes of this Campaign, being unwilling to loſe the ſame, ſo ſoon as he heard that the Imperial Army was marched towards Tranſylvania, he reſolved to return homewards, and not to tempt Fortune again for this Year, and accordingly marched again with his whole Army to Temeſwaer, whence he ſent Commands and Decrees one after the other, with Letters to Ziafer the Paſha of Belgrade, to provide Temeſwaer with all ſorts of Victuals neceſſary for maintenance of the Place; and that he ſhould take care to ſend them thither, with a Convoy ſufficient to defend them from the Enemy: And farther he ordered that Paſha to take notice, That he was returning to his Palace at Adrianople, by the way of Walachia, of which Advice was given to the Prince, and Commands ſent him to repair the Bridges, and mend the Ways of that Country, and to enlarge them for the more eaſie Paſſage of the Army: The like Decrees and Commands were ſent to the Prince of Moldavia; and divers Letters were Wrote by the Grand Seignior himſelf to his Mother the Valide Soltana; as alſo to all the Chief Governors of the Provinces in Anatolia, and to the Chimacums of Conſtantinople and Adrianople; in which, after he had recounted unto them all his great Actions and Succeſſes, he Commanded that Days and Nights of Rejoycings ſhould be celebrated for the ſame through all the Dominions of his Empire, in regard that he had Taken, and laid Deſolate a greater City and Territory than that of Belgrade, and that he had ſlain more than 10000 Germans, and made above 3000 Priſoners, with the Officers belonging to them; for which Glorious Victories and Fortunes Commands were given to offer Thankſgivings in all Places of the Empire, and to praiſe God, for that he had been pleaſed to appeaſe his Wrath againſt the Muſſelmen, who had long provoked the Divine Anger.

The Sultan Orders for his Return to Adrianople.

The Sultan being in this manner reſolved to make his Return to Adrianople, by way of Walachia, notice was given thereof (as we have ſaid) to the Prince of the Country, who was thereby put into a moſt grievous Terrour and Conſternation of Mind, not knowing what to do, or how to help and protect his Poor Miſerable Province already waſted and conſumed by the War; and what was now to be more done on the Paſſage of divers Aſiaticks, Albanians, Turks, &c. was not to be reſolved; until the Prince conſidering, and revolving all things in his Mind, concluded, That the beſt and ſafeſt way was, immediately to depart and meet the Sultan on his way, according to his urgent and reiterated Commands; ſhewing no Fears or Jealouſies, but a Confidence of the Grand Seignior's Favour to him: In purſuance of which, he proceeded, and met the Sultan over againſt Widin; where being ſeen by him, and looked upon with a tender Eye, and a kind Aſpect, the poor Prince began to take Courage, and eaſe the Throbs of his Trembling Heart. Howſoever being acquainted with the Humour of the Sultans, who often ſpeak fair to their Paſha's, and yet nouriſh a ſecret Deſign to take away their Lives, he could not ſettle his Thoughts, or believe that the bitterneſs of Death was yet over; but there was nothing to be done now, nor any ſtarting back, but on he muſt go, as he did to the Place called Turno on this ſide of the Danube over againſt Nicopolis, where the Army Encamped on the 13th of October, and the Sultan took ſome Repoſe for certain Days, called by the Turks Days of Otoracke, the Officers of the Prince proceeding in the mean time to prepare the Ways, and to make them wider.

The Grand Seignior marches back.

The Grand Seignior coming very weary to Turno, repoſed there about an Hours time, and then Embarking in his own Boat, paſſed to the other ſide of the Danube, after which the Grand Vizier followed with the whole Army, there being Boats and Floats ſufficient to Ferry them over. And here it is to be for ever recorded to the honour of this Sultan Muſtapha, That in paſſing this Province of Walachia, ſtrict Diſcipline was kept, and which was obſerved with ſo much Rigour, that a Soldier durſt not ſteal an Egg, a Pullet, or a Hen; and a Tartar was known to be Hanged, for taking away a Kid by force; and two Aſiatick Turks were Hanged on a Tree for Robbing a Bee-hive, by which Severity, to the Wonder of the whole World, the Ottoman Army paſſed that Afflicted Province without the leaſt damage or hurt to the People.

The Turkiſh Diſcipline.

And here at this place of Turno, it is to be noted, That before the Grand Seignior paſſed the River, he called to him the Prince of Walachia, and beſtowed upon him a rich Coſtan, or Veſt, which is a Signal of the Favour of the Sultan, and told him, That he was greatly pleaſed and ſatiſfied with his Service and Diligence, commanding him to return Home to his Place of Reſidence, but above all he charged him to obſerve Juſtice; which if he did, he ſhould always enjoy his Favour; the like ſaid the Grand Vizier to him, who giving him

1695. him a Veſt as an Evidence of his Favour, gave him licence to return to his own place of Government.

When the Turks were come on the Confines over againſt Fetiblam, they Embarked all their Cannon and Ammunition for Belgrade; but the lighter Field-pieces, (of which they found ſome in Karanſebes) they carried with them, to render their Entry into Adrianople, the more Stately and Magnificent.

But whilſt they were contriving all things for the more Triumpant Entry of the Grand Seignior; it was judged moſt requiſite and proper for the preſent State of the Turkiſh Affairs, to make the Triumph into Conſtantinople, which was ever eſteemed the Head of the Empire, and the Place where the Ottoman Throne was ever ſeated: And as to Adrianople, it was ordered, that the Sultan ſhould make a ſhort ſtop there of four or five Days only; and in the mean time the Valide Soltana, with all the Female Court, was ordered to take up their Quarters in the uſual Places of the Great Seraglio, which was prepared on all ſides to be fitted for Reception of the Grand Seignior.

The Grand Seignior marches to Conſtantinople.

This coming of the Grand Seignior to Conſtantinople, was a ſuddain Reſolution, and unexpected, being the effect of his Thoughts on his March, only for conſidering that Conſtantinople (ever ſince the Turks entered into Europe) was always eſteemed the Head and Seat of the Ottoman Empire, and the Place where the Ottoman Emperors were ever Enthroned with the Benediction of the Mufti, aſſiſted by the Nakib, who is Chief of the Emirs, who wear green Tulbants; and alſo the Place where the Mufti girds the Sword to the Sultan's Thigh, called St. Juob, in Memory of that Soldier, who was the firſt that ſtormed the Walls of Conſtantinople, when it was in the Poſſeſſion of the Greeks; for which reaſon, his Memory hath ever been held in great Veneration with the Turks. The Thoughts whereof incited the Grand Seignior with a ſort of Impatience and Ambition to imitate the Practice of his Anceſtors, at a time when he eſteemed himſelf Great, Proſperous, and in a way to recover the loſt Honour and Reputation of the Empire.

Moreover, his Deſign being to be as great at Sea as at Land, or at leaſt of equal Match with the Venetians, or to have a better Army to enter into the Morea, and recover the Country, his Thoughts were fixed upon Conſtantinople, as the proper Place for that Deſign; as Adrianople was for the Wars by Land ſo no time was loſt in the March of the Army, to poſſeſs the Ancient Seat of the Oſmanlees. 1695.

The Grand Seignior having repoſed ſome few Days (as we have ſaid) at Adrianople, proceeded forwards and arrived in Company with his Mother at Conſtantinople, tho at firſt it was appointed otherwiſe, and that ſhe ſhould go firſt, and lead the way; but it afterwards ſeemed more Great and Glorious, and of leſs Charge to go together, which accordingly they did, and arrived at the Great Seraglio about the latter end of October, or beginning of November: But on the Road the Court and Army happening to feel ſome Scarcity and Want of Proviſions, the Sultan became very angry and diſpleaſed againſt the Treaſurer of the Army, and againſt thoſe Officers whoſe Buſineſs it was to Overſee the Proviſions, and not to ſuffer any Want to be in Court or Army: Upon which Occaſion, the Grand Seignior Diſcharged the Teſterdar of his Office, with Threats and Menaces of his Life: And the Commiſſaries for that Buſineſs being in like manner faulty, as alſo the ſecond Perſon under the Teſterdar, was Diſcharged of his Office, and great care was taken to ſupply their Offices with Men of Skill and Induſtry.

Novemb.

The Allai, or Triumph at the Entrance into Conſtantinople.

And now about the beginning of this Month of November, the Grand Seignior with all his Court, entered into the Capital City of his Reſidence, with ſuch Applauſe and Triumph, and Joy of the People, that the like was never heard or known in the Time of any former Sultan, all which ſerved to comfort the People, and encourage the Militia.

Amongſt the Particulars of this Triumph, 300 Slaves were ſhown, and all repreſented for Great Generals and Captains; for tho' there were but very few Officers amongſt them, yet they were given out for ſuch, and for German Princes: All the light Cannon, and Field-Pieces, with the Ammunition, Colours, Flags, Drums, and Trumpets, were all ſhowed, and brought into the Account of Spoil; with a Report amongſt the Soldiery, That the Turks had not loſt above 500 Men, killed in the Field, tho' others of them which came out of the Army, and had been Eye-Witneſſes of the whole Battel, and of the Turkiſh Army, which conſiſted of 50000 Men, with the Sultan at the Head of them, and yet were hard put to it to fight againſt 8000 of Veterani's Men; who having maintained a Fight for ſix Hours, were at length forced to retire for want of Powder and Ammunition, and other Warlike Proviſions.

Thus much the Turks, who had been in the Battel, confeſſed themſelves; whilſt others who came from all the Countries round to ſee the Show, and Triumph, Wept for Joy, ſaying, That the Time was now come, that God would Avenge himſelf on the Chriſtians, for their Pride; and would for the future blind them in their Deſigns, and infatuate them in all their Counſels.

Sahin Paſha killed.

Howſoever all the World cannot but confeſs, That the loſs of ſo many Brave Men, could not but prove a fatal Blow to all Chriſtendom, eſpecially to the Germans, who fought almoſt to the laſt Drop of Blood: Nor were the Turks unſenſible of their Loſſes alſo, both as to Numbers and Quality; for one of the Sultan's Brothers-in-Law, called Sahin Mehmet Paſha, a briſk daring Man, and a good Soldier, and ſo Named from Sahin, which ſignifies a Falcon, and was the next to the Grand Vizier, and carried three Horſe-Tails gilded before him, was killed by a Carbine-ſhot; for which reaſon he was much lamented at the Court, and moſt eſpecially by the Queen-Mother, not only becauſe he had been her Son-in-Law, but a Perſon endued with many Rare and Excellent Vertues: Beſides which, the famous Mahmud Paſha, Celebrated by all to be one of the moſt Accompliſhed Soldiers of this Age, and the moſt Warlike Cavalier of all the Ottoman Nation: He was an Albanian Born, a Man of great Reputation and Fame, called Mahmud Bei Oghli, and was ſlain with three Carbine-ſhots, and fell amongſt the moſt Renowned Officers of the Turks: Theſe two were ſaid to be the firſt who broke into Veterani's Army, one to the Right, and the other to the Left-Wing, where they found and encountred ſuch unexpected Oppoſition, that the Turks confeſſed, That they had never met the like, and had not prevailed againſt their Enemies at that time, had it not been for the Reſolution and Bravery of their Fortunate Sultan, who ſtanding in the Rear with his Scimiter in his Hand, hindered the baſe intended Flight of his Soldiery.

This Action gave a full ſtop to all the following Deſigns of this Year; for the Turks reaſoning with themſelves, That in caſe ſo ſmall an Army as that of Veterani, was able to do ſuch Feats, what would become of their Forces, were they to engage againſt the whole entire Army of the Kral, that is the Elector; for they call the King of Poland Kral, and ſo other Inferiour Princes to the Emperor, whom they call Kaiſar; but the King of England, they could never be taught to call otherwiſe than Kral.

The Grand Seignior having made his Triumphant Entry into Conſtantinople, the Militia of Aſia which attended the Sultan from the War, had licence given them to return Home to their own Countries, and Orders were given to open a Door, as they call it, to enroll Janiſaries, according to the uſual Ceremonies uſed on thoſe Occaſions, and care was taken to Arm them, as well the New Janiſaries as the Old Veterane Albanian Troops; as alſo the Levents, or Marine Regiments, and to recruit their Numbers, of which ſeveral had been loſt in the late Engagements at Sea; the which, tho' they had not for many Years been fought with ſo much equality of Fortune between the Venetians and the Turks, as they had been for this Year, yet it was not determined which ſide had gained the better; tho' the Turks avoided the Fight, ſo much as was poſſible, and thereby gave an evidence of their own Weakneſs, and doubtful Condition.

Tekely neglected.

It hath been long ſince we have heard any Diſcourſe of Tekely, being not regarded ſo much by any as by the French Ambaſſador; for as to the Turks, they had no Opinion of him, nor would they have it be thought that they had any need of his Forces, or Intereſt of his Party in Hungary; but ſuffered him to Lodge in one of the vileſt Streets in the Town, amongſt Jews, and the meaner ſort of the Armenians, called Balata; his Countenance was much changed, pale, and fallen, and his Feet Swelled, ſo that his Enemies ſcorned him, and his Friends could expect nothing more of good from him.

The Year drawing now towards an end, all the Endeavours of the Turks were to begin the following Year with greater Forces than that of the preceding; and herein they were the more concerned, in regard of the Moſcovites, who were coming down upon the Tartars with vaſt Numbers of Soldiers, and all things prepared to make War upon them, and to take Aſac, at leaſt the Diverſion hereby would be great, and ſo employ the Tartars, that to defend their own Countries, they would be obliged to deſert the Service and Cauſe of the Turks: Howſoever the Succeſſes of the Turks had been this Year ſo great, as gave them courage to conſider in what manner they might be able to form two Armies for the next; with one of which the chief Deſign was to enter Tranſylvania, and if poſſible, to make Peace with the Moſcovites by the Negotiations of the Tartars; but all this came to nothing, as we ſhall ſee by the Sequel of the following Year.

1696. THO' the Turks had gained ſome advantage the laſt Year over the Venetians both by Sea and Land; namely, in the Recovery of Scio, and by giving a Check or Stop to the Venetian Fleet; yet they gained little more thereby, than ſome little Fame and Reputation to the preſent Sultan Muſtapha, whom the People began to conſider, as a Deliverer ſent to them from Heaven to recover their almoſt loſt Empire, which lay under ſad Diſtreſſes as well in Aſia as in Europe.

This Opinion of the People when they obſerved the Juſtice, the Courage, and the Reſolution of this Sultan to go in Perſon to the War, and that nothing could divert him from it, gave them Courage and Aſſurance to expect a turn of Fortune, and hopes of better Succeſſes for the future; and tho' the French promiſed them not to make Peace without them, but to joyn with them in a perpetual League of Friendſhip; yet the Turks did not much truſt them, but kept a watchful Eye over them, knowing very well how little ſtreſs there is to be laid on the Promiſes of the Great Monarch of France, who was alſo equally Jealous of the Faith of the Turks, and both of them equally doubtful of one another.

This Great Ottoman Empire had the laſt Year changed both their Maſter, and the Chief Officers, without any conſiderable Change, or Troubles in the State amongſt themſelves, for that this Sultan, in whom clearly appeared a Spirit of greater Wiſdom and Courage than in his Father Mahomet IV, or in his Uncle's ſucceeding him, gave the Soldiery and the People ſuch Hopes and Expectations from him, that none durſt open his Mouth, or lift up his Hands againſt him; there appeared alſo ſomething more of Juſtice and Vertue in him, and of Diligence, and Care, and Sedulity in his Buſineſs, than was found in his Father, or in any of the ſucceeding Uncles, as we have formerly ſaid; which gave hope to the great Governors of the Empire, that under him the Loſſes which the Empire had ſuſtained in theſe laſt Wars, might be repaired; for tho' the Recovery of the Iſle of Scio was made before he came to the Throne, and conſequently might be looked upon, as an effect of his Uncle's Counſels; for that Muſtapha did not enter upon the Government until the end of January 1695, when that Scio had been taken about a Month before by the Turks; but that falling ſo near to the time that Muſtapha came to the Throne, that piece of good Fortune was looked upon as an effect of the Wiſdom of the New Emperor, rather than of the Uncle Achmet's Counſel, by which, and by ſome other Exploits of the preceding Year in 1695, Muſtapha grew high in the Opinion of the People, and the Soldiery; to which ſome Succeſſes being added, as the taking of Titul and Lippa, with the Defeat given to Veterani; for which the Turks paid very dear, and would not have been cried up for a Victory, had not Victories become very rare in thoſe Days; their Hopes were very big, and that he might make theſe Actions the more Triumphant and Glorious, the Grand Seignior diſpatched away ſeveral Meſſengers to the Kings of Perſia, and the Princes of Arabia, and to other Tributaries, to communicate unto them all his Succeſſes and Victories of the laſt Year, whereby he hoped to encourage the drooping Spirits of his own Soldiers, and confirm thoſe of his Friends and Allies unto him.

The Loſs of Scio was certainly not very conſiderable to the Venetians at that time after they had gained it from the Turks; for Conqueſts at ſuch a diſtance from them can never turn to any Account, or benefit.

The Morea indeed may be a more uſeful Conqueſt, than any of thoſe on the Coaſt of Aſia, where the Turks are far ſtronger than on the Coaſt of Europe, and this Year alſo the Venetians had been moſt ſucceſsful in thoſe Parts of the Morea, having Defeated the Turks there in all their Attempts, in this as well as ſeveral other Years; but theſe Succeſſes are not likely to be continued, for unleſs the Venetians increaſe the Number of their Ships at Sea, and augment their Forces at Land; and make good choice of their principal Commanders; all Matters will probably go backwards; for ſuch Generals as Moroſini and Koniſmarc are not eaſily to be found, under whom all things thrived and proſpered, ſo that it were now to be wiſhed, that the Venetian Forces were more numerous than formerly, and compoſed of their own Subjects, rather than of Foreigners.

But the Turks had a more watchful Eye over their War in Hungary, and the Parts about Belgrade, and Tranſylvania, than either in Aſia, or other Countries of Europe, or over the Province of Baſſora, or Baſorat, of which the Arabians had made a late Conqueſt over the Turkiſh Baſha of that Country, who having but 2000 Men with him, was forced to ſubmit to the 1696. greater force of the Arabs, and upon his Surrender made a Capitulation with them, That he might paſs into Perſia, where he was well received at Iſpahan by the King, being a Wiſe Man, and a Soldier.

About the ſame time likewiſe Solyman Bey, a Turk, a Native of Curdiſtan, having routed a Party of Perſians on the Frontiers, had a Commiſſion given him by the Grand Seignior, to do all the Miſchief he was able on the Frontiers of Perſia, not on the Perſians only, but on the Georgians and Arabians, who had joyned together and made themſelves Princes of thoſe Provinces.

The Venetians at Sea give a Defeat to the Turks.

Nor did the Affairs of the Turks proſper better at that time in the Morea, where a ſtrong Party of the Venetian Forces made an Irruption upon the Turks, and advanced ſo far as Thebes, where the Turks received an entire Defeat, all the Country being Spoiled, Plundered, and Sacked by the Venetians, who upon their return carried with them a great Booty, with vaſt Numbers of Turkiſh Slaves.

Whilſt thoſe Matters were tranſacting, the Sultan was diligently employed at the Port in forming a Numerous Army, and providing all things for the Support and Maintenance of them. Nor was the like Diligence wanting in preparing and ſetting forth their Fleet, and putting them into a poſture capable to Fight and Engage the Venetians; but as to the Land-Forces, the Campaign of this Year began early in the Month of May, when the Heydukes in divers places of Sclavonia, aſſembled themſelves in a Body to the Number of 400 Men, with which they paſſed the Save, and made an Inroad ſo far as Niſſa, about eight or nine Days to the Eaſtward of Belgrade, and in that March, they drove away great Numbers of ſmall and great Cattle; after which they contrived in what manner to make their Retreat; but as they thought thereupon, the Garriſons of Belgrade, and other Neighbouring Places, made a Sally out upon them with a Party of about 2000 Men, Horſe and Foot, who being informed of the Enemies Deſign, they drew up ſo advantagiouſly in a Wood, and received them with ſo great Bravery, that after ſeveral Repulſes given them, in which great Numbers were Killed and Wounded, were at length forced to fly and quit the Field, whilſt the Sclavonians made good their Retreat, and proceeded happily in their Deſign, which is all the Prologue that was made to the ſucceeding Actions of the following Campaign; only every thing began then to diſpoſe it ſelf towards a Bloody War, and for Action of the following Year: When the Duke of Lorain made his firſt Campaign in Hungary in Quality of Major-General of the Imperial-Army, Commanding in particular the Regiments of St. Croix, de Commerci, and Baſſompierre, in which Commands this Young Prince evidenced to the World, a clear Inclination, and Diſpoſition to the War, agreeable to the Mind of his Illuſtrious Anceſtors. 1696.

The Paſha of Diarbekir put to Flight.

Whilſt things were thus preparing in Hungary, News came to the Port from Diarbekir, giving the Relation of a Fight between the Rebels in thoſe Parts, and the Turks, in which the Turks had been Defeated, and their General, the Paſha of Diarbekir, put to Flight, at a Place not far from Sivas: The Particulars of which ſucceeded in this manner.

And the Turks defeated.

When the Paſha heard where the Rebels were Encamped, he preſently marched againſt them with a Body of 3600 Horſe, Commanding two other Paſhas with a force of 2000 Horſe more to fall upon the Rebels, and getting between them began to Kill and Deſtroy them without giving Quarter to any of them: The Rebels having had timely notice of this Motion of the Paſha's, they mounted their Horſes with much Courage and Activity, towards the Evening, and taking a Round about the Mountain, by favour of the Moon, they marched all that Night, and in the Morning early they fell in with the Turkiſh Seraskier, or General, with their Swords, or Scimyters, and with their Pikes and Lances, whence aroſe a very Bloody Fight, which held for the ſpace of two Hours, to the great loſs and diminution of the Army of the Turks, and danger of the Paſha's Life, who being put into great fear quitted the Field and fled, leaving the Spoil to the Enemy; with which they being encouraged, they marched towards Aleppo, and from thence exacted what Money and Proviſions that rich Province could afford them, upon pain of Military Execution; at which the Sultan was ſo enraged, that he gave out preſent Orders to raiſe the Neſiran, which is the Militia of the Eaſtern Countries; and like one Man to riſe and joyn themſelves againſt the Enemy. Beſides which, many other things were to be done, both by Sea and Land, and that with all Expedition, in regard that the force of the Rebels growing daily greater, their Power would with much more difficulty be ſubdued.

And in regard there was a neceſſity of putting the Fleet to Sea with all expedition; all other Affairs were laid aſide, until this was diſpatched, which was performed after the Biram, and then about the beginning of May the Sultan began his March towards Hungary at the Head of his Army, when ſeveral were of Opinion that due care ſhould be taken to ſuppreſs the Rebels in Aſia; but the Sultan would hear of nothing more than to raiſe the Neſiran of the Country upon them, which are a ſort of Soldiers like our Trained-Bands, and not better exercifed in the Wars.

The Sultan who intended to have brought this Year 80 or 100000 Men into the Field againſt the Emperor, was contented to fall ſhort at leaſt 10000 Men of that Number which he had the laſt Year: And in regard the Aſiatick Soldiers could not, or would not leave their own Country to attend the Armies in Hungary; the whole Army of the Turks did not amount to more than 50000 Men; and ſcarcely to that neither conſidering the Diverſions made on one ſide by the Perſians, and by the Muſcovites on the other; wherefore conſidering theſe Difficulties and Diſtreſſes, all the Ottoracks were called to the Wars, being in the Nature of Milites immeriti, who after their long Services in the War, have liberty given them to withdraw to their own Homes, with two Pence or three Pence a Day, which is called a dead Pay; and of theſe there may be about 40000 Men, which may be ſome Addition to the Number of the Turkiſh Army, and with theſe the Turks were now obliged to help themſelves.

But to underſtand more diſtinctly the Tranſactions and Progreſs of all the Turkiſh Affairs both by Sea and Land for this Year following,

The Grand Seignior, with the Queen Mother leaves Conſtantinople.

In the firſt place we are to take notice, That in the Month of March of this Year, 30 Frigats were diſpatched for Aſac, which ſoon afterwards were followed by eight Gallies.

As to the Land Matters, March the 28th the Grand Seignior and Grand Vizier made their Alloy to their Tents, which were pitched as uſual at Daout Paſha; but that being very early in the Morning, the Show was but indifferent. The Grand Seignior was dreſſed in the manner, as when he made his Entrance. The Valide followed about two Hours after, with great Attendance.

April.

Mezzo Morto the Admiral, having left the Baſtarda Gally behind him, ſailed out of Port the 6th of April; and the Grand Seignior and Grand Vizier marched for Adrianople, where they arrived the 17th of this Month.

The 23d of this April being the Day of the Great Biram, News was brought of the Birth of a Daughter Born to the Sultan in the Seraglio, whereupon the Chimacam, to ſhow his Reſpect and Duty to the Grand Seignior, cauſed four Days of Rejoycing to be proclaimed; but on the 24th Day a little after Midnight, there happening a very great Fire, the Rejoycings were forbidden and recalled.

A Fire at Conſtantinople.

The Fire began without the Gate of Tophana, the Wind at N. E. which being very fierce and ſtrong, ſoon reduced all that Quarter into Aſhes, where it continued burning till Five in the Afternoon of the 25th; during which time 3000 Houſes were computed to have been Burnt, and amongſt them all our Merchant's Houſes, excepting one who had the good Fortune to be ſaved: But God be praiſed not much of our Engliſh Goods were burnt.

June.

About the beginning of June of this Year, the Marquis de Lore arrived at Conſtantinople, in Quality of Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the French King: He was brought as far as Tenedos by a French Man of War of 60 Guns, and from thence by a Tartan he was Tranſported to Conſtantinople, from whence, on the 10th of this Month he was carried to Adrianople, and thence without loſs of time he followed the Camp, which had marched thence the eighth of June.

The 23d of this Month, Tekely was Commanded by the Grand Seignior, to follow the Camp, but his Princeſs remained at Conſtantinople, both of them being in great Neceſſity to live, being only allowed five Dollars a Day, beſides ſome ſmall matter ariſing from the Impoſts of Wine, which the Grand Seignior permitted them to bring in. The Beauty of this Lady could prevail little either for her ſelf or Prince; for I have heard, That ſhe was a Lady of a very hard Countenance, and her Air, and Carriage, in no wiſe engaging.

July.

The Turkiſh Army being arrived at Belgrade, they began to move on the 30th of July, and that Day to paſs the Danube, when publick Prayers were begun at Conſtantinople and Adrianople for their Succeſſes and Bleſſings of their Army, which was this Year eſteemed very powerful, and deſigned (as the common Report was) againſt Tranſylvania: But whilſt the Turks marched full of hopes of Succeſs, with a great Army ſuppoſed to conſiſt of 100000 Men; their Boldneſs was much tempered by the News of the Surrender of Aſac to the Muſcovites after 57 Days Siege, and the Advices wanting 16 Days, it was ſaid, That the Tartar Han arrived two Days after the Surrender, tho' had he come ſooner,

he

1696. he could have done nothing; for it was ſo cloſely Beſieged, that the Turks themſelves were of Opinion, That all the Succours ſent thence, namely, from all parts of the Turkiſh Dominions, would not have been able to effect any thing: Neither were the Gallies, which were with five more than the 13 ſent the laſt Month, able to approach the Place by ſome Leagues: Hereupon the Corn at Conſtantinople, was riſen 50 per Cent. and the People were ſo apprehenſive of a Famine in all the Dominions of the Turks, that in caſe the Muſcovites ſhould make any Progreſs, they ſhould not know which way to proceed.

At that time Mezzo Morto with the Turkiſh Fleet was ſtill at Scio, intending about the middle of this Month to Sail from thence; he had with him about 40 Sail of Ships beſides Gallies; the Venetians were not very ſtrong, nor did either ſide endeavour to engage.

But the moſt important Deſign of this Summers Campaign, was laid in Hungary and Tranſylvania, where the Sultan fixed his greateſt hopes, and both Sides intended to do their beſt, and to bring things to a deciſive Action; to perform which, His Electoral Highneſs of Saxony having fixed the Imperial Camp at a Place called Olaſch, on the 30th of Auguſt N. S. giving out, as if the Deſign was to Beſiege Temeſwaer, and thereby to draw the Enemy into a Neceſſity of Sallying out, and coming to a Battle, that they might be better able to relieve the Place; to which end the Turks having paſſed the Danube, the nearer to approach their Enemies, made two Days March, one after the other; by which being four Leagues diſtant from each other.

On the 20th of this Month they held a Council of War, at which it was reſolved to advance one Day nearer to obſerve the Countenance of the Enemy.

So that very early in the Morning on the 21ſt, they marched in good Order of Battel, and by nine a Clock they diſcovered ſome of the Enemies Cavalry, whom they Attacked and Repulſed ſeveral times with conſiderable loſs to the Turks.

And on the 22d ſome Parties of the Chriſtians brought ſeveral Priſoners into the Camp, amongſt which was a Chiaus, who reported, That the Janiſaries were very advantageouſly poſted on the right ſide of a Moraſs, confined, and reaching to the Banks of the River Temes, and another Body of them Encamped to the Left along the Banks of the Brook Begl, their Cannon being pointed upon that Place, where was the only Avenue, or Acceſs where the Enemy could come upon them; and their 1696. Camp on all ſides ſo fortified, that the Chriſtians could not Attack them without much Difficulty and Danger; wherefore, to give the Enemy room to advance, and invite them to a Battle, the Turks on the 24th Sallied out from their Retrenchments, which was done only with Deſign to make other Lines, which were finiſhed in two Hours time, or leſs; and having there planted their Cannon, they began to play one upon the other on both ſides, and as the Priſoners who had been made in ſeveral Skirmiſhes, aſſured the Chriſtian Army, their Artillery was well ſerved, and had killed many of their Soldiers, and ſeveral of their beſt Gunners, tho' the loſs on the Chriſtian ſide had been but very indifferent.

On the 25th nothing very conſiderable was acted: But

On the 26th the Chriſtians advanced Guards acquainted the Generals, That the Body of the Enemies Army was in motion, and marched in poſture of Battle, under Covert of Buſhes, Shrubs, and ſome Trees, and that they had already poſted themſelves between Temeſwaer and the Chriſtian Army, the Generals of which ſending to take a view of the Countenance of the Enemy; they were of Opinion, and ſaw evidently, that the Body, which they diſcovered, conſiſted of the whole Turkiſh Army, and not a Detachment; upon which the Chriſtian Army marched directly upon them to Attack and Engage them; but before they could come ſo near as to Engage them, they had covered and fortified themſelves under the Buſhes and Ditches, that it was difficult to come at them; and having alſo a Bog behind them, and a Marſh on their left Hand, with three Ranks of Waggons faſtned to each other with Chains of Iron in the Front, made the Attack almoſt impoſſible to be made: Howſoever the Generals reſolved, whatſoever Difficulties might offer, to Attack the Enemy; The Battle of Olaſch. and accordingly about five a Clock in the Evening, ſix Battalions of Foot, ſuſtained by two Regiments of Dragoons, Charged the Enemy in the Flank under the Command of General Heuſler, and commanded them to march into the Wood, which they performed with great Bravery, and much galled the Turks with their Fire. The Enemies Horſe hereupon advanced, and finding that the Chriſtians had formed their Line, charged them with great Fury, when 1200 of their beſt Horſe broke through the two Saxon Battalions, notwithſtanding the latter made a very brave Reſiſtance; but Lieutenant-General Zui- zendorf, with ſome Regiments of Horſe of the ſame Line, beat back the Enemy, and again cloſed the Line with ſome Saxon Battalions, and Attacked the Janiſaries in their Intrenchments, and beat them from their Poſt; but the Enemies Foot being reinforced, and their Horſe taking our Men in the Flank, they were obliged to retire; only two Regiments of our Dragoons, Commanded by the Young Prince of Vaudemont, advanced to ſuſtain them, and repulſed the Turkiſh Horſe; but the Janiſaries returning, and Charging them again, the Dragoons ſuffered very much by their Fire, and many Soldiers and Officers were killed and wounded; but General Heuſler bringing up another Regiment to their Aſſiſtance, beat back the Enemy to their Intrenchments, but was himſelf dangerouſly wounded.

Whilſt this was doing, another Body of the Enemies Horſe Charged another Body on the ſecond Line, where the Chriſtian Troops received them in ſuch a manner, as gave a Check to their Fury, and then General Roſes advancing with the Horſe of the ſame Line, drove them back, and purſued them about two Hungarian Miles, when the Victory began to declare it ſelf in favour of the Chriſtians, and the Turks to put themſelves into Flight, when Orders came to General Roſes to ſtop the Purſuit, and to march back with the Troops; howſoever ſome other Squadrons of Horſe followed the Enemies unto their Intrenchments; from whence the Turks made ſo great a Fire both with their Cannon and Small-ſhot, that thoſe Squadrons were forced to retire; and being purſued by the Enemies Horſe, they encountred another of the Chriſtian Regiments, which they alſo put into Diſorder; which General Roſes obſerving, advanced with the Regiment of Caprara, and Charging the Enemy in the Flank, cut off above 1000 of them: Then the whole Chriſtian Line advanced, and puſhed the Enemy into their Trenches, where they were in ſuch a Conſternation, that the Sultan himſelf with much difficulty prevailed upon them to keep their Ground, and defend their Intrenchments, killing ſeveral with his own Hand, that would have fled; and at length Night coming on, it put an end to the Battle.

The Turks worſted.

Thus the Chriſtians remaining Maſters of the Field, or Place of Battle, intended to Attack again the Enemies Camp by Break of Day in the Morning; but they laboured ſo hard all that Night, that they fortified their Camp, and made it almoſt impregnable; which hindered the Germans from making another Attempt in the Morning.

The Chriſtians loſt a great many Men in this Fight, amongſt which were divers Officers of Fame and Renown, as Heuſler, General of the Horſe, and Major-General Polland, beſides others who died of their Wounds.

The Turks loſt above 8000 Men, as was reported by a Paſha, who was taken Priſoner in the Battel.

The Troops on both ſides often mingled, and gave no Quarter on either ſide. A great Booty was taken from the Turks, amongſt which were many fine Horſes, with ſeveral Standards.

In the heat of this Action the Germans loſt ſome Pieces of Cannon, by reaſon that their Carriages were ſhot in pieces and the Horſes which drew them were killed.

Septemb. 27, and 28.

The 27th of this Month of September, the whole Chriſtian Army remained that whole Day in Poſture of Battle before their Camp; but the Enemy not appearing, His Electoral Highneſs reſolved to paſs the Beque, and to march towards the River Theyſſe, to ſupply the Army with Proviſions, of which they began to be in want, which was done the 28th when the Turks paſſed the River in like manner.

And on the 29th the Chriſtian Army Encamped at Olaſeb, near the Theyſſe, where General Staremberg joyned the reſt of the Army with ſix Regiments of Horſe from Titul; and Orders were ſent to the Brandenburghers, and other Troops, that were not in the Battle, having been poſted in ſeveral Flying Camps, to joyn the Army, which being refreſhed, were ordered to march again to obſerve the Enemy in their Motion.

This is the Account which the Turks themſelves give of this Battle, which being finiſhed, as here deſcribed, both Armies thought it now to be the Time and Seaſon to withdraw out of the Field; and ſo the Elector withdrew out of the Field, and came to Vienna; by which it was judged, that no farther Action would happen for that Year; and in confirmation thereof, the Turkiſh Fleet retired into Salankement, without having done any thing of moment for this whole Year: It is not to be doubted, but that the Iſſue of this Battel turned to the Advantage of the Imperialiſts, unleſs it be that they left 26 Pieces of Cannon in the Buſhes.

The Seaſon of the Year declining now towards the Winter, and the Elector of Saxony withdrawn from the Field to Vienna, the Sultan alſo following the like Example, (which diſpleaſed not the Turkiſh Army) returned from Belgrade to Adrianople, on the 1696. October. the 17th of the laſt Month of October, where being arrived, they did not much brag or boaſt of their Succeſs, tho' to ſpeak truly, they had this Year withſtood a greater Force of the Chriſtians, than they had for ſeveral Years before, which they attribute in a great meaſure, to the Perſonal Valour and Bravery of the Sultan himſelf, whoſe Preſence ever gives Courage to his Army: And it is ſaid, That he kept all the time of the Battle in the Rear, with 3000 Choice Men, to kill all Perſons whom he ſhould find or meet turning their Backs, upon whom he did ſome Execution.

In all theſe Actions, both in this and ſeveral other Years, the French did great Services to the Turks, both by their Counſels, and Management of their Affairs, and eſpecially the Marquis de Lore was very Eminent, and Signal in all his Behaviour; tho' there was never any good Underſtanding between him and the Ambaſſador Monſieur Chaterneau. The French do great Services.

This Year was not very ſignal on either ſide for any conſiderable Exploits at Sea, or on the Watry Element: Only that the Turks deſtroyed three of the Emperor's Veſſels, or Gallies on the Danube, and took one of very good force.

After which all things remained quiet as to the Camp in Hungary and elſewhere, except the great Preparations which were making for the re-taking of Aſac from the Moſcovites; from whence five Gallies were about this time returned, having left eight others with the Brigantines at Ozul.

On the firſt Day of November an Ambaſſador from Perſia made his Entrance into Conſtantinople, where a great Ship four Days after was Launched, carrying 100 Guns, four whereof would ſhoot a Shot of 24 Okes, every Oke weighing two Pounds and a half, with deſign to be fitted for the Service of the following Year, with three others, which were built in the Black-Sea, much of the ſame bigneſs and ſized with that which was built at Conſtantinople, and now Launched for Entertainment of the Perſian Ambaſſador, who ſtaid not long in that City before he proceeded to Adrianople, where he arrived about the 20th of November with a Retinue of about 150 Attendants, beſides thoſe which were appointed to ſerve him by the Turks, whoſe Entrance was in this manner. Novemb.

The Manner of the Perſian Ambaſſador's Entrance.

About an Hours diſtance from the City, at a Place called Solak Chiſme, the Ambaſſador was met by the Chiaus-Baſha, with about 60 of his Chiauſes, as alſo by the Lieutenant-General of the Spahees, who with a great Retinue, conducted him to his Lodgings in the Palace of the Treaſurer Achmet Paſha, who had Orders to aſſign him 250 or 300 Dollars a Day for his Entertainment, for the Subſiſtence of him and his Retinue: Beſides which allowance was given for the Food of an Elephant, and for Fodder for Camels and Horſes; and alſo a 100 weight of Sugar a Day for Sweetmeats for the Perſians, who are great lovers of that kind of Diet, with Amber and Perfumes.

The Ambaſſador having remained about 12 Days at Adrianople, and there well entertained, he demanded Audience of the Grand Vizier, to whom he delivered the Credentials from the King his Maſter; and having been entertain'd in Diſcourſe for about the ſpace of three Quarters of an Hour, he departed from the Grand Vizier, having only received one ſingle Veſt, which ſeemed very ſtrange, in regard it had been the Cuſtom for other Ambaſſadors from Perſia to receive 60, at leaſt diſpoſed between them and their Retinue.

Upon the 16th of December, the Ambaſſador received his Audience from the Grand Seignior, on a Tueſday, which is the uſual Day of the Divan, when it was formerly the Cuſtom to give out the Pay to the Janiſaries and Soldiers; at which time alſo there being an Appearance of the Chief Officers both Civil and Military, renders all things the more ſtately, and magnificent: But it ſeems at this time contrary to all former Cuſtoms, the Pay was not given out to the Janiſaries and Soldiers, becauſe perhaps that the principal Officers of the Army were at Belgrade, and upon the Frontiers of Hungary: Howſoever as great an Appearance there was of the Chiauſes, as had been the Cuſtom at the Audiences given to other Ambaſſadors. Audience of the Perſian Ambaſſador.

And then the Preſents were ſent unto the Grand Seignior, which conſiſted of

1696.

The Preſents from Perſia.

A Female Elephant covered with a Furniture of Cloth of Gold, which came down to the Foot; and on the place of the Saddle, there was a Chair of State erected, lined within with thin Silver Plates.

Beſides which, were ſix Camels, each of which carried two Sapets, or Hampers uſed in the Wars, in which were contained the Royal Preſents made up in little Bales with Coverings of Silk.

Moreover there were Ten Camels laden with Perſian Hangings, ſix of which were of fine Silks, and four ordinary ones, but very large, and of a more than uſual ſize: As alſo three Camels laden alſo with Cloth of Gold.

Upon the Ambaſſador's Arrival at the Grand Seignior's Seraglio, the Janiſaries were preſented as running for their Porridge, and Pilao, or Rice, being about Noon, which was their Dinner time, as was their Daily Practice, as was ſhown to all Ambaſſadors.

The Place reſerved for the Ambaſſador, was the ſame as was prepared for others, juſt over againſt the Grand Vizier, that the manner how that Great Miniſter diſtributes Juſtice to the People, might more plainly appear.

The Supream Vizier ſate at the ſame Table with the Ambaſſador; ſix of whoſe Gentlemen were placed at the Table with the Chimacam Chaſſan Paſha, and ſix others at the Table with the Aga, or General of the Janiſaries: And in regard the Companions of the Ambaſſador conſiſted of more than 40 Noble Men, the Turks were obliged to place them at three other Tables; leaving out the Paſha's of the Bench, and other Officers; ſo that it happened out that Day, that no Place was left for the Kadileſchers, or Lords Chief Juſtices, all being taken up for the Perſians.

At this time the Royal Preſents contained in the 12 Cheſts which had been carried upon the ſix Camels, were taken out, and carried by the Hands of 150 Men, as the Cuſtom of the Turks was: The which conſiſted of Cloth of Gold, Damasks, Sables, Boxes of Muſk and Amber, Silks, and Sattins of various Colours, Turbants, Hangings of Silk, ordinary Damasks, Bezoar-ſtones, Perſian and Indian Sattins, Bridles of Gold, a Topus or Mace of Gold, with a Sword of the like Metal: After all which Ceremonies, according to the Ancient Cuſtom, the Perſian Ambaſſador being upon his Return from the Preſence of the Sultan, he introduced 20 of his Perſian Nobles, and then he delivered the Royal Letter. The which Ceremony being over, he proceeded out from the Royal Preſence Cloathed in a Rich Veſt, like unto that which he had received at his Audience with the Great Vizier, which was like to that which they had uſually given in former times to Chriſtian Ambaſſadors; beſides which, the Grand Seignior preſented him with the ſame Horſe which was ſent him to carry him to his Audience with the Sultan, and Veſted 90 Gentlemen of his Retinue. After which he returned to his Lodgings which had been provided for him and with the ſame Attendance as had accompanied him to his Audience.

After ſome Days continuance at the Ottoman Court, it was made known by ſome of the Principal Miniſters of State, that one part of the Subſtance of the Letter was, after the Salutes and kind Wiſhes, and Congratulations at his Aſcenſion to the Sublime Throne of his Anceſtors, The King of Perſia made the following Requeſt to the Grand Seignior:

The King of Perſia's Requeſts and Demands.

The Firſt Article demanded.

THAT he would be pleaſed, if it were poſſible, to Remove Bebek Suliman Bei from the Government of Caramania, and to put another Prince into his place, who might prove of a more Quiet and Placid Diſpoſition than this Bebek, who was of a Turbulent Spirit, and gave much Moleſtation to the Perſians; the which the King of Perſia, or Sofi, did not doubt but to obtain from that Friendſhip which intervenes between their great Powers and Dominions. And whereas Yearly many Perſian Pilgrims travel to Mecca, where having no Place to Pray in, and make their Devotions ſeparately and apart from other Nations, they found themſelves much hindered, and incommoded in the Exerciſe of their Mahometan Devotions; wherefore their Deſire was, That they might have a Place aſſigned them for the Uſe of the Perſians.

The Second Article demanded.

Farther it was deſired, That the preheminence of Place and Superiority in the Holy Land, might be given to the Armenian Patriarch, before others of the Chriſtian Rite, who were Subjects to the King of Perſia; the which ought not to be refuſed them, in regard that they profeſs the ſame Faith with other Chriſtians; namely, Greeks, and Franks.

But in regard that it hath never been the Cuſtom of the Turks to return a ſpeedy Anſwer to fair Promiſes, or Flattering Inſinuations, a term of 25 Days paſſed before an Anſwer was returned to the preceding Demands; and that was done when the Ambaſſador received Audience with the Chimacam: And then he was Invited with all his Court and Attendance, to an Entertainment with the Grand Vizier, where they met about two a Clock in the Afternoon, the Feaſt held until five a Clock, and concluded without other Preſents than good Muſick, unleſs it were of a ſtately Horſe, with an agreeable Furniture.

Some Days afterwards, he was Invited to Dinner by the Chimacam Haſſan Paſha, and in a Week afterwards, he was in like manner treated by the Aga, or General of the Janiſſaries, who alſo preſented the Ambaſſador with a very fine Horſe.

After all which Feaſts, and Bankets, and Preſents, the Ambaſſador thought it time to ſend his Preſents to the Grand Vizier, by his Kahya, and other Principal Officers of his Court, in number about 40.

The Perſian Preſents to the Turks.

There were ſix Camels, two of which were laden with Preſents, and the other four with fine Tents and Furniture for the ſame, with rich Garments: The Preſents were all carried by the Hands of 28 Perſians; that is to ſay, with Cloth of Gold, Damasks,. Indian Sattins, Perſian Turbants, with a rich Sword.

Moreover two ſmall Bails to the Vizier's Kahya, which contained about 25 Pieces of Sattins, Damasks, and Cloth of Gold.

In like manner the Preſents to the Chimacam Chavan Paſha, contained about 40 Pieces. And that which was for the Janiſſar-Aga, was not much inferiour to it.

After ſome Days ſtay, a Meſſenger was ſent from the Grand Seignior, with the Anſwer to the Letter of Buſineſs which the Perſian Ambaſſador had brought: Which was in this manner.

The Grand Seignior's Anſwer, to the Perſian Ambaſſador.

THAT Solyman Bebek being an Inheritary Prince, could not be removed from his Government; it being againſt the Mahometan Law to be removed from thence; nor was it poſſible for them to Allow, or Aſſign any ſeparate Place to the Perſians to Pray, and Exerciſe their Devotions in, becauſe that Mecca is a Holy Place, and free, and common to all Mahometans.

The Holy Land hath alſo been Aſſigned to the Standard-Bearer Omer, as alſo to the Franks; the which having not been much Eſteemed, or ſet by in the Time of Muſtapha Paſha Vizier, the Preheminence of that Place was given as a Law to the Franks, which was ſo ſolemnly given, that it could not be taken away, Corrupted, or Violated.

The Perſians depart.

Five or ſix Days afterwards the Ambaſſador went to the Vizier to take his Letter, which being delivered to him, about three or four Days afterwards the Vizier ſent him, by Order of the Grand Seignior, 50 Bags, or Purſes of Money, by the Chiaus-Baſha; ten Days after which, he departed from Adrianople, and went to Conſtantinople, taking 60 Days Journey within the Dominion of the Ottomans, accounting Tocat in Meſopotamia, and other Parts; the which was ſo divided, that a Perſian Merchant coming to die within that Dominion, his Goods may be challenged by his Relations, and conveyed away to their Inheritance.

The Perſian Ambaſſador had ſtill another Requeſt to make, in reſpect to his Nation.

That the Perſian Subjects who Inhabit at Balata in Conſtantinople, wanting a Place for their Devotions, may have that Place reſtored to them for their Prayers, which was formerly belonging to the Armenians.

The which Requeſt was granted to them before the Departure of the Ambaſſador, 1696. with Power to rebuild the ſame again in what ſhould be wanting; the which was taken away ſoon after the Departure of the Perſian Ambaſſador from Conſtantinople. And tho' the Armenian Commiſſary endeavoured to proceed, and made his Complaints at Adrianople, againſt the Impediments he had found; yet no Remedy was found, but an end was put to all the Work, and the Workmen deſiſted from all other Proceedings in that Building.

And here it may be enquired, How it came to paſs that ſo many Embaſſies were ſent from Perſia to the Turks ſucceſſively, one after the other? The Cauſe of which is evident from the Succeſſion of the Three Sultans one after the other; namely, Solyman, Achmet, and Muſtapha, who now Reigns; to every one of which, as it is the conſtant Cuſtom for the Perſians to ſend an Ambaſſador; ſo on the other ſide, on the ſame Occaſion, it is for the Turks to ſend unto the Perſians.

Septemb. Towards the end of this Month, the Elector of Saxony returned to Vienna, which was an evident Demonſtration, that there would be no farther Action in Hungary for this Year; and at the ſame time the Turkiſh Fleet retired to a Bay near Salankement, without having done any great Damage.

The Perſians, as we have ſaid, being departed, and on their way homewards; the Sultan conſidered in what manner he might moſt conveniently and readily pay his Army both of Horſe and Foot; for which important Service Money did not readily offer; wherefore to ſupply that Want, the Grand Seignior ſent for the Teſterdar, or Treaſurer, to come to his Preſence, but he not being able to appear with ready Money in Hand, the Teſterdar could ſcarce make a ſhift to ſave his Head; tho' with great labour and difficulty he ſatisfied the Spahee's, charging them to return timely at the beginning of the next Year, to follow him to the Wars: And in the mean time Commiſſaries were ſent from all Parts to collect and gather all the Taxes which had been laid on the People in all parts, whether in Europe or Aſia, within the Ottoman Empire, as likewiſe what Revenue was ariſing to the Grand Seignior from Offices, Cuſtoms, Taxes, &c. which are uſually ſold every Month, eſpecially in the Month of March over all the Empire, which commonly brings in ſeveral Millions: So that the Teſterdar, or Treaſurer, was forced to employ Spies to adviſe him where the Money was, and in whoſe Coffers, which yielded great Sums for ſupply of the Grand Seignior's Occaſions.

Theſe things being over, great Preparations were making for the following Campaign, both by Sea and Land; ſeveral half Gallies were already built for the Black-Sea, Commanded by Derviſh Ogli Bei of Smyrna. The Fleet under the Command of Mezzo Morto, who was Captain-Paſha, conſiſted of 25 Sail of Men of War, all of them being the Grand Seignior's own Ships, and ſuch as being joyned with thoſe of Barbary, would be too ſtrong a Match for the Venetians. 1696.

This whole Winter the Grand Seignior paſſed at Adrianople, where after the Example of his Father, he delighted much in Hunting. Howſoever as the Year came on, he neglected not the thoughts of War, nor the Preparations for the enſuing Year; but as yet the Scheme for the War was not deſigned nor laid.

Anno 1697.

THE Embroils in Aſia with the beginning of this Year ſeemed to be a little quieted, gave hopes to the Turks, that Baſora would ſhortly be reſtored to them. 1697.

'Twas thought at this time, that the Marquis de Lore making little or no ſhow at Adrianople, being then in Quality of Envoy Extraordinary, would follow the Camp for the enſuing Campaign; but as to the Ambaſſador Caſtelneuf, he reſolved to remain at Adrianople, acting for the Affairs of their King and Nation, between whom and the Marquis appeared no good underſtanding.

The Friendſhip ſtill continued, and ſeemed to increaſe between the French and the Turks, till the latter began to be ſomething doubtful of them, upon the Reports and Rumours which flew about, That the French were buſied in making a General Peace with all the Allies; tho' they at firſt confidently denied it to the Turks, who notwithſtanding grew Jealous of them; and from that time their Mutual Friendſhip began much to abate.

The Tumults in Aſia ſtill continued; to quiet which, and to carry on the War in Hungary, the Turks prepared to enter into Tranſylvania, to which end they daily Liſted and Enrolled New Spahee's and Janiſaries in all the Provinces of Aſia, iſſuing forth very rigorous Orders, That the Militia in all thoſe Parts ſhould this Year appear early in the Field; and greater Preparations were making for this Year, than for a long time before, by reaſon that the Sultan out of his Glory and Pride, reſolved to make his utmoſt Effort this Year on Hungary, and Tranſylvania, and accordingly to win all back again, and if not to put an end to the War, to come to an Honourable Accommodation of Peace, which the Turks were ſenſible could not be avoided, in caſe they ſhould receive any Blow, or ſuddain Foyl the next Year from the Chriſtians.

This the Ambaſſadors of England and Holland ſo plainly foreſaw, that they lay upon the watch to obſerve all the Inclinations and Motions of the Turks; and both ſides now eſteeming themſelves upon the Criſis, laboured all that was poſſible to bring things to their deſired Iſſue; when daily Spahees and Commiſſaries were employed to gather and collect Sums of Money in all the Aſiatick Provinces, were obſerved to paſs the Boſphorus, and other Seas, for Service of the War; of which the Tartars being informed, wrote to the Sultan to ſend them Money to ſupply their Occaſions againſt the Moſcovites, of whom they were more affraid than of the Polanders. Howſoever the Turks being Headed by ſo Brave a Sultan as this preſent Grand Seignior, as they thought, did not ſeem to fear any thing, but to carry all before them, which ſo elevated them to ſuch a heighth of Pride and Inſolence, that the Mediators were of an Opinion, That until a conſiderable Blow were given to the Turks, it would be impoſſible to reduce them to any Terms of Reaſon and Moderation.

Preparations for the Turkiſh Fleet.

In which Humour they made Preparations for the following Year both by Sea and Land: That for the Sea deſigned for the Euxine, was chiefly provided at a Port called Sinap, in the Country of Trabeſonda, where they alſo were caſting many great and heavy Cannon: And into the Arſenal of Conſtantinople, were in this Month of January 120 Cannon more brought in and lodged there.

But what other Sultans have not done, this hath had the Ambition to perform; that is, under his own Name all the Pieces of Gold and Silver ſhould paſs, within his Empire; the like of which was never known in any other Country, unleſs in England under the Reign of King William III, and the Great. I cannot ſay that all the Gold and Silver within the Turkiſh Dominions was brought into the Mint to be new Coined, but it is certainly reported, that a great part thereof was; to which the five Sol Pieces made by the French, Italians, and other Nations, greatly helped and contributed, of which there had been many Millions Imported in 15 Years, from 65 to 80, which were very beneficial to the Coynage of thoſe Countries.

It was alſo farther commanded, That all thoſe who had any Venetian Zechins, ſhould bring them to the Mint, there to be new ſtamped with the Letters of this Sultan's Name, and there to be changed with the old ones of Venice, or otherwiſe changed for Silver, at the rate of two Dollars and a half per Zechin: Likewiſe all the Lion Dollars, commonly imported by the Dutch with the Figure of a Lion thereupon, were order'd to be brought into the Exchequer, where the Figure of the Lion being beaten out with the Hammer, the Turkiſh Impreſſion with the Name of the Sultan, was to be fixed in the place thereof: To bear the Charges of this new Coyning, a quarter of a Dram of Silver was taken from every Lion-Dollar, and then it was put into the Fire, where it was Hammered again, and ſome Chriſtian Letters on the ſide thereof were permitted to remain, that thereby it might appear, that the ſame were reformed Dollars, and ſuch as came from the Chriſtians; and that for the Alterations thereof, the Turkiſh Workmen were not to be blamed; for which Work the Turks, Grecians, Armenians, and Jewiſh Workmen, had ſo much allowed them by the Day, according to their Agreement.

About this time, being the Month of February, Advices were brought frequently to the Sultan then at Adrianople, from the Tartars, That the Moſcovites were fully reſolved this Year to fall down by Sea upon Caffa; which being believed, and ſo expected, very ſtrict and ſevere Orders were given by the Turks, to provide and equip 80 Frigats, with 15 Gallies, and many other Tranſport-Ships, to carry the Militia into the Black-Sea, to hinder the Deſcent, or Landing of the Moſcovites; which Report gave great Fears and Apprehenſions to the Turks, who thereupon took different Reſolutions and Meaſures in their Affairs.

Beſides the Preparations for the Black-Sea, there were others made for the Euxine, or White-Sea, where Mezzo Morto was appointed Captain-Paſha, or General againſt the Venetians, being accounted a Man of great Courage, and Conduct, at which time there was building a Ship of an immenſe bigneſs, which had been already many Months upon the Stocks, being built by French and Greek Maſters, the like of which, that is ſo large, had never been built in that Arſenal; for it could carry more than 600 Soldiers, beſides Seamen, and Levents; the which being put into ſome tolerable condition of readineſs to Maritime Preparations for the Year 1697.

Sail, the Sultan to ſhow his Greatneſs at Sea, as well as at Land, to the Perſian Ambaſſador, (who remained behind, after the great Embaſſy) iſſued out his Commands to three Paſha's, whom he had made Generals, to equip and fit themſelves bravely.

The firſt was Mezzo Morto, who was to Engage the Venetian Fleet at Sea, and to return Victorious; and in caſe they did, he aſſured them, that they ſhould gain his ſingular Grace and Favour; and as an evidence thereof, he beſtowed upon each of them a very rich Coſtan, or Veſt, richly lined with Sables.

The Second was alſo a Paſha Vice-Admiral, deſigned againſt the Moſcovites.

The third was alſo a Paſha, in Quality of a Rear-Admiral, who was to mount the Danube, and engage againſt the Imperial Fleet, whereſoever they ſhould encounter them, either about Belgrade, or Buda, or any other Parts of the Danube.

After the Sultan had paſſed this Ceremony, he gave leave to his Generals to depart, and ſpeaking very kindly and graciouſly to them, he encouraged them to put themſelves in order for their Reſpective Voyages: So that now it was very apparent, that tho' the Turks would be much weaker this Year by Land, than they were the laſt, yet they would be far ſtronger by Sea, having Mezzo Morto for their Admiral, and every thing in their ſeveral Fleets diſpoſed for Maritime and Naval Engagements; the Succeſs of which, we may ſhortly hear in the courſe of thoſe Months which are proper for Actions of the Sea.

But before we proceed ſo far, it may be pertinent to our Buſineſs to recount how the French Ambaſſador at the Turkiſh Court loſt a Law-Suit which he had with a certain Jew at Gran Cairo, to his great Mortification; for ſuppoſing that he was able to avail in all Points, where his Maſter's Intereſt was concerned; he was highly troubled to find himſelf diſappointed in a Buſineſs at Gran Cairo, relating to ſo inconſiderable a Perſon as a Jew. The Matter was in this manner.

A Story of the Conſul and a Jew at Gran Cairo.

We muſt know, that the Jews in Egypt have commonly very great Power, by reaſon that every Paſha of Gran Cairo, who is the greateſt Beglerbey in all the Empire, when he enters upon that Office, he commonly takes with him from Conſtantinople, ſome Subtle Jew, who is a Man of great Riches, to manage the vaſt Revenue of that Province; which ſets him up ſo high, that he is above the reach of all the Grandees of the Empire, and is Honoured and Reverenced as the Dominus Fac totum, or as Joſeph in the Land of Egypt.

The French Nation had at that time a Conſul in Cairo, who thought himſelf a Match for the Jew; who on the other ſide eſteemed himſelf higher than all the Chriſtians, or Beyes, or Agaw's of Egypt; and conſequently comported himſelf with Neglect and Diſeſteem towards the French Conſul, which he not being able to ſupport, made his Complaints to the French Ambaſſador at Adrianople, againſt the Inſolence of a Jew, of which the Conſul gave a moſt Paſſionate Report to Monſieur de Chateauneuf, then Ambaſſador for the French King at the Port; where he ſo managed the Buſineſs, that a Chiaus was ſent for to fetch the Jew from Cairo, to the Divan at Adrianople; who accordingly taking this long Journey, appeared in Judgment before the Grand Vizier.

This Jew had the Report amongſt all People, of being a Perſon very Judicious, Prudent, and of a patient Temper; and ſince it was the Office of the Ambaſſador to appear againſt this Jew in Judgment before the Grand Vizier, the Jew behaved himſelf with ſo much Modeſty, and Prudence, that he gave unto all the Standers by, ſome deep Impreſſions of his Underſtanding and Innocence, and that he had been injured by the French Conſul at Cairo, of whoſe Honeſty and Wiſdom, the World in thoſe Parts, had not conceived any high Opinion, nor yet of the French Nation: But that depending too much on their great Friendſhip with the Turks, they preſumed to inſult over a People, which had not for ſome Ages been accuſtomed to hard Uſages from Chriſtian Nations. Notwithſtanding all which, and that the Grand Vizier had patiently underſtood the Pleadings on both ſides, and was as well poſſeſſed with the Cabals of the French Nation, yet he gave Orders to the Chiaus-Baſhee to take the Jew into Arreſt; the which was ſaid to have been done out of Policy by the Vizier, to cool, and moderate the Anger of the Ambaſſador, who plainly declared, That unleſs his Maſter, the King, had ſatisfaction in this particular, he was commanded to retire back into France, and to bring with him all the French Merchants, and all others of that Nation, into their own Country.

It not being now a time for the Turks to Quarrel with the French, or to create more Enemies than they have already, they took theſe Menaces with an unaccuſtomed Patience, tho' the Great Officers being offended hereat, vented an abundance of Reproaches againſt the French 1697. Nation; only the Grand Vizier uſing his accuſtomed Patience, ſaid, That Juſtice could never do Injury to any, for that their Law, and the Alcboran, commanded it ſo to be done.

And in this manner this Difference paſſed over, with ſome Advantage to the French, who had obliged ſo great a Perſon as the Jew, who is the Negotiator of all the Affairs of Egypt, to leave his Employment to attend the Summons of the French Ambaſſador at ſuch a diſtance as it is from Gran Cairo to Adrianople: Howſoever after all this, the French Nation did not ſeem to be fully ſatisfied, becauſe that the Vizier after all ſhewed ſome Reſpect to the Jew, beſtowing upon him a Coſtan, or Veſt of Favour and Honour, declaring himſelf in favour of the Jew, that he had been falſely accuſed; and injuriouſly drawn away from the Grand Seignior's Service. To repair which Affront and Neglect to the King of France, a Demand was made by the Ambaſſador, That Licenſe might be given to Repair and Rebuild the Cathedral Church in Galata, which had for above 500 Years remained in the Chriſtian Hands, and laſtly had been Repaired and Rebuilt at the Charges of the Moſt Serene Republick of Venice, ſoon after the laſt War which they had with the Turks in Candia; but now the French depending on the great Services they had done the Turks, ſeized on the Church, which had been the Cathedral of that Dioceſe, and affixed the Arms of France upon the Gates thereof; at which the Venetians being greatly offended, who were the Patrons thereof, and had many Years paſt purchaſed the Advowſon from the Turks, made their Complaints to the Grand Vizier of the Injuſtice which had been done them: Upon which, the Vizier reſolving to end the Controverſie between the Chriſtians, ſeized the Church of Saint Francis or Franciſco, in Galata, and Converted it into a Turkiſh Moſch; and in ſuch like manner commonly end all the Controverſies which Chriſtians have between themſelves, that are referred to, or to be termined by, the Turks.

The Ceremony which the Turks uſed in turning the Chriſtian Church into a Moſch, was by a Command from the Sultan to the Chimacam, to enter the Church with 200 Men of his Followers, together with a good Number of their Imaums, who began at their firſt Entry into the Church, to ſing with a loud Voice, the Tune and Song called Selm which is a Hymn extracted out of the Alcoran, to the Praiſe and Glory of God; the which cauſed great Sadneſs in the Hearts and Eyes of many good Chriſtians in Galata; which had not been done, as many Turks confeſs, had not the French pretended a Right to that Church; with which they in a ſhort time were forced to ſwallow two very bitter Pills, to the Diſhonour of France, and Prejudice to the Chriſtian Cauſe. 1697.

March. Towards the end of the Month of March, the Sultan equipped out ſeven great Men of War of 50 and 60 Pieces of Cannon each, and all armed with 500 Levents, or ſo many Sea-Soldiers apiece; beſides which there were 14 light Gallies, with 25 Frigats, and all accompanied with divers Saiches laden with Proviſions, every one of which will carry as much as 200 Carts, which are laden with Biskets, Meal, and all ſorts of other Ammunition.

Whilſt theſe things were in Action, the French Ambaſſador, Monſieur de Chateaneuf, offered this Summer to make his Campaign with the Grand Seignior in Hungary againſt the Emperor, with which the Turks were well enough pleaſed, in regard they eſteemed this Ambaſſador to be a Man of great Wiſdom and Experience.

Tekely likewiſe about this time was preparing himſelf to accompany the Vizier to the War in Hungary, the which ſome were of an Opinion, That it would be of good conſequence to the Sultan; upon which account the Vizier conceived a great eſteem for him; and was deſirous to ſee the good Effects of all thoſe Promiſes, which Tekely's Princeſs had made to him.

This Lady of Tekely went unto, and returned from Adrianople, and was obſerved to be of an Humour very Aſſiduous, Diligent, and Malitious againſt the Imperialiſts, but very kind and obliging towards the French, but moſt eſpecially to Monſieur de Laurent, who the laſt Year was with the Sultan in the Campaign of Hungary, and was often invited by Tekely's Lady, and by Count Tekely himſelf, to take a Dinner, or a Supper, or ſome other Repaſt with them, at which Monſieur de Laurent was often welcomed, and highly Treated.

A Friend of mine once acquainted me, That having a Curioſity to ſee the Wife, or Princeſs of Tekely, he had the Fortune to hear Maſs with her at the Capuckin's Church at Galata, where well obſerving her Phyſiognomy, it appeared very Ill-favour'd, Old, and Ugly: She profeſſes to be a Roman Catholick, of which ſhe boaſts to many People, and that her Husband hath divers Correſpondents almoſt in every Regiment belonging to the Imperial Army, from whom he hath all the Correſpondencies imaginable with the Principal pal Commanders both of Horſe and Foot, by means of which nothing paſſes, but what he hath a good and perfect Account of, from all parts of the Imperial Army.

The Army which was formed and drawn up againſt the Moſcovites, conſiſted for the moſt part of Spahee's from Anatolia, and of a ſort of a Militia of Paſcialagio, belonging to Siliſtra, of which they reckoned about 35000 Men, beſides Tartars.

The Reputation of this preſent Sultan was ſo great, that in all Parts both of Aſia, Africa, and Europe, he was eſteemed the moſt Fortunate of all the Sultans; for that in the ſpace of two Years only appearing in the Wars, he had ſhowed ſo much Courage and good Conduct, that he had always beaten the Germans; that is to ſay, when he went himſelf in Perſon to the Wars; for which cauſe he was highly Eſteemed, Honoured, and Obeyed.

But as to the Rebels in Aſia, they drew themſelves up very formidably in the Field, expecting to encounter the Army of the Port, and to give them Battel.

The great Power and Nerve of the Ottoman Force is at preſent in Aſia, that of the Turk-men, who are a ſort of People well mounted on very ſtrong and Warlike Horſes, Brave, and Valiant, and well Exerciſed in the Lance, and Bow; ſo that there was great expectation when ſome Feats of Arms would begin: And on the other ſide of Anatolia, they began to Tranſport over their Militia, being deſigned early this Year againſt the Moſcovites, after which the Actions in Hungary were to begin.

The Greek Patriarch a Raſh Man.

But before that ſomething may be diſcourſed in relation to the preſent State of the Greek Church, the Patriarch of which was very Froward and Paſſionate, ready to act any thing which came into his Head, without conſideration of the Prejudice which might reſult thereby: And accordingly having a Quarrel with the Metropolite, or Biſhop of Salonica, he deprived him of his Title and Office, on occaſion of ſome Diſobedience to certain Commands, to which the Patriarch would oblige him; but the Biſhop not being able to ſupport the ſame, out of a Madneſs, and Fury, and tranſport of Rage, he made a Voyage from Salonica to the Grand Vizier, to whom he offered 15 Purſes, on condition, That in Deſpight of the Patriarch he might be re-eſtabliſhed again in his Dioceſe of Salonica, or Theſſalonica: And to incline the Vizier the better hereunto, he demonſtrated that hereby the Grand Seignior in this time of War might gain great Advantages; For that in caſe the Vizier would accept of theſe 15 Purſes, it might be an Example to other Metropolites, to offer ſome 20, ſome 15, and others 10, according to the Value, and Riches of the Dioceſe; the which Propoſition much pleaſed the Sultan, having a good pretence thereby to chargo all the Metropolites, or Biſhops; the which being many in the Greek Church, brought a conſiderable Sum to the Grand Seignior.

The Greek Patriarch hearing hereof, made his Journey to Adrianople, there to make his Complaints againſt this hard Uſage offered to the Greek Church and Nation; the which irritated very much the Anger of the Moſcovites againſt the Turks: And tho' the Moſcovites did greatly at this time threaten Caffa, and give Terrour and Affrightment ſo far as to Conſtantinople it ſelf, yet the Sultan did not neglect the Thoughts and Contrivances of carrying forward his War in Hungary, with as little Expence as was poſſible, all Charges being retrenched; amongſt which one particular, was that of Tekely, to whom no more than five Dollars were allowed a Day, that was for the Maintenance of his Lady, Servants, Horſes, and other Parts of his Epuipage; only to help them they gave a Liberty, or Licenſe to ſell Wine, which was at that time prohibited: And here it was that he ſet up his Wine-Sellar within the Greek Liberties, near to the Privileges of the Patriarchate, where he continued to exerciſe the Trade of ſelling Wine with very good Benefit and Advantage; without which, the five Dollars per Day could not have yielded to him and Family half his Subſiſtence.

Tekely's Poor State and Condition.

April.

And being now entered into the Month of April, four of the Men of War belonging to Barbary, arrived before the Arſenal of Galata, where other Men of War remained alſo at an Anchor, and frequently fired their Cannon, with a Chi viva at every Shot, or to the Fortune of the Fortunate Sultan.

On this occaſion, the Barbarouſes brought their uſual Preſents, as accuſtomary to the Sultan, and deſigned to remain in the Port until the Departure of the Fleet prepared againſt the Venetians, conſiſting of 23 Men of Mar, ſhould be in a readineſs to Sail; And thus the Sultan being reſolved to carry on the War both by Sea and Land, did neither reſt Day nor Night, but buſied himſelf in the proving of his Cannon, and making his Warlike Preparations with diligence, was ſo pleaſing to the People, that never was any Sultan ſo acceptable to the Soldiery, as was this Muſtapha, and the

1697. more highly was he eſteemed, in regard he was a great Lover of Juſtice, which is the Prime Ornament of Emperors, and of the higheſt Monarchs: But notwithſtanding all the Care of this Grand Seignior, and the Preparations he made for the War of the following Year, yet his Force neither by Sea nor Land, did amount unto the Strength of that of the preceding Year; by reaſon the Rebels in Aſia becoming more powerful, a Proclamation was iſſued forth, That none ſhould Tranſport themſelves out of Aſia into Europe, on Penalty of having their Houſes demoliſhed, and their Poſſeſſions of Timar and Ziamet to be all Ruined and Deſtroyed, with all the Lands they held of the Sultan. With which Menaces the Rebels, who were Soldiers, were ſo incenſed, that ſuch as they took for Priſoners, they did not Kill, but what was worſe, they cut off their Noſes and Ears, and in that Condition they ſent them to the Port, that therewith they might make a report of their Strength and Power.

Farther, there was a Report, That theſe Rebels (as formerly it had been done) demanded the Life of the Valide Soltana, which is the Queen Mother, and whereof there have been two Examples in former Times, and of one Mulcbi Kadun, a great Favourite, whom they cut in Pieces, by reaſon that they would not endure the Government nor Counſel of Women; ſuffering howſoever the Queen Mother to live, becauſe ſhe did not make Intrigues in the Affairs of State: Of which the Aſian Soldiers being put in mind, and alſo the Europeans of their Tumults, let us expect to ſee the Iſſue of theſe Tragedies.

The Tumults in Aſia gave great Diſquiets to the Affairs of the Turks in Europe, and retarded all things, or put them backward, and all in expectation of Succours from the Levant, but none coming, the Sultan reſolved howſoever to begin his March, and to that end appointed the Days thereof, the ſeveral Camps, and the Days of their Movements, it being determined to remain nine Days under the City of Philippapolis, and on the 4th of July to paſs Sophia, and to make ſeven Days March thereof, where having fixed their Tents for ſome Days, then to proceed for Niſſa, and there alſo to halt for ſome Days; all which was done with ſuch ſlowneſs, as might give time to the Aſian Troops to overtake the main Body of the Army; the which not appearing, the Sultan received divers Letters from the Paſha of Boſnia, begging with great Inſtances that he might have Relief and Succours ſent to him, whereby to raiſe the Siege of Bihatz, which the Imperialiſts had cloſely begirt on all ſides: Whereupon the Sultan diſpatched away thoſe few Paſha's which he had with him, and all the Forces near Belgrade, and alſo all the Arnauts, and all for the Succours and Relief of Bihatz. 1697.

The Turks found themſelves much more Weak than they had been the Year before, and no appearance of Recruits from Aſia, nor any hopes of quieting the Troubles in thoſe Countries, whereupon the Grand Seignior, finding himſelf greatly Diſtreſſed, he very urgently ſent his Imperial Commands from his Camp before Philippopolis, to thoſe Paſha's who were appointed to attend and watch the Motion of thoſe Rebels, commanding them, that (laying aſide all Excuſes, they ſhould in the Divell's Name, leave thoſe Rebels to their own Imaginations, and ſend him five of thoſe Paſha's with 300 Horſe a piece, in the lieu of thoſe which he formerly diſpatched for thoſe Parts; namely, the Paſha of Damaſcus, call'd Muſtapha Paſha, who had been the late Vizier; the Paſha of Aleppo, Oſman; the Paſha of Sebaſte, Uſuf Paſha; the Paſha of Diarbekir, Muſtapha Paſha; and the Paſha of Adana, call'd Fuſli Paſha; but when theſe might be expected from ſo long a Journey, was very uncertain; ſo that the Turks themſelves were very doubtful of the Event and Succeſſes of this Year; for that all the Power which the Turks could make up, could not amount unto above 40000 Men, with Horſe and Foot.

Things remaining in this poſture, it was the Opinion of moſt People, That the Sultan would not go this Year to the War, but only in appearance, and that he would only be upon the Defenſive, avoiding all Fights and Encounters in the Field. And as to the Moſcovites, the Reports were various, and full of uncertainty.

All this time the Sultan remained at Sophia, chearful, and much pleaſed to underſtand that the Polanders had declared the Prince of Conti for their King, which could not but produce a Peace with that Kingdom, and an Union with that Crown; which tho' not true, yet it gave the Turks hopes of an Addition of 30000 Coruzzi unto their Forces againſt the Germans; who as they did aſſault Tokay the laſt Year with good Succeſs, ſo they were full of hopes to do the like for this alſo, with the Poſſeſſion of ſeveral other Caſtles and Fortreſſes: But then it was thought neceſſary that Tekely ſhould be ſent to them with Title of King of Hungary; which when the Sultan underſtood, with the good Tydings, That Bihatz did bravely defend it ſelf, with Aſſurances of conſerving the ſame againſt all Enemies, it was eſteemed News of ſuch Importance, that the Grand Seignior gave Commands to the Grand Vizier, to Write the News into all Parts, and particularly unto Tekely, That the Grand Seignior had declared him King of Hungary, for which the Sultan had ſent him a Commiſſion, with a Letter, the Superſcription of which was, Orla Maggiar Croli, which ſignifies in the Hungarian Language, To the King of Hungary: To which were added alſo ſome Purſes of Money for defraying the Charges of his Journey, and adorning his Equipage.

Tekely's Afflictions.

This Command came very unfortunately at this time for Tekely, who was then grievouſly afflicted with the Gout, and preparing, for Recovery of his Health, to paſs over to the Baths, and Medicinal Waters of Pruſia, or Bruſcia, which fall from that Mountain, which was anciently called, Mount Olympus: But what was worſe, the Chiauſes came furiouſly upon him at Pruſia, and without Compaſſion, Complement, or good Manners, threw him into a Carr like a Log to make him a King, without any Reſpect, which was moſt miſerable for him; for he had not only the Gout, but had a Paralytical Diſtemper upon him, ſo as that he was ſeized with a Palſie in his Head, Neck and Arms: And in this manner he was carried Day and Night in a Waggon, until he came unto the ſight of the Sultan.

All this time the Sultan remained at Sophia, whilſt the Army, or greateſt part thereof, marched towards Belgrade, and ſome into Boſnia; and having received ſome Advices out of Aſia, That the Rebels of that Country, were inclinable to a Submiſſion, and made ſome Evidences as if they intended to return to their Duty and Obedience: The Sultan became very much pleaſed, and put himſelf that time into an excellent Humour, and thereupon was induced to diſpatch ſeveral Aga's into Anatolia, with Letters written under his own Hand, in an Humble and Careſſing Style, not uſual for any Sultan before that time to Write, Swearing,

In the firſt place, To grant Pardon to all, and a general Amneſty to ſuch, as ſhould return to their Duty of Obedience.

Secondly he ſwore, That he would do Juſtice to all in their Juſt Demands and Pretenſions.

Thirdly, That he would give every Man ſatisfaction.

Fourthly, That he would damniſie no Man either in his Goods, or Eſtate, or Life; but on the contrary reward every Man according to his Deſerts, provided that they became Obedient, and Deſerted the Party of the Malecontented Beys, or Paſha's, againſt whom are ſo many Examples of God's Vengeance and Juſtice: Of which he adviſed them well to conſider before they entered into a March, which would conduct them to his Terrible and Affrighting Preſence; which if they did not accept and do, he Swore, That he would make up a Peace with the Chriſtians, and March in Perſon into Anatolia, there to take Vengeance upon them for their Offences, and extirpate the whole Race of thoſe who have taken up Arms againſt the Muſſulman Cauſe; for which, by the Laws of the Alcoran, they are to Die, and without Mercy to ſuffer Death.

This News being carried to the hearing of the Male-contents, about 10000 of them Deſerted the Cauſe, and proceeded to paſs over from Anatolia into Europe, and without any delay took the neareſt way to reach and overtake the Army of the Sultan; to haſten which, the Grand Seignior wrote Commands to the Chimacam, and Boſtangibaſhi, to prepare Quarters for them in the Imperial Gardens and Houſes as they paſſed, and that they ſhould in all their Marches, want nothing of Refreſhments, nor thoſe who are unprovided want Arms, or any other thing neceſſary for the War; amongſt which there were 3000 Boſtangees fitted out for the War, from the Grand Seignior's Seraglio: And ſuch Rigorous Courſes were ſpread over all the Countries of the Leſſer Aſia, that thoſe Laws and Commands of the Sultan being put into execution, it was believed impoſſible for any Embroils, or Seditions, for ever after to ariſe in the Leſſer Aſia, tho' they could not but be ſometimes apprehenſive of Troubles from Perſia; for ſince the time that this King was Crowned, he was always eſteemed a Troubleſome and a Dangerous Enemy to the Turks; for tho' he was not wanting in his Courtſhips, and Embaſſies to the Ottoman Court, as we have ſeen, yet he was ſtill encouraging the Georgians, and the Perſians in the Parts of Baſora, to be troubleſome to the Turks.

August.

The Sultan ſtill remained at Sophia, where having Advices from the Frontiers, he diſpatched away a Capugibaſhee to his Mother the Valide Soltana, giving her to underſtand, That his Forces had fallen upon a Body of Germans, which he had routed;

1697. ed; and taken the ſtrong Fortreſs of Titul, in which he had put all the Garriſon to the Sword; and did not doubt, but ſpeedily to enter into Tranſylvania; from whence he promiſed to ſend his Mother a Preſent of ſome fine Young Ladies to attend, and wait upon her, and to be conducted by ſome of thoſe Black Eunuchs, which were attending at that time upon his Perſon.

After ſuch Vapours and Boaſtings as theſe, which the Sultan expreſſed to his Mother, it was not judged to be longer Honourable for the Grand Seignior to remain at Sophia, a place ſo far diſtant from the Ottoman Camp in Hungary; whereupon marching with the Main Body of his Army, ſlowly, and in good Order, Meſſengers were ſent unto Sarchan Paſha, then at Belgrade, who was then the General, and eſteemed an excellent Soldier, and a Couragious Man, and well acquainted with the Countries about thoſe Confines, to haſten his March to meet the German Army: And ſo alſo the Sultan followed, and arrived in good time to joyn the Main Body of the Front about Titul. In the Relation of which Battel, there were two Accounts ſent from Conſtantinople; one of the 29th of October, and another of the 5th of November.

The Battle of the Tibiſcus.

Such as were on this ſide of the Tibiſcus, and ſaw the Battel, report, That the Rout conſiſted only of ſuch, as with great difficulty paſſed the Tibiſcus by their Swimming, and they report, That the Turks could never imagine, that it was poſſible for the Imperialiſts ſo ſoon to Attack them, as that Day they did; much leſs that it was poſſible for the Grand Vizier to paſs his Cannon, Ammunition, Proviſions, with all the Militia of Janiſaries over that Bridge, and thence to proceed to Segedin, and ſo into Tranſylvania, and into the Upper Hungary.

In the mean time the Imperialiſts kept on their March to meet the Turks, and having prepared their Trenches, they fortified themſelves therein, which cauſed the Grand Vizier to aſſemble all his Paſha's, which were to the Number of 15, leaving the Sultan on the other ſide of the Water, with a Body of Spahee's, and Siliſhars, which are a ſort of Spahees belonging to the Court, together with the Solakbaſſees, who are a ſort of Pages alſo belonging to the Court; but the Taraklee Spahees, who are Timars and Zaims, followed the Paſha of their own Province and Country; of which making an Account of their Numbers, they calculated them to amount unto 25000, all Expert Men, who managed their Arms to a Miracle, but were in this Battle either Killed, or Drowned. 1697.

The Arnauts obſerving the German Army to be marching to Attack them, were the firſt who endeavoured to paſs the Bridge, and to put themſelves to Flight:

The Janiſaries alſo had the like Intentions to do the ſame, ſaying, That they had been Abandoned and Deſerted by the Spahees: And as they approached near to the Bridge, the Grand Vizier obſerving a Diſpoſition in the Arnauts to paſs the Bridge, and fly, he aſſembled a Body of his own Aga's together, intending therewith to hinder and prevent the Flight, which was done by killing a great Number of them.

The Arnauts finding themſelves ſo ill Treated, they put themſelves into a Mutiny, or rather into a Rebellion againſt the Grand Vizier, and killed him: After which ſome Thouſands of the Spahee's placing themſelves on the other ſide of the Bridge, with their Swords drawn in their Hands, they defended the Bridge, and ſuffered none to paſs over it.

By this time the Imperialiſts having put themſelves into good Order of Battel, furiouſly Attacked the Turks on all ſides: At the firſt Charge the Turks made ſome Reſiſtance, but at the ſecond they began to give way; and obſerving the great Deſtruction, and Slaughter, that the Fire and Sword made, being terrified therewith, they reſolved to caſt and precipitate themſelves into the River, where the greateſt part of them periſhed; all which, as was ſaid, happened in the ſpace of two or three Hours; where could never be greater Confuſion, nor greater Effuſion of Blood of their own Soldiery, of which the Chief Commanders were Slain without Mercy, or any Quarter, and ſuch a Multitude of Turks, and Chief Paſha's are ſaid to have periſhed upon the Spot, that during the whole War, the like Slaughter never happened as this: For according to the Report of thoſe, who were not far from the Preſence of the Sultan, during all the time of the Battle, they agree, That according to an Account and Liſt of the Slain, there never happened ſo Great, and ſo Terrible a Deſtruction as this to the Ottoman Army, which more unhappily fell upon the Principal Commanders, than upon the Common Soldiers, which they eſteem to be a juſt Judgment of God upon them; for that no leſs than 15 Paſha's were killed in this Engagement; five of which had been Beglerbeys, or Viziers of the Bench, beſides the Supream Vizier.

And ſuch a Slaughter, or Deſtruction as this, was never known to have happened, 1697. for never in the Memory of Man, or any Age, was it ever known, that five Viziers had ever fallen in one Battle; amongſt which was the Supream Vizier, Giafer Paſha, another Paſha, the Aga of the Janiſaries, a Paſha and Vizier; Miſſir Oglü a Vizier, Faſli Paſha a Vizier, and the reſt of them were all Paſha's of Provinces and Governments.

There were 74 Captains, with their Officers and Soldiers of their ſeveral Chambers, all ſlain: In every Chamber they account 100 Janiſaries, of which there may be in ſome Chambers, 10 or 20 Supernumeraries; ſo that it may be the general Opinion, That above 8000 Janiſaries were ſlain, and thoſe of the braveſt and beſt Soldiers of all the Turkiſh Militia, of which the Sultan was ſo ſenſible, that he declared, He was not ſo much troubled for the Number, as for the Quality of ſuch Brave and Experienced Soldiers, who had ſo often, and in ſo many Engagements Worſted and Overthrown the Germans.

Beſides theſe, were killed in this Battle, the Kahya-Bey, or Lieutenant General of the Janiſaries, with his 600 Braves, which are always attending upon his Perſon, having ſo many in that Company, or Regiment, being the firſt Oda, or Chamber of the Janiſaries; for indeed the Kahya-Bey is always more Eſteemed, Obeyed, and Feared, than the Janiſar-Aga himſelf.

Amongſt the four other Generals of the Militia of the Janiſaries, the Zargagi-bashee, who was the Major-General of the Janiſaries, was ſlain; of the other three were ordained one againſt the Muſcovites, and the other two againſt the Venetians by Sea and by Land: And beſides the 74 Captains, as many Beiracters, or Enſigns, were alſo ſlain.

And beſides theſe 2500 Segmens of Boſnia, being divided into ſeveral Diviſions of the Great Vizier, and divers other Paſha's, with all the Gebegees, who are Armourers, together with their Captains, and General; as alſo the Gunners and Topegibashees, or Maſters of the Ordnance, which are divided into two ſeveral Orders of Militia.

The gaining of this Battle was of that high Concernment, and the Conſequences thereof ſo conſiderable, that from thence the Peace following was derived; ſo that we may believe all the World to be intereſted therein, and to be the Subject of the Speculation of the greateſt Monarchs of this World.

An Inſtance whereof we have in the following Letter, Written by the Emperor himſelf, and with his own Hand, in Latin, to King William of England, in this Style. 1697.

The Emperor of Germany's Letter, to King William of England.

Engliſhed thus.

IT is within ſome few Hours, that the Poſt is arrived from Hungary, bringing News, That our Army under the Command and Conduct of Eugenius Prince of Savoy; did not only on the 10*th of this inſtant Month, Valiantly Attack the* Ottoman Camp fortified upon the Banks of Tibiſcus, or Theyſſe, with a treble Ditch, and with a Force of Thirty Thouſand Men therein, but aſſiſted by the Gracious Favour of Almighty God, moſt happily ſubdued them, killing Ten Thouſand of them upon the Place; amongſt which, were the Supream Vizier, and Aga of the Janiſaries, and the reſt, which the narrowneſs of the Bridge could not contain, threw and precipitated themſelves into the River, where the greateſt part of them were Drowned; with Seventy two Pieces of their Cannon, with ſome Thouſands of Waggons laden with Proviſions, which all fell into our Hands; and all which was done on our ſides with the loſs only of 500 Men, and about as many Wounded.

After

After this Battle was ended, all was in great Confuſion amongſt the Turks, and every one ſhifted as well as he could to eſcape.

The Grand Seignior himſelf poſted to Temeſwaer, from whence he diſpatched a Black Eunuch to his Mother, with the unhappy News of the late ill Succeſs, and the Particulars of it, to avoid falſe Reports, which upon this Occaſion might be apt to be ſpread abroad of the Death of himſelf; and other Siniſter Rumours more fatal to the Empire than ever was known afore times, and might terrifie the Valide Soltana; who by the News of the Life of her Son, might take Heart, and receive Comfort, and prevent the Mutinies amongſt the Soldiery and People, who were too ready upon ſuch an Evil Report, to Enthrone the Brother of Sultan Achmet, the laſt Brother of the three lately Deceaſed: But it being known that Sultan Muſtapha was certainly Alive, all was pacified; which being of ſo great Importance, the Grand Seignior ſent a Letter, as I ſaid, to his Mother, by a Black Eunuch, by way of Nicopolis, who was a Magriplee, or an Abyſſine, or Ethiopian, well beloved by the Queen, and greatly Confided in by her. The Relation on the ſide of the Turks, was repreſented as favourably as the thing would bear; in which he declared, That there had been a very great Battle near a River, in which his Perſon was not preſent, and ſo was ſafe; but his Vizier being Engaged againſt an Army of 100000 Men, was Slain, together with the greateſt Number of Janiſaries, and Foot Soldiers, and thoſe of the Principal Officers; the which Relation he alſo diſpatched by the ſecond Maſter of the Horſe, with a Coſtan to Huſſaein Paſha, declaring him to be Grand Vizier, which happened well for the Chriſtians; for he was a Man always inclined to a Peace, and no great Friend to the French; he was a great Lover of Wine, which mollified the Rigorous Temper of a Turk, and made him more Jocund and Eaſie than commonly the Water-Drinkers amongſt the Turks profeſs to be; at which News the Chriſtians immediately conceived an abundance of Joy, not doubting but that a Peace would immediately enſue, as it did accordingly; for all People were grown weary of ſo long a War, which had now continued for about twenty Years, with very Unfortunate Succeſſes to the Turks both by Sea and Land.

Inclinations of the Turks towards a Peace.

After all which the Grand Seignior returned with what ſpeed he could to his Seraglio at Adrianople, where all things had put on a Countenance of Melancholy and Sadneſs.

1697.

In the mean time the Chriſtians reſolving to proſecute and follow their Blow, whilſt the Turks with Fear and Diſorder were flying homeward, the Prince Eugenius of Savoy, ſpent the whole Day on the 12th of October in paſſing the Imperial Army over the Save; but the River being narrow, and the Weather good and favourable, they arrived early in the Camp on the other ſide:

October.

And next Morning of the 13th, they began their March towards Boſnia, which was difficult to paſs, by reaſon of the Mountains, Woods, and Rocks in the way, which was rude, and unbeaten.

Upon the 14th of this Month, the Body of the Army Encamped about Kottor, where the March had been worſe, and more difficult, and longer by an Hour than the Day before; and tho' Colonel Kyba with his Squadron was marched before, howſoever he proceeded not in his March, becauſe he had News on the way, and chiefly from Bagnaluca, That the Enemy had not the leaſt Intelligence of the Advance of the Imperial Army, ſo that he made a Halt until His Moſt Serene Highneſs was come up to joyn the Body under his Command, that ſo they might hold a Conference, and Council of War together, which they performed ſtanding not to loſe time; and then Colonel Kyba proceeded with his Forces unto Caſtle Doboy, where was a Garriſon of Turks, and was ſituated two or three Hours from the Chriſtian Camp: And here it was thought fit not to go farther this Night, becauſe they concluded, that they were not as yet diſcovered by the Enemy, becauſe they had not heard them ſhoot the Alarm, as their Cuſtom was to do whenſoever they diſcovered any Body of Men approaching towards them; and ſo to keep all things ſtill without any diſcovery, they marched with much ſilence, without Beat of Drum, or Sound of Trumpet: And the very ſame Day the Prince of Savoy arrived in the Camp; where a Council of War being called, it was concluded, That Colonel Kyba ſhould be diſpatched away before, to take Poſſeſſion of ſome Ground near to the Turkiſh Caſtle of Doboy, as was formerly agreed, and there to form his Camp, where he was reinforced with 600 Men: Upon appearance of which, his Orders were, That in caſe the Caſtle did not preſently Surrender, he ſhould march immediately forward, and without loſs of time march into the Country, leaving the laſt 600 Men before the Caſtle to incloſe the Enemy, who ſhould ſoon be reinforced by 200 Men more: And ſo ſhould proceed to the ſecond Caſtle, called Maglay; where finding Oppoſition, he ſhould leave that likewiſe, and ſo proceed forward.

By this time, or towards the Morning of the 15th of this Month, ſome Shooting was heard, which was the firſt Signal of an Alarm: Howſoever they continued to March without beating their Drums, or ſounding their Trumpets; but this Days March was more troubleſome and difficult than the Day before, by reaſon that it was through Hilly and rough Places: Howſoever coming at length to Caſtle Doboy, they Summoned the Place to Surrender, the which being denied at firſt, by the Turks in Garriſon, the Chriſtians laboured all Night, and in that time raiſed a Battery, on which they planted ſix Pieces of Cannon, with two Mortar-pieces.

Caſtle Doboy Surrenders.

The Day following the Cannon beginning to play, the Turks Capitulated, and Surrendered themſelves at Diſcretion and Mercy of the Enemy.

The Garriſon conſiſted of about 80 Men, out of which they made Priſoners of ſuch as appeared to be the moſt Soldier-like Men; as for others, who were Old, and Infirm, with Women, and Children, they gave them liberty to ſhift for themſelves, and go to what Places they pleaſed.

In the Caſtle little Proviſion was found, and few Arms, ſo that Colonel Kyba, according to his Inſtructions from the General, proceeded in his March: And

On the 17th came to the Caſtle Maglay, which upon the firſt Summons Surrendered, on condition only to go out with their Wives and Children, leaving all other things behind them.

On the 18th by Break of Day in the Morning, the Garriſon of Maglay marched out, and Surrendered the Place: About which time nothing more was heard from the Enemy, only that the Kahya, the Son of the Deceaſed Paſha, was Encamped near Oraſſa Viza, and that the Imperial Foragers were annoyed much by the Meroders of the Enemy.

On the 18th they appeared before the Palanca or Paſs called Schebze, wherein were 300 Turks: which upon the Summons demanded a time of Conſideration until the next Day, which the General of the Imperialiſts would not grant them; but advanced with 400 Foot Soldiers, and 300 Dragoons, with the Artillery belonging to them, and mounting 12 Pieces of Cannon againſt the Palanca, in the Night they ſtormed it in two Places: in which Attack having loſt 12 or 15 Men within the Palliſadoes, without any ſtop, they ſtill advanced forward, whilſt Colonel Kyba meeting with 200 Horſe of the Enemy, whoſe Deſign was to caſt themſelves into the Paſs Schebze, but were prevented, being in part killed, and in part taken Priſoners: And having Intelligence, That the Kahya was with a Body of about two or 3000 Men, between Schebze and Branduck, he cauſed Batteries to be raiſed to hinder their ready Paſſages.

On the 19th they marched on through the Orohovizar Valley, being a very troubleſome Paſſage at the firſt Entrance thereinto, not only for the Narrowneſs and Streightneſs of the Road, but alſo becauſe the Enemies on both ſides had cut and ruined the Ways; ſo that about three a Clock in the Afternoon, the laſt Regiments, which were Horſe, entered the Field, and joyned the former Troops, but the Infantry came not thither until it was Night; and as to the Artillery and Baggage, they remained full half an Hours March behind, at a diſtance from the narrow Paſſage, where it remained all the Night guarded by two Regiments of Dragoons, which in the Morning marched in ſafe Conduct, and guarded them in ſafety to the Body of the Army.

The 20th the March was through Narrow and Rocky Paſſages, worſer than the former, or that way which leads to the Caſtle Branduck, which was ſo difficult, that the Imperial Army would have been in a very ill Condition, had the Turks been capable of diſputing vigorouſly the Paſſage with them: But at length having paſſed the moſt rough and difficult Ways of Branduck, which were ſo inconvenient, that the Artillery and Baggage could not be brought after them, but were forced to be lodged under a ſtrong Guard on the Orohovizar Valley, where the Places were fairer and more pleaſant, but the Inhabitants were fled and gone, but had left behind them all ſorts of good Fruits, with ſmall and large Cattle in great Numbers, with ſufficient Herbage and Suſtenance to maintain them.

The 21ſt the Imperial Army arrived near the River Boſna, over which there was a Bridge, but ſo Old and Ruinous, that the Army was not willing to adventure a Paſſage over it, but rather eſteemed it more ſecure for every Dragoon, or Horſeman to take a Man behind him, and therewith to Wade through the River; with this Burden and Equipage they marched over a very high Hill for the ſpace of two Hours, which nevertheleſs was more eaſie to paſs over than the former: So they continued their March again over the Boſna, by the help and convenience of a good ſtrong Bridge, not ruined by the Enemy, and ſo 1697. advanced into the Camp, near the Village Doboy, where Colonel Kyba joyned again with Prince Eugenius, advancing ſtill before the ſame Night towards Sarai, or Seraglio, to obſerve the Place, to which great Numbers of People of that Country were fled for ſecurity: But becauſe that City was not capable to receive ſuch Multitudes of People, great Numbers of them were forced to lodge before the City Gates, ſo as the Priſoners declared, which together with thoſe in the City, would make up a Body of 30000 Men, but they wanted Arms very much: So that tho' the Kahya was then perſonally preſent in the City; October. yet his Power and Authority was weak to diſpoſe Matters into any tolerable State and Condition of Defence.

But the Imperialiſts found this Part very Fair, Fruitful, and well Built; and therefore the Chriſtians and Inhabitants of that Land went to the Imperial Camp to render themſelves up under their Protection.

At the beginning of this March, on the 22d, the Troops found the Ways Narrow, Crooked, and Deep, but afterwards paſſed into a more pleaſant Place, called Viſega, and then repaſſed again the River Boſna, over a Bridge; at the end of which, after an Hours time they Encamped; and by this time Colonel Kyba was come back with his People, who had done ſome Execution againſt the Inhabitants in their March, killing ſome, and making Priſoners of others, which put the City of Seraglio into great Amazement and Confuſion, whilſt ſeveral Parties of the Enemy roved round the adjacent Parts, and took ſeveral Priſoners; at which time a Cornet, with a Trumpeter, were ſent into Seraglio, to Summon the City to ſubmit willingly, or otherwiſe no Quarter ſhould be given to any of them.

The 23d two Parties ſent out the Day before, returned back again very early in the Morning, before the breaking up of the Imperial Army, bringing no News, or Advice from the Enemy: Only the Cornet gave a Relation, That as he was going to Seraglio, for almoſt a Quarter of an Hours time he had met with no Body at all; but afterwards falling in amongſt the Turks, to whom having made a Sign with his Hand, he ſhowed them the Writing he had with him, which were Propoſals for the Surrender of the City; but that he happened to ſee the Trumpeter killed before his own Eyes, and with much difficulty, with divers Wounds eſcaped himſelf: And farther reported, That all the Inhabitants in great haſte went out of Seraglio.

After this the Army in a Body marched to the City, which the Turks had quitted, and abandoned, leaving none remaining but Chriſtians and Jews, from whom they took all they could find, but nothing of great Value, in regard the Turks had not only diſpoſed of the beſt of their own Goods, but likewiſe before their Flight had Plundered the Houſes of the Chriſtians, and committed the Guard of the Caſtle to a Garriſon of 150 Men; and the ſame Day towards Evening a Fire broke out in the City, of which no care being taken to Extinguiſh it, it was totally burnt and conſumed. The Caſtle howſoever was not burnt, for it being built of Stone, required leiſure to demoliſh, which at that time could not be allowed. 1697.

Howſoever ſeveral Parties on the 24th returned from abroad, bringing ſome Priſoners with them, and many poor Chriſtians came likewiſe Voluntarily in, with Reſolution to paſs the Save, upon the Return of the Imperial Army; which happened to be on the 25th and 26th, but Colonel Kyba ſtaid, (as he uſually did) ſome time behind to burn and deſtroy every thing that remained, as yet unconſumed.

And on the 27th they marched on, until they came to the Camp, which was before Seniza.

And on the 28th they entered into bad Defiles, and at length into the Valley of Orobovitz, where the Artillery and Waggons joyned again with the Army.

The 29th they Encamped near Schebze, where Advices were brought to the Generals in what manner the Enemy was gathered into a Body near Belgrade, conſiſting of ſeveral Thouſands of Men.

Laſtly, The Imperialiſts returned again over the Save, carrying with them a great quantity of Turkiſh Cloth, with many Turkiſh Women, and Goods belonging to the ſaved Chriſtians, with a great quantity of ſmall and great Cattle.

After the Return of the Chriſtian Army under the Command of Prince Eugenius of Savoy, from the Fortunate Succeſſes in Boſnia, the Troops were commanded on the 30th of October, to march from Marga, towards Caranzebes; from whence, on the very ſame Evening, Lieutenant-Colonel Count of Herberſtein, was Commanded to March before, with his National Militia of Raſcians, joyned with ſome Germans.

And the 31ſt was appointed for a Day of Repoſe, and Reſt for the whole Army; and on that Occaſion ſufficient Proviſions were made both for Horſe and Man.

When on the firſt of November the Body of the Army began to move from Caranzebes, and in grievous Weather, with Rain and Snow, marched all the way ſo far as Soczan: And then about two a Clock in the Afternoon they made a Halt near Gialuk, in the Valley of Caraſſona.

And on the third they pitched near the deſerted Village of Petrovizas.

From whence on the 4th Days March, a Detachment was ſent before to Inveſt the Fort of Vypalancha, where the Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment of Rabutin, Lord of Graſer, with a Body of 500 Horſe, had taken his Poſt, or Poſſeſſion, and ſeated himſelf on the ſide of the Danube about 100 Paces from the River, advancing to the Palliſadoes, and there immediately began to fire upon the Place, and to Entrench with ſo much diligence, that in a ſhort time they had opened the Trenches 200 Paces; and having prepared the ſmall Pieces of Cannon, which they brought with them, and one Mortar-piece, they began therewith to make their Batteries.

The 5th Day in the Morning, they ſet in order their Batteries, and began alſo to throw Bombs into the Palanca, which they found to be much more ſtrong than it was believed at firſt; for that it was encompaſſed with a double Ditch, and treble Rows of Palliſadoes, and a place of Retreat guarded with 400 Men, and well provided of all things; and for the better Security, they had made ſome hundreds of Faggots; and in the mean time the Turks in a great Body ſhowed themſelves upon another Stream of the Danube above, and others at the Foot of the Mountain, near to Rham, together with Saicks, and Frigats on the River. Likewiſe on the other ſide of Belgrade, near Kroska, Semandria, Columbas, Isbeck, and Gradiska, which were all places ſo near, that in 24 Hours time, Succours might be brought from them, at leaſt to hinder, if not totally prevent the Deſigns of the Enemy: For which reaſon, the General, Count Rabutin, reſolved to loſe no time, but forthwith to make an Aſſault upon the Place, and if poſſible, to take it by force, to which end he prepared 500 Germans, and 200 Raſcians to make the Attack upon the Place.

On the 6th with dawning of the Day, appeared on the other ſide of the River, a great number of the Turkiſh Boats, battering with their Cannon, as they had done all the Day before againſt the Chriſtian Camp: And in the mean time, with the Break of Day, the Attack began in two Places at the ſame time; that is, upon the left Hand of the Danube, where the greateſt difficulty was, under the Command of Heer Viart, Sergeant-Major of the Hanover Troops; and then on the right Hand, on the River Ceraſſe, where the Soldiers to paſs the Water, Waded up to the Middle, under the Command of Captain Beaumont, of the Regiment of Rabutin: And to give the greater Inconvenience to the Enemy, they fired their Cannons continually without Intermiſſion, as alſo their Bombs; beſides Small-ſhot from 250 Men out of the Trenches; but in regard that in the Night before certain Recruits were ſent to reinforce the Place, together with a Boat, on Board of which were 100 Men from Columbas, and Isbeck, with new Ammunition, ſo that they met with very much reſiſtance; beſides, they Storm'd without making any Breach, and that in the ſight of 20 or 30 Saicks and Frigats, which appeared above and below the Place; inſomuch as things looked more doubtful and hazardous, than with any promiſing Countenance of Succeſs. Howſoever General de Rabutin and Sergeant-General Count de Leiningen applyed all poſſible care and Induſtry to hinder and prevent the Enemies Succours from coming upon them, by which the Soldiers at the appearance, and ſo near an approach of their Enemies, again reaſſumed new Courage; and tho' they were at firſt well enough animated, when they obſerved the Turks come upon them, with their Cries of Allah, Allah, which they uſually make upon their Charge, and that 400 of their Horſe remained for a Reſerve, the Vigour and Spirit was renewed on all ſides, and then with Axes and Hatchets they cutting down the Palliſadoes, gained ſo much Ground, that all things laid open before them: So that after a doubtful Conflict of about an Hour and a half, the Place was overcome, and taken by the Valour of the Chriſtians; ſo that not only the Commander in Chief Hay Beigh, but all the Garriſon, with the Inhabitants, without any Exception, were Killed, or droven into the Danube. All which was done and acted in a very ſhort time, which was well that it ſo happened; for had it admitted of any farther delay, the Chriſtians would have encountred many more Difficulties, for that the Turks were bringing over many Succours, which would have cauſed very dangerous Diverſions. When on the contrary, the Turks loſt 800 Perſons, and the Chriſtians only 10, which was almoſt a Miracle to conſider.

1697. General Rabutin was always preſent on the right Hand, during the Aſſault, and after it, the better to Encourage the Soldiers, he alighted from his Horſe, and having Commended and Praiſed every one publickly in his Place according to his Deſerts, and eſpecially the Sergeant-General Count of Leiningen, who had the left Wing under his Conduct, and had done and acted as much as could be expected on ſuch an Occaſion; and indeed both he and Sergeant-Major de Viart, ſhowed as much Bravery, Conduct, and Military Experience as could be deſired of the greateſt Captains in the World.

But now in regard this Paſs of Vypalancha was too far within the Territory of the Enemy, to be any long time maintained; for that ſhould the Garriſon be German, or Raſcian, it would be too much expoſed, without any poſſibility of Relief, the General Rabutin reſolved to Slight and Demoliſh the Place, and accordingly he gave all up to the Flames. 1697.

And on the ſeventh Day, ſo ſoon as the Cannon were carried away, it was put into execution, which was ſoon effected by the great Numbers of Country-men and Peaſants employed upon that Work; and the ſame Morning the Camp was removed nearer to the Palancha.

16 Enſigns expoſed round the Town.
63 Turkiſh Priſoners, and 32 Women.
11 Pieces of Cannon of Copper, carrying from two to eight Pound Ball.
200 Granadoes for the Hand, ſome Powder, and ſome few other Warlike Arms.
About 200 Buſhels of Grain, with ſome Flour of Wheat.
Beſides which, all other things were given up to the Plunder of the Soldiers.
Beſides which, there were above 1000 Pieces of Rock-Salt, which were brought from Valachia.

These Succeſſes which the Chriſtians had gained over the Turks in all Places, through the whole Courſe of this Year 1697, put them into a Kind of Deſpair of being any more Victorious, but rather to yield to the Hand of God, and to fix a Period to the Limits of their Empire, which they believed, by the Providence of God, was no farther to be extended.

Theſe Thoughts put all the Great Men, and Governors of the Ottoman Empire into ſuch a Melancholy, that contrary to their uſual Humour of Pride, and Vain Imaginations of Riches, and Enlargement of Empire, as if the Ottoman Arms were never to be weakened, or brought low; all the Powerful and Warlike Men, together with the Sultan, concluded, That after ſuch a Series of Misfortunes, both by Sea and Land, God frowned on their Enterpriſes, and would no longer favour their Martial Proceedings: And therefore, that until

1697. ſuch time as God's Anger againſt them was appeaſed, there was no ſafety but in a Happy Peace, to be Negotiated by the only true Allies of the Ottoman Empire; namely, the Great King William of Great Britain, and the Moſt Potent Lords, the States General of the Low-Countries, or United Provinces; for whom at that time, namely, for the firſt the Lord Paget was then Ambaſſador at the Port; and for the latter was the Heer Colyer, both of them Perſons qualified by their Offices, and long Experiences in the Turkiſh Affairs, to become Mediators and Miniſters for their Powerful and Puiſſant Maſters, in Treating a Peace of the greateſt Importance of any that hath happened in this, or in the preceeding Age; unleſs it be the General Peace, in which all Chriſtendom was ſo nearly concerned.

What farther moved the Turks to deſire and promote this Peace, was their Ill Succeſſes at Baſſora, where that Paſha, whom we have formerly mentioned, had carried for ſome time all before him; and tho' the Perſians had often promiſed their Aſſiſtance to the Turks, for Suppreſſion of that Rebellion, yet nothing was acted by them in reality, until the Grand Seignior, and the whole Government became ſenſible, that nothing was to be expected of good either by War, or Peace, but by their own Negotiations; in purſuance of which the Mediation ſo often offered, was at length accepted, and put into execution at the beginning of the Year 1698.

1698. January. THIS Year was happily begun with a Reſolution on all ſides to make the Peace: Howſoever at the beginning thereof things looked very frowningly, without that gentle Proſpect, which is commonly the Fore-runner of a Peace: For at the beginning of this Month, three Aga's were diſpatched from Adrianople, to the Chimacam of Conſtantinople, with Orders to facilitate their Paſſage into Aſia, by the moſt Expedite Poſts that could be formed; howſoever in their Paſſage they entered into Conferences with the Chief Miniſters at Conſtantinople, giving them to underſtand, That they had Orders to Summon the Tartar Han, to appear in Conference at Adrianople, with the Sultan, Mufti, and Grand Vizier, whoſe Opinions and Reſolutions were at firſt to continue the War; which they declared themſelves very able to do; for tho' it was true, that they had loſt the beſt part and the moſt flouriſhing of their Janiſaries, and Infantry, yet their Cavalry was almoſt entire, and able to Engage the Enemy with an Advantage; and were able to form a better Army this, than the laſt Year. 1698.

The Tartar Han declared, That he did not fear the Muſcovites ſo much as he did the Coſſacks, and the Poles, but of them they are in no great Apprehenſions neither; for that the French Ambaſſador had promiſed and aſſured them, That the Prince of Conti ſhould ſo diſturb the Affairs of Poland, that no danger needed to be feared from that People.

And now to ſtrengthen theſe Propoſals, the Sultan decreed, That new Contributions ſhould be required over all Aſia, and Men of great Authority were ſent with Bands and Troops of Segmen, and other Militia, to raiſe the Money by force and power.

Orders were alſo ſent to the Chimacam of Conſtantinople, to put the Forges of Conſtantinople at work for founding great quantities of Cannon.

And that the Maritime Affairs might not be neglected, Mezzo Morto was continued in the Office of Captain-Paſha, or Admiral, with Orders, and Inſtructions to fight the Venetians.

Thus all things looked as if nothing had been intended beſides a War. Howſoever the Great God of Hoſts, in whoſe Hands remains the Balance of Peace and War, having deſigned otherwiſe, and at length to give repoſe, and reſt after ſo long Wars, to the Nations of the Earth, was pleaſed in his Divine Providence to direct a Conference in the Month of May, between the Great Vizier, the Tartar Han, and the Mufti, at Adrianople, who having conſidered of the many Difficulties under which the Mahometan Religion, and the Ottoman Empire laboured, gave it as their Opinions to the Sultan, that there could be no ſafety to either, but in a Peace, for which they produced many Reaſons, but none of greater force than that for this Year, no Aſſiſtance could be expected from Aſia; nor was it poſſible to recruit in one Years time, the loſt Body of the Janiſaries, which is the Nerve of the Ottoman Militia; in which Opinion the Chimacam of Adrianople, called Muſtapha Paſha, who had formerly been Grand Vizier, concurred with the others, and all of them joyning together in the ſame Opinion, made their Applications to the Sultan, giving him to underſtand, That having duly conſidered of this important matter, nothing ſeemed ſo neceſſary as a Peace, which God had now pleaſed in his Goodneſs, for the Comfort and Relief of the Mahometan Cauſe, to offer unto them: The which Declaration and Counſel of theſe Great Men made to the Sultan, took ſo much amongſt the People, that the Report flew like Lightning, and in five Days time was divulged almoſt over all the Empire.

All the Perſons that were preſent at this private Conference, were the Mufti, Han of Tartary, Aga of the Janiſaries, Aga of the Spahees, and Grand Vizier, and the Sultan himſelf.

To make ſome little appearance of unwillingneſs to make a Peace, as if they had been able to continue the War, they ſent away towards Belgrade, ſome Field-pieces of Braſs, which had been lately Caſt, or Founded; and on that Occaſion 15 Chambers of Janiſaries, with their Ciurbagees, or Captains, of which every Chamber conſiſted of 100 Men, but were computed in all to make up 2200 Janiſaries, 200 Zebegees, or Armourers, 70 Gunners, which were commanded by a certain Perſon, called Ali Paſha, who was Brother in Law to the late Grand Vizier: It was reported, That all the Chambers had their full and compleat Numbers, but upon the true Computation, they were found to be much ſhort, and not above 70 in a Chamber; by this kind of Computation, the poor Eſtate of the other Militias of the Ottoman Army being to be judged, made the Propoſition of a Peace to become much more acceptable to all Sorts and Conditions of Men: One Evidence of which, was the readineſs and haſte the Grand Seignior and Vizier ſhowed to be upon their March towards Sophia.

In order to which, it was appointed, That the Aga of the Janiſaries, ſhould on June. the 6th of June begin their March, and that the Sultan ſhould follow two Days afterwards being the 8th; for that already towards the latter end of May, all the Camels, and Horſes, which were provided to carry the Tents and Baggage, were arrived at Adrianople.

In purſuance whereof the Grand Seignior, and Grand Vizier, began their March on the 8th of June, when it was ſuppoſed, That taking Sophia in their way, and making that Place a Quarter of ſome Days Repoſe, there to Celebrate the Feaſt of their little Biram, they might arrive at Belgrade by the 15th of July; when all the Army of the Turks could not amount to more than 40000 Men, tho' they ſhould receive an Addition of 10000 Men from Aſia, which was the greateſt Number of Soldiers that they could expect this Year from thoſe Parts, and hereof many Hundreds failed of making up that Number. Howſoever in regard that the Peace in Hungary, and other Parts with the Chriſtians, was almoſt ſecure and certain, it raiſ'd a Chearfulneſs amongſt the Turks, ſo that they little regarded any Apprehenſions of a War againſt the Perſians, or their Conjunction with Bebek Sulyman, a Bold, Inſolent, Daring Perſon, who lived on the Confines of Perſia, whom the Turks deſired might be ſuppreſſed by the Perſians: But the Perſian Ambaſſador, notwithſtanding the great Treatments and Civilities he had received from the Turks, made ſome Difficulties thereof, ſaying, That it could not be foreſeen, or meaſured, how far ſuch a War as this might go; this Bebek Sulyman being a moſt Peſtilent Fellow, feared as well as beloved, by all the Arabian Princes; ſo that a War with him might cauſe much Blood.

Howſoever the Turks preſſed moſt earneſtly to have this Sulyman ſuppreſſed, alledging, Both the Honour and Safety of the Perſians was concerned: And to Encourage them herein, the Grand Vizier promiſed them the Sultan's Aſſiſtance; for that having now made a Peace with the Emperor, and the other Chriſtians, (as might be preſumed to be) his Hands were at liberty to carry the War into what Parts of the World that he ſhould think fit; which he ſhould not more readily do to any Region, than againſt thoſe who might be troubleſome on the Frontiers of Perſia, and bring Diſturbance to the Ottoman Port.

Such Friendly Diſcourſes as theſe paſſing between the Grand Vizier, and the Perſian Ambaſſador, a Promiſe was farther made unto him, That the Sultan would not deny any thing to the King of Perſia, which might be of ſatisfaction to him; being reſolved to cultivate a moſt ſincere, and laſting Friendſhip with him, according to the Capitulations lately made and agreed between thoſe two Great and Mighty Monarchs.

After which they did Eat, and Feaſted together, with high Expreſſions of Love, and a laſting Friendſhip; in farther Confirmation of which, a Preſent was made to the Ambaſſador of another Horſe, well Equipped with a Rich and Noble Furniture, and then the Teſter Emini, who was deſigned to be Ambaſſador from the Sultan to the King of Perſia, and was preparing for his Journey, was introduced into their Preſence, that an Acquaintance might be begun between them; the which was eaſily effected, conſidering that the Teſter Emini was a Perſon of a good Addreſs, and

Skilful,

1698. Skilful, and Practiſed in the Perſian Language; he was a Refined Perſon, and fit, and proper for ſuch an Embaſſy as this to the Perſian Court, whom the Grand Vizier had Choſen, and Elected for this Employment; for which he was preparing himſelf with fine Horſes of Price, well Equipped with rich Embroidered Saddles, with Arms inlaid with Jewels, and other Gallantries, which might ſerve for Preſents at his Arrival at the Court of Iſpahan, to the Perſian King, ſuch as Quivers, Bows, and Arrows.

Beſides all which kind Treatment, the Grand Seignior himſelf Treated him at his Tents without the City of Adrianople; as alſo did the Chimacam of Conſtantinople at his Palace on the Boſphorus, or Black-Sea.

Thus we may ſee how freely and frankly the Turks Treated the Perſians at this time; for now having ſecured the Peace with the Weſtern Princes in Hungary, who were much more formidable at all times than the Eaſtern Nations: Howſoever, that no Advantages might be taken neither on that ſide, ſtrict Commands and wiſe Inſtructions were ſent to the Beilerbey of Gran Cairo, a Perſon of great Courage, Wiſdom, and Experience, one of the Sultan's Bed-Chamber, to take the Care and Charge of thoſe Eaſtern Kingdoms, giving him alſo the Title of Seraskier, or General, and Beylerbey of Bagdat, or Babylon, with Orders forthwith to form an Army with the People of the Country, and therewith to Attack Baſſora, and drive out from thence the Rebellious Paſha, and ſettle in his Place another Paſha Commiſſionated by the Port to ſucceed in his Employment, with a Hatteſheriff from the Sultan: But principally above all things it was recommended to him, to hinder and prevent all Incurſions of Rebel Sulyman upon the Perſians, who being good Friends to the Sultan, he could not permit, or ſuffer, that they ſhould receive any Affront, or Injury, from ſuch as go under the Denomination of Subjects to the Port.

But theſe Eaſtern Countries ſo far diſtant as Perſia, were not now the care of the Turks, whoſe Thoughts were wholly taken up in what manner they might finiſh the War with the Chriſtians, which were divers; as with the Emperor, the Venetians, the Old and Irreconcileable Enemies to the Port; alſo with the Polanders, and Moſcovites, the latter of which were not much known to the World, either for Friends, or Foes, tho' they began now under the preſent Czar by the taking of Aſac, and ſome other Actions, to make themſelves known to the Turks, and other Nations of the World. 1698.

It being now reſolved on all ſides to make the Peace, the Mediators who were to manage the Treaty, were nominated and appointed, and the moſt proper Perſons eſteemed to be the Ambaſſadors from England, and Holland, both of which having never been Engaged in the War on any of the ſides, but had always been true and ancient Friends to the Port, the Turks could have no Objections to alledge againſt either, nor had the Chriſtian Princes any cauſe to ſuſpect the Faith and Friendſhip of two ſuch Ambaſſadors, whoſe Offices and Perſons were acceptable to the Turks, and not diſpleaſing to the Chriſtians.

The Names of theſe Ambaſſadors deſigned to this ſo Neceſſary and Moſt Honourable Employment, were the Lord Paget, Ambaſſador for William King of Great-Britain; and the Heer Colyer, Ambaſſador for the Lords the States of the United Provinces.

All Matters being now ripe for Action, and a willing mind for Execution, the Turks moved with their Camp on the 11th of June 1698. commanded by the Grand Vizier, (the Grand Seignior ſtill remaining behind in his Tent) and with them alſo moved the two Ambaſſadors with their Equipages: And to put every thing into a good poſture, and a way of Diſpatch, the Lord Ambaſſador's Secretary was diſpatched away a ſecond time, as he had been the firſt on the 10th of May for Vienna, from whence he returned on the 5th of July to Sophia; where on the ſame Day he there met with the Lord Ambaſſador Paget, to whom he Communicated the good News of the Happy Inclinations of the Emperor and that Court towards the Peace: But that no delay ſhould be made therein, the ſame Secretary was again diſpatched away, to haſten the Emperor's Ambaſſadors to the Place appointed, and agreed upon for the Treaty, and to procure, and bring with him Paſſes, and ſafe Conducts for the Turkiſh Plenipotentiaries, who were the Reis Effendi, Chief Chancellor, or Secretary; and Maurocordato, who was the principal and firſt Interpreter to the Grand Seignior.

Theſe two Perſons, together with the Lord Paget, and the Dutch Ambaſſador, ſet out from Sophia before the Camp, on the 15th of July, and on the 24th they had paſſed 10 Hours beyond Niſſa, and on the 31ſt they arrived happily at Belgrade.

The Ambaſſadors remained at this place for the ſpace of two Months; that is, of Auguſt and September, the which paſſed

ſoon

1698. ſoon away, in regard that the Expectations of Peace had ſo filled Mens Hearts, that nothing was heard in all Places but the Voices of Peace and Joy in all their Quarters.

At length the Month of October being entered, the Proclamation of Neutrality was firſt publiſhed at Peter Waradin, to the great Pleaſure and Satisfaction of all People, both Chriſtians and Turks, and afterwards at Belgrade.

On the $\frac{9}{19}$th of October, the Lord Paget, and the Dutch Ambaſſador left their Camp near the City, raiſed on an Eminence, where was a good Air, and a good Proſpect over the Countries round about; and upon the ſame Day early in the Morning they paſſed the Save, a River which runs from Boſnia, and falls into the Danube at Belgrade, where it loſes its Name.

In paſſing this River this Order was obſerved.

Firſt went an Allai-Bey, or the Marſhal of the Show, with about 50 Horſe.

Then 60 Chiauſes on Horſeback.

A Guard of Janiſaries, being about 330 Men, all on Foot.

An Aga belonging to the Ambaſſadors, with his own Servants, and ſix Domeſtick Janiſaries.

After which followed two Flags, one with the Engliſh Coat of Arms, and the other was a large Red Croſs in a White Field.

Then followed the Engliſh Ambaſſador's 6 led Horſes covered with very rich Furniture, followed by the Gentleman of the Horſe to my Lord Ambaſſador, attended by a Giovane di Lingua, or a young Druggerman, or Interpreter.

Then came up the two Interpreters attending His Excellency the Lord Ambaſſador, on each ſide of his Horſe, and they attended with two Heydukes in their own Country Habit; and on both ſides 10 Chiobadars, or Servants, who carry the Cloaks, or Veſts of the Great Men, in White Veſts, with their Carbines on their Shoulders.

The Brother to the Lord Ambaſſador road afterwards with ſix Chiobadars.

Then followed the Secretary, and Doctor, with two Engliſh Gentlemen; one from Aleppo, and the other from Tripoli.

Alſo ſix Pages with the Lord Ambaſſador's Coach, with a Turkiſh one, which went before the Common Servants, who marched all on Horſeback, two and two.

At their Paſſage over the Bridge of the Save, which was lined with Janiſaries, three 1698. Guns were fired from the Caſtle; and the Gallies, Saicks, and the Frigats as they paſſed fired each a Gun.

About half the way to Semblin, the Chiaus, and others, whom the Vizier had ſent along with them, made a Halt, and having wiſhed a good Journey to thoſe whom they conducted, returned back.

About an Hour after theſe Matters had paſſed, the Dutch Ambaſſador followed, and was uſed with the ſame Civility as thoſe preceding.

The Emperor's Ambaſſadors, becauſe they ſent Paſſports to the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors Signed by the Emperor's Hand, deſired to have others Signed by the Sultan: But becauſe it was conſidered that this exchange of Paſſports would take up a great deal of time, the Mediators found out, and agreed upon this Expedient, That the Proclamation being made in both the Emperors Names, no Paſſports ſhould be delivered, either from the Germans to the Turks, or from the Turks to the Germans; but that a Pleni-power ſhould be given to the Midiators to grant Paſſports to People, who were going up and down within the Limits of Neutrality agreed on both ſides: So the German Ambaſſadors reſolved to go to Carlowitz within three Days time, tho' their Wooden Houſes were not arrived as yet.

The Mediators alſo agreed upon the ſame, and to place themſelves ſo, that their Doors might be over againſt each other at a good diſtance, whereby the Turks remained wholly on the Belgrade ſide, and the Germans towards Peter Waradin.

The $\frac{11}{21}$ſt the Venetian Ambaſſador arrived at Futack, but the Muſcovite Ambaſſador, after their unthinking manner, came directly the ſame Day to Peter Waradin, without giving the Governour Notice of his coming; by which Neglect of the Moſcovite, no Salutes were paſſed on him, of which he complained to the Governour; but that was eaſily anſwered, by ſaying, That he knew nothing of his coming down the River, and therefore hoped to be excuſed.

In fine, To Accommodate this Matter, it was agreed, That the Boats of the Moſcovites ſhould remove from the place where they firſt Landed, and by a Signal given by the Ambaſſador's Trumpets, the Guns ſhould be fired, which was done both from the Caſtle, the Town, and the Fleet.

On the $\frac{15}{25}$th of this Month of October, the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors arrived at two Hours diſtance from the Tents of the Mediators; but both ſides having conſidered, that the Days being ſhort, and that at ſuch a diſtance from the Quarters of the Plenipotentiaries, much time would be ſpent and loſt in going to and fro, it was concluded, That the Engliſh and Dutch Ambaſſadors ſhould go to Carlowitz, and the Germans and Allies ſhould take their Quarters about half an Hour above them towards Peter Waradin, and the Turks about a Quarter of an Hour below towards Belgrade.

Upon the Arrival of the Mediators at Carlowitz, they were received by the German Horſe and Foot, and a Captain-Lieutenant and a Standard, with 50 Horſe, and alſo with another Captain-Lieutenant, and an Enſign, with 70 Foot, which were appointed to each Ambaſſador for the Mediators Guards. The Turkiſh Soldiers were at the Right of the Engliſh Ambaſſador, and at the Left of the Dutch.

On the $\frac{20}{30}$th the Plenipotentiaries were ſhowed to each other; and ſhortly after the Conferences began; but firſt the Preparations were making for building the Houſe for Conferences: But in the mean time to ſupply that Convenience, a great Tent was rais'd in the midſt of that void place which was between the Tents of the Mediators; where it was farther ordered, That inſtead of Chambers for the ſeveral Parties, there ſhould be Tents pitched on both ſides.

Some Points were here projected to be agreed on, as Preliminaries regulating the Ceremonies of the Congreſs; about which the Poles gave ſome trouble at the beginning, who ſeemed rather to hinder than to forward the Peace; for the Diſputes they made upon nothing, took up ſeven Days time; the which being at length overcome, Octob. 26. O. S. Novemb. On the 6th of November, N. S. all the Preliminary Points were adjuſted, and agreed by all the Allies, which tended chiefly to prevent and avoid all Conteſts about Precedence, and the diſannulling all uſeleſs Ceremonies, during the Congreſs, as well as thoſe Impediments which might cauſe Confuſion and Diſturbance.

I.

To take away Notifications, and Viſits of Ceremony and Precedence.

II.

That every Plenipotentiary ſhall advance his own Buſineſs, without being obliged to ſtay for one another, which in that caſe is to be put into the Hands of the Mediators, until the time that the General Subſcription is made.

III.

That no Plenipotentiary ſhall hinder or delay the Progreſs of the Treaty; but that every one ſhall endeavour to aſſiſt each other in removing the Difficulties which obſtruct the way.

IV.

For confirming the Diſtrict of Neutrality, and covering the ſeveral Ambaſſadors, and their Retinues from Inſults and Wrongs, both during their Abode at the place of Treaty, and their Departure thence.

V.

And for keeping the Train and Domeſticks of each Ambaſſador in order, and that no Diſturbance, or Quarrel might ariſe between them, it was Ordered,

VI.

That a Prohibition ſhould be given to every one to ſtir Abroad at Night; and that whoſoever ſhould be caught Abroad after the Sun was Set, ſhould be kept in the Cuſtody of the Guards until Morning, and then to be delivered into the Hands of the Ambaſſador to whom he belongs, to be puniſhed.

The Points were Signed and Sealed by the Ambaſſadors at Carlowitz, the 26th of October, or the 6th of November, N. S.

On the $\frac{3}{13}$ of November, the Ambaſſador from the Emperor, appeared in the Camp of Carlovitz; as alſo did thoſe from the Sultan, who placed themſelves on both ſides, not far from the Houſe appointed for the Conferences to be held, and not far from the Places where the Mediators had their Lodgings, in which void Places ſeveral Magnificent and Stately Tents were erected; at which, about nine of the Clock in the Morning, the Emperor's Ambaſſador arrived, being attended with four Coaches of State, and a Numerous Retinue.

And in the firſt place they went to the Tents of the Mediators, where at the ſame time appeared the Turkiſh Ambaſſador, attended with a very ſtately Retinue of Cavaliers, well mounted on Horſes of the fineſt Shapes that could be found in all Quarters of the Eaſtern World, and beſides their Cloathing which was very rich, they made as beautiful an Appearance, as the Germans had done before them: And both Parties at the ſame time preſented themſelves before the Mediators, in the Tent appointed for the Conferences: Where after the Salutations, and Complements on both ſides, ſufficiently Courteous and Obliging, they took their Seats in the middle of the Tent, purpoſely ſet, and laid for them, one directly againſt the other, in ſuch a manner, that no Perſon could take Exception againſt his Place, or Seat appointed for him.

This being agreed and ſetled, the firſt Conference began, which was to determine this Great and Solemn Peace; which was the firſt of this kind, that ever paſſed between the Chriſtians and the Turks; not but that ſeveral Treaties and Concluſions of Articles had paſſed before, but not on ſuch equal Terms, and with ſo much Honour, and Deference given to Chriſtian Mediators, which will be recorded in all Ages, to the Glory of William the Third, King of Great-Britain, and of the States-General, His Worthy and Wiſe Allies.

Nor will it be leſs Memorable in Honour of that Noble and Ancient Family of the Lord Paget; who with the Heer Colyer, Ambaſſador from the Lords the States-General of the United Provinces, bore ſo great a ſhare in this Everlaſting, and never to be forgotten Treaty.

The Tent appointed for this Congreſs had four Doors, which fronted each other, at one of which entered the Imperial Ambaſſador, and at the oppoſite thereunto entered the Turkiſh; and at the two others, which were likewiſe oppoſite, entered the Mediators.

The Imperial Ambaſſador, was Named the Moſt Excellent Lord the Count of Ottingen: And on the Turkiſh ſide was the Reis Effendi, which I take to be principal Secretary of State with us.

Behind the Emperor's Ambaſſador the Secretary of the Embaſſy was placed; as alſo at a ſmall Table behind the Engliſh Mediator, was placed the Engliſh Secretary: And behind the Ottoman Ambaſſador the Turkiſh Secretary, called Mauro Cordato, by Extraction a Greek, and of that Rite, or Religion; he ſtood a while behind the Turkiſh Ambaſſador upon his Legs, but afterwards was ordered to ſit on the Ground after the Turkiſh Faſhion; both which Secretaries took the Minutes, or Protocollo of what was propounded, or what paſſed.

The Doors of the Tent was on all ſides guarded equally by Germans and Turks, and both filled up the Doors of the Tent, amongſt which were many Commanding Officers, who had room ſufficient to ſee every thing that paſſed: The Conferences began commonly about ten a Clock, or half an Hour paſt ten in the Morning, and laſted until half an Hour paſt two in the Afternoon: And then ended the firſt Day of Conference.

On the $\frac{4}{14}$th the Imperial Ambaſſador diſpatched a Meſſenger by way of Peter Waradin towards the Places where the Regiment of Corbelli, and the two Battalions of Anhalt, and Turcheim, were Quartered, which were ſetled there for Guards near to the Congreſs; as alſo for the ſame reaſon had appointed 200 Horſe of the firſt Rank, and 100 Foot of the ſecond: Likewiſe the Turkiſh Miniſters remanded to Belgrade as many of their People, as they could well ſpare.

The ſame Day that this Exchange was made, the Plenipotentiaries from the Sultan not being uſed to ſit upon Stools, or Chairs, but very uneaſily, cauſed a Safraw to be placed for them, covered with rich Carpets, and Embroidered Cuſhions, upon which they ſate Croſs-legg'd after the Turkiſh Faſhion.

After which the Company riſing, the Imperial Ambaſſador went to Dinner with the Mediators, where having remained for the ſpace of about two Hours, they returned to the Conference about three a Clock, which continued until half an Hour paſt four in the Evening.

The next Day being the $\frac{5}{15}$, the Imperial Ambaſſador appeared at the place of the Conference in moſt Rich and Pompous Habit in Honour to the Day, which was the Emperor's Birth-Day; and which after the Conference was ended, was honoured with a moſt ſplendid and ſtately Dinner, and Entertainment.

The $\frac{6}{16}$ the Plenipotentiaries again aſſembled about ten a Clock in the Morning, which continued with much diligence until eight a Clock in the Evening.

The $\frac{7}{17}$th the Venetian Ambaſſador came for the firſt time with a moſt ſplendid Equipage to the Conference, in which that whole Day was entirely ſpent.

On the $\frac{7}{17}$th, the Turks made a Propoſition to have the Principality of Tranſylvania to be reſtored to its priſtine State and Condition, but ſo as to remain under the Emperor's Protection; but this Point was poſitively rejected by the Imperialiſts, the which not taking.

On the $\frac{11}{21}$, the Turks made another Offer about this Principality, leaving it wholly in the Power and Poſſeſſion of the Emperor, ſtipulating howſoever, That an Honorary Tribute ſhould be paid unto the Port for the ſame, but this was likewiſe rejected by the Imperialiſts: For the truth is, the Emperor would hearken to nothing which could give the Turks any Footing or Demand upon Tranſylvania, which is the Entrance, and the Lock and Key into the Upper Hungary, and into Germany it ſelf.

So on the $\frac{14}{24}$, after long Debates on both ſides, the Point of Tranſylvania was agreed in the ſame manner as propoſed by the Germans.

The $\frac{15}{25}$th was entirely ſpent upon the Argument of the Limits, in which things were ſo prepared, that

On the $\frac{16}{26}$th a good progreſs was made about the Regulation of the Confines; and before they aroſe, or ſeparated for that Evening, it was agreed, which of the other Allies ſhould have their Buſineſs come next to the Conference, and was agreed, That it ſhould be the Venetians, which was the more eaſily aſſented unto, becauſe they had agreed with the Imperialiſts to treat upon the Foot of Uti Poſſidetis.

Accordingly on the $\frac{17}{27}$, the Venetian Ambaſſadors met the Turks, and had a long Conference with them; but the Turks making ſome new Demands, which the Ambaſſadors not being prepared to anſwer, or to gratifie them in, it ended for that Day without any Determination.

The $\frac{18}{28}$th, the Venetians renewed their former Conference, where the ſame Difficulties offering and not removed, all ended again without any farther poſitive Reſolution.

The $\frac{19}{29}$ the Moſcovite Ambaſſador went to Conference, in which having held a Diſcourſe only in general Terms, without entering upon Particulars, nothing was concluded, or determined for that Day.

The $\frac{20}{30}$ was ſpent by the Mediators in going between the Plenipotentiaries to diſpoſe them towards the ultimate Agreement.

The 21ſt of November, or firſt of December, the Imperialiſts had a Conference with the Turks in the Morning, at which they proceeded yet farther in adjuſting and ſetling the Limits of each Empire: And the ſame Day in the Afternoon the Poliſh Ambaſſador went to Conference; at which his Diſcourſe was looſe and general, ſo that nothing was concluded for that time.

The next Day being the 22d of November, or the 2d of December, the Moſcovite Ambaſſador had another Conference with the Turks, who pretended the Ceſſion, or Demolition of the Places Conquered by the Czar, but that Demand was rejected, the Ambaſſador ſaying, That he would neither give unto, nor take any thing from the Turks; but that his Maſter required the Fortreſs of Keres from the Cham of Tartary.

The 23d of November, or the 3d of December, the Ambaſſador of Poland began to abate, and remit ſomething of his high Demands, which gave ſome hopes of an Accommodation between the Poles and the Turks, in caſe an Equivalent could be found for the Town and Fortreſs of Caminieck.

The $\frac{24}{4}$ in the Afternoon the Venetian Ambaſſador had a Conference which laſted until Night, but could come to no ſatisfactory Reſolution; the Turks ſtill adhering to their Demands, that ſeveral places ſhould be razed, which are in the Poſſeſſion of the Venetians, which the Ambaſſador alledged that he had not power to grant.

The $\frac{27}{7}$th the Poliſh Ambaſſador went again to Conference, after which, it was obſerved, That the Turks diſpatched an Expreſs Courier to the Port thereupon.

The $\frac{26}{6}$ in the Afternoon, the Imperialiſts went again to Conference, but concluded nothing for that time.

The $\frac{28}{8}$ the Imperialiſts had another Conference with the Turks, which held from nine a Clock in the Morning, till five in the Afternoon; during which time the Articles between the Emperor and the Sultan were for the moſt part agreed.

The $\frac{29}{9}$th the Imperial Ambaſſador held another Conference with the Turks, but that Day was for the moſt part ſpent in Debates without any concluſion.

The $\frac{30}{10}$th my Lord Paget went to the Ottoman Ambaſſador in the Morning, and to the Imperialiſts in the Afternoon, endeavouring to diſpoſe both Parties to a Peace.

December $\frac{1}{11}$th the Imperial Ambaſſador had this Day the tenth Conference with the Turks, at which the remaining Articles were debated and agreed, ſo that little or nothing was wanting to perfect the Emperor's Treaty.

On the $\frac{2}{12}$th the Moſcovite Ambaſſador was at Conference from 10 a Clock to 12 at Noon: At which the Turks required the Demolition, and Reſtitution of Dogan Caluſi, and three other Forts which the Czar holds upon the Boriſthenes, to which the Moſcovites would give no ear; howſoever they relinquiſhed their Pretenſions upon Keres; ſo that it was not doubted but that a Medium might now be eaſily found to compoſe Matters remaining.

The $\frac{3}{13}$th was ſpent by the Mediators in trying to rectifie ſome Miſtakes and Miſunderſtandings which might remove ſome Difficulties.

The $\frac{4}{14}$th the Poliſh Ambaſſador was at Conference, at which four Articles were drawn and agreed unto.

In one of which there was yielded unto the Turks the Caſtles which the Poles then had, and poſſeſſed in Moldavia.

In another, it was agreed, That in Exchange for thoſe Caſtles, the ſtrong Fortreſs of Caminieck, and the Provinces of Podolia, and Ukrania, ſhould be Surrendered into the Hands of the Poles.

The $\frac{5}{15}$ was ſpent in preparing Matters for a farther Progreſs.

The $\frac{6}{16}$ the Imperialiſts went to Conference with an Intention to reduce the Articles which were already agreed, into order, but the Turks not having fully finiſhed the Tranſlation of them, it was deferred to another Convention.

On the $\frac{7}{17}$th, the Moſcovite delivered into the Hands of my Lord Paget, the Articles which he had promiſed to conſign to the Mediation.

And accordingly on the $\frac{8}{18}$th, he ſent a Supplement thereunto, which did not anſwer expectation, ſo that Buſineſs remained for ſome time undetermined.

The next Day $\frac{9}{19}$ the Poliſh Ambaſſador had another Conference with the Turks, at which the remaining Points of the Treaty were agreed upon; ſo that in a manner that whole Peace was agreed, and finiſhed.

The $\frac{10}{20}$th of December, the Venetian Ambaſſador communicated a new Commiſſion, and Project which he had received from the State of Venice to the Mediators.

And in the Afternoon the Moſcovite Ambaſſador entertained a Diſcourſe with the Mediators, and Mauro Cordato, but at that Meeting they cleared no Buſineſs.

With theſe frequent Conferences on all ſides, much time paſſed away, until Chriſtmas approached, and then was the Seaſon that Labours ſhould give place to Devotion and Mirth, and to the Solemnities of that Feſtival, which continued until the Twelve Days were over; and then all ſides began again, after the Plenipotentiary Ambaſſadors had paſſed their time very Jovially, to renew again their Treaties: Only the Turkiſh Ambaſſadors having little to do with the Chriſtian Rites, wiſhed heartily that the Feaſts were over, and preſſed heartily for an end thereof; alledging, That their Preſence was required at the Port, and that the Sultan would no longer allow of their Abſence.

The firſt that betook himſelf to Buſineſs, (which was ſtrange) was the Moſcovite Ambaſſador, who on the $\frac{14}{24}$th of January 1699, was the firſt who Subſcribed the Inſtrument of Amneſty, and the Treaties of the Peace of the Emperor, and Poland, with the Port, were Signed on the $\frac{16}{26}$th by their Ambaſſadors: And the Venetian Treaty being very well adjuſted and perfected, all Parties appeared to be very well ſatisfied; and the Venetian Ambaſſador as well as the others, tho' for want of ſufficient Power, he could not then Sign his Inſtrument, but ſuppoſed that Orders would come to him for doing the ſame, before the Imperial Ratifications, which were to be exchanged on the Line of Limits between Peter Waradin, and Belgrade, could be diſpatched, in which caſe the Mediators had Power to receive it. Monday the $\frac{16}{26}$ of January was appointed for the Solemn Day of Signature.

Monday the $\frac{16}{26}$th of January, was the Solemn Day of Signature, the which having been paſſed in the Morning, all the Ambaſſadors, Turks as well as Chriſtians, with all their Attendants, Guards, &c. with many Perſons of Quality out of the Country, making about 5000 Perſons, Dined at my Lord Paget's Quarters, at whoſe Table, the King of England's Health was the firſt that was drank, then the Emperor's, and the laſting Continuance of the Peace, which was Signed that very Day: And then we may believe, and fanſie, that moſt People there preſent were all heartily Merry, with as much Solemnity as that Place could afford: And amongſt other things of Mirth it was obſerved, That my Lord Paget had an Oxe Roaſted whole for the Soldiers, a thing never known before in thoſe Parts.

On the $\frac{17}{27}$th, the Mediators Dined with the Emperor's Ambaſſadors, where they were entertained with the like Rejoycings, and in the Evening with Fire-Works, Fountains of Wine, Drums, Trumpets, Muſick, and with the Diſcharge of Great and Small Guns.

The $\frac{18}{28}$th, the Moſcovite Ambaſſador took his leave of my Lord Paget, with many Lofty Expreſſions of Civility and Acknowledgments.

The $\frac{19}{29}$th, my Lord Paget Viſited the Imperial Ambaſſadors, as he did the Turks on the $\frac{20}{30}$th, and $\frac{21}{31}$ſt, which was in return of that Compliment which the Turks had made to him ſome time after the firſt Conferences.

The 21ſt of January, or the firſt of February, the Turks were to viſit the Imperial Ambaſſadors, and to take their leaves of them.

On the $\frac{24}{3}$th, the Imperialiſts were to take their Leaves of the Turks, and return their Viſit.

And on the $\frac{24}{4}$th or $\frac{25}{5}$th in the Morning, the Mediators, and Turks, deſigned to take their Journey towards Belgrade, where the Mediators were to continue until the Exchange of the Ratifications.

The 26th at Night, O. S. the Poliſh Ambaſſador departed by the Poſt, after having paſſed many high Complements on my Lord Pagett, expreſſing the Tranſport he was in, for the Succeſsful Aſſiſtances he had received from His Excellency in the Management and Concluſion of his Buſineſs.

The Muſcovite Ambaſſador alſo declared, That he would leave Peter Waradin on the $\frac{2}{12}$th of February; and in three or four Days after which, the Mediators declared, That the Place of Congreſs was likely to be quite cleared.

The Houſe of Conference was beſtowed by Count Ottingen on the Franciſcan Fryars, who at the ſame time declared, That their Intentions were to make a Church thereof, in memory of that Peace which had been there tranſacted.

For which God be praiſed; which being of a High Concernment to all Chriſtendom, and to which the knowledge of the particular Articles may be uſeful to all Nations, we have thought fit to add them hereunto in Latin and Engliſh, as here followeth.

I.

REGIO Tranſylvaniæ, quemadmodum, de præſenti eſt in poſſeſſione, & poteſtatate Cæſ. Majeſtatis, ita maneat in ejuſdem Dominio: Et à Podoliæ confinio, uſque ad extremum Vallachiæ Confinium, ſuis Montibus, qui antiqui fuerunt limites ante præſens bellum inter Tranſylvaniam ex una parte, & Moldaviam atque Vallachiam ex alia parte, atque à Confinio Vallachiæ uſque ad Flumen Maruſum, pariter ſuis Montibus, qui antiqui fuerunt limites, circumſcribatur, & ſic utrinque obſervatis antiquis Limitibus, nec ultrà nec citrà ab utroque Imperio fieri poſſit extenſio.

II.

Provincia Subjecta Arci Temeſwarinenſi cum omnibus ſuis diſtrictibus, & interfluentibus Fluviis maneat in poſſeſſione, & poteſtate Excelſi imperii Ottomannici, atque à parte Tranſylvaniæ fines ejus ſint ab extremo confinio Vallachiæ uſque ad Fluvium Maruſium in Superiori Articulo conſtituti Tranſylvaniæ antiqui Limites. Tum à parte Maruſii uſque ad Fluvium Tibiſcum citerioribus ripis ejuſdem Maruſii, & à parte Tibiſci uſque ad Danubium citerioribus ripis Fluvii Tibiſci fines ejus limitentur: Quæ vero intra prædictos limites ſita ſunt loca, nempe Caranſebes, Lugos, Lippa, Cſanad, Kiſcaniſia, Betſche, Betskerech, & Sablia citerius & intra præconſtitutos ante præſens bellum prædeclaratam rationem intra ripas Fluminum Maruſii & Tibiſci in Temeſwarinenſibus Territoriis, qualiſcunque alius ſimilis locus reperiatur, eâ conditione deſtruantur per Cæſareos, ut vi Pactorum amplius reædificari non poſſint: Et prædicta Regio Temeſwarinenſis omnino libera relinquatur, & impoſterum neque in dictis hiſce locis, neque prope ripas Fluviorum Maruſii atque Tibiſci alia vel majora vel minora loca, quæ poſſint Speciem Fortificationis exhibere, exſtruantur.

Fluviorum Maruſii ac Tibiſci inter Provinciam Temeſwarinenſem, & Provincias Cæſareæ poteſtati, & poſſeſſioni ſubjectas uſus ſit communis Subditis utriuſque imperii, tum ad potum pecorum omnis generis, tum ad piſcationem, & alias commoditates Subditis perquam neceſſarias.

Cum verò onerariæ Naves à partibus Superioribus Subjectis Cæſareo Dominio, tum per Maruſium Fluvium in Tibiſcum, tum per Tibiſcum in Danubium, ſive aſcendendo ſive deſcendendo ultrò citroque meantes nullo obice præpediri debeant, navigatio Navium Germanicarum, aut aliorum Subditorum Cæſareorum, nullo modo poſſit in curſu ſuo ultrò citróque incommodari, ſed liberè atque commodiſſimè fiat ubique in prædictis duobus Fluviis: Et ſi quidem reciprocæ amicitiæ & mutuæ benevolentiæ convenientia id etiam requirat, ut Subditi imperiali Ottomanicæ poteſtati ſubjecti poſſint uſûs prædictorum Fluviorum eſſe participes, ſine impedimento Navibus piſcatoriis etiam ac Cymbis utantur.

Molendinariæ autem Naves in locis tantum, quibus Navigationi alterius, nempe Cæſarei Dominii, nullatenus impedimento eſſe poſſint, communicatione Gubernatorum utriuſque Dominii, & conſenſu ponantur: quinimò ne diverſione aquarum in Maruſio curſus Cæſarearum Navium incommodum aliquod patiatur, nullatenus permittetur, ut ſive Molendinorum, ſive alia occaſione ex Maruſio aquæ aliò deriventur ſeu diducantur.

Inſulæ quæcunque in prædictis Fluviis, cum actu ſint in poteſtate Cæſarea, maneant, uti poſſidentur: & ſubditi utriuſque Dominii omnino pacificè atque tranquillè vivant, Severiſſimiſque Edictis ab inſolentiis, & contraventione Pactorum contineantur.

III.

V.

Ab oſtio amnis Boſſut in Savum effluentis uſque item in Savum elabentis Unnæ Fluvii oſtium Savi altera quidem pars pertinens ad Ditionem Cæſaream poſſideatur ab ejus Majeſtate, altera verò pars poſſideatur ab Imperatore Ottomannorum.

Interfluens Fluvius Savus, & Inſulæ in hoc communi tractu ſitæ, ſint communes, & uſus tum ad Navigationem ultrò citróque, tum ad alias commoditates utriuſque partis Subditis pariter communis ſit, utriuſque religioſè obſervantibus, pacificum, & imperturbatum ultrò citróque commercium ; Uſque ad Unnam Fluvium Regio pertinens ad Dominium Imperialis Ottomannicæ Majeſtatis, quâ Boſniam ſpectat, citerioribus ripis Unnæ Fluvii definiatur atque terminetur evacuatis Novi, Dubizza, Jeſſenovizza, Doboy, & Brod ex parte Boſnenſi : & qualicunque alio ſimili loco in hoc Tractu exiſtente, & deductis inde Præſidiis Cæſareis, iſta pars omni modo libera relinquatur: Caſtanoviz autem, & inſulæ infra Terram Novi verſus Savum cum ulterioribus ripis ejuſdem Unnæ, cum ſint & maneant in poteſtate Romanorum Imperatoris, prædictis limitibus hinc diſtinguantur.

Loca demum ultra Unnam longè à Savo ſita, & ab utraque parte Præſidiis conſervata atque poſſeſſa cum Terris ante præſens bellum ad eadem ſpectantibus, maneant iterum in poteſtate utriuſque poſſidentis partis, ea Conditione, ut Commiſſarii utrinque mox deputandi Diſtrictus atque Territoria ſingulatim deductis particularibus lineis ſeparantes, per foſſas, lapides, palos, aut aliâ quacunque ratione, ad evitandam confuſionem poſita Signa, ſegregent atque disjungant, in partibus Croatiæ uſque ad ultimum Confinium, & terminum locorum in utriuſque Dominii poſſeſſione permanſurorum.

Commiſſariis verò ad diſtinctionem, & poſitionem limitum in iſto confinio quoad fieri poterit, quàm celerrimè deputandis Regiis Edictis demandetur, ut ad Tranquillitatem, & Securitatem Subditorum utriuſque Dominii ſedulo animum adhibentes ſine controverſia, & ſine quacunque particulari complacentia Terras optimè ſeparent, atque manifeſtè diſtinguant. 1699.

Cùm ſiti in altera Savi parte, qua Dominium Imperiale Ottomannicum recipit, munimenti Brod Fortificationes utpote recenter à Militiis Cæſareis factæ, tempore educendi Præſidii Cæſarei, everti debeant; locus autem ille ſit commodiſſimus ad Mercaturam, poterit ibidem erigi cum honeſto & commodo recinctu civitas, ita tamen ut in Arcis aut Munimenti formam non redigatur.

VI.

Definiti tandem per hoſce Tractatus, & ſubſecutâ, ubi opus fuerit, locali Deputatorum Commiſſariorum ſeparatione ſtabiliti, ſive deinceps idoneo tempore per operam Commiſſariorum utrinque ſtabiliendi Confiniorum limites ſanctè utrinque; & religioſè obſerventur, ita ut ſub nulla ratione aut prætextu extendi, transferri, aut mutuari poſſint : neque liceat alicui paciſcentium parti in alterius partis Territorium ultra ſtatutos ſemel terminos, aut lineas quidquam Juris aut poteſtatis prætendere aut exercere, aut alterius partis Subditos ſive ad deditionem, ſive ad pendendum tributum qualecumque, ſive præteritum, ſive futurum, ſive ad quamvis aliam humano ingenio excogitabilem exactionis aut vexationis ſpeciem adigere aut moleſtare, ſed omnis altercatio juſte amoveatur.

VII.

Licitum & liberum eſto utrique partium pro confiniorum ſuorum ſecuritate quocunque meliori viſum fuerit modo, arces, munimenta, & loca per præſentes Tractatus pacifice poſſeſſa, quæcunque de facto extant, reparare, munire, & fortificare, exceptis illis, de quibus utrinque nominatim cautum eſt ; ad Incolarum verò commodas habitationes in extremis Confiniis apertos pagos ædificare ubique ſine impedimento & ſine exceptione utrique parti liceat, dummodo ſub hoc prætextu Fortalitia non erigantur.

VIII.

Incurſiones hoſtiles, & occupationes, omneſque inſultus clam aut ex improviſo facti devaſtationes, & depopulationes Territorii utriuſque Dominii omnino, & ſeveriſſimis Mandatis prohibitæ ſint ac illicitæ: tranſgreſſores verò articuli hujus ubicunque deprehenſi ſtatim incarcerentur, & per Juriſdictionem loci, ubi captivati fuerint, pro merito puniantur abſque ulla remiſſione, & rapta quæcunque ſint diligentiſſimè perquiſita, & adinventa, cum omni æquitate Dominis ſuis reſtituantur: Capitanei quoque ipſimet, Commendantes, & Præfecti utriuſque partis ad juſtitiam nullâ admiſſâ injuriâ integerrimè adminiſtrandam ſub amiſſione officii non ſolum, ſed etiam vitæ, & honoris adſtricti ſint, atque obligati.

IX.

Maneat porrò etiam illicitum futuris quoque temporibus, receptaculum vel fomentum dare malis Hominibus, rebellibus Subditis, aut malè contentis, ſed ejuſmodi Homines, & omnes prædones, raptores, etiamſi alterius partis Subditi ſint, quos in ditione ſua deprehenderint, merito ſupplicio afficere, utraque pars adſtricta ſit: qui ſi deprehendi nequeant, Capitaneis aut Præfectis eorum, ſicubi eos latitare compertum fuerit, indicentur, iique illos puniendi Mandatum habeant: quod ſi nec hi officio ſuo in punitione talium ſceleratorum ſatisfecerint, indignationem Imperatoris ſui incurrant, aut officiis exuantur, aut ipſimet pœnas pro reis luant: Quoque magis nefariorum hujuſmodi petulantiis cautum ſit, neutri partium liceat intertenere, & alere Haydones, quos liberos nuncupant, Plagiarios Pribeck dictos, atque id genus facinoroſorum Hominum, qui non ſunt alterutrius Principis ſtipendio conducti ſed rapto vivunt, tamque ii quam qui eos aluerint, pro demerito puniantur; taleſque nefarii, etiamſi conſuetæ vitæ emendationem præ ſe ferant, nullam fidem mereantur nec prope confinia tolerentur, ſed ad alia remotiora loca transferantur.

X.

Cum tempore præſentis hujus belli plures ex Hungaris & Tranſylvanis à Subjectione ſuæ Cæſareæ Majeſtatis ſecedentes ad Confinia Excelſi Imperii ſeſe receperint, atque hac in parte etiam concluſæ per inducias inter utrumque imperium almæ huic Paci debitis modis in futuram ſecuritatem providendum ſit, de prædictis ita pactum eſt, ut in ditionibus antè nominati Excelſi Imperii ad lubitum poſſint locari & accommodari: Ne tamen aliquo modo Confiniorum tranquillitas, & Subditorum quies perturbari queat, loca ubi prædicti collocabuntur, remota ſint ab omnibus limitaneis, & confiniariis partibus, & uxoribus illorum dabitur facultas ſequendi maritos ſuos, iiſque in Imperatorio aſſignato ad hoc diſtrictum cohabitandi. Cumque impoſterum in reliquos Subditos Potentiſſimi Ottomannorum Imperatoris annumerandi veniant, non liceat illis à ſubjectione ejuſdem amplius recedere, & ſi qui receſſerint, atque ad Patriam iterum reverti voluerint, in numero & conditione malevolorum recenſeantur, neque illis à Cæſareis fomentum aut receptaculum præbeatur, quinimo deprehenſi Ottomannis Confiniorum Gubernatoribus extradantur, quo magis utrinque ſecuritati Pacis proſpiciatur.

XI.

Ad tollendas penitus quaſcunque in Confiniis ſuper aliquo articulorum Armiſtitii hujus aut quavis de re impoſterum enaſcentes controverſias, differentias, aut diſcordias, ubi prompto & maturo remedio opus ſit ordinentur utrinque in Confiniis primo quoque tempore electi pari numero Commiſſarii viri neutiquam avidi, ſed graves, probi, prudentes, experti, atque pacifici: Hique loco opportuno convenientes ſine exercitu cum æquali pacificarum perſonarum comitiva, omnes & ſingulas hujuſmodi controverſias emergentes, audiant, cognoſcant, decidant, & amicabiliter componant, talem denique ordinem, & modum conſtituant, quo utraque pars ſuos Homines, & Subditos citra omnem Tergiverſationem vel prætextum graviſſimis pœnis ad ſinceram ac firmam pacis obſervantiam compellat. Quod ſi verò negotia tanti momenti occurrerent, quæ per Commiſſarios utriuſque partis componi & expediri non poſſent, tunc ad ambos Potentiſſimos Imperatores remittantur, ut ipſi complanandis iiſdem, ſedandis, & extinguendis modum & rationem invenire & adhibere valeant, ita, ut tales controverſiæ quàm fieri poterit intra breviſſimum temporis ſpatium componantur, nec earum reſolutio ullâ ratione negligatur, aut protrahatur.

Cumque præterea in antecedentibus Sacris Capitulationibus duella, & mutuæ ad certamen provocationes fuerint vetitæ, impoſterum etiam ſint illicitæ; & ſi qui ad ſingulare certamen venire auſi fuerint, in illos ut tranſgreſſores graviſſimè animadvertatur.

Captivi tempore præſentis belli ex utraque parte in captivitatem abacti, & in publicis carceribus adhuc ſuperſtites, cùm occaſione iſtius almæ Pacis eliberationem tandem aliquando meritò ſperent, nec poſſint ſine læſione Majeſtatis Imperatoriæ, & laudatæ conſuetudinis in eadem Captivitatis miſeria, & calamitate relinqui: uſitatis ab antiquo, vel honeſtioribus adhuc rationibus, per commutationem in libertatem aſſerantur, & ſi plures, aut melioris conditionis in una quam in altera parte invenientur, pro reliquorum etiam eliberatione, quando Solennes legati inſtantias afferent, gratioſa, & huic almæ Paci conveniens utriuſque Imperatoris pietas nequaquam denegetur: Cæteris verò, qui in privatorum poteſtate ſunt, vel apud ipſos Tartaros, licitum ſit eliberationem ſuam honeſto, &, quam fieri poterit, mediocri lytro procurare; quòd ſi cum Captivi Domino honeſta accommodatio fieri non poterit, Judices locorum litem omnem per compoſitionem dirimant: Sin autem prædictis viis id etiam confici haud poſſet, Captivi pretiis eorum ſive per teſtimonia, ſive per juramenta probatis atque ſolutis eliberentur. Nec poſſint Domini aviditate majoris lucri ſeſe redemptioni eorundem opponere, & quandoquidem ex parte Excelſi Imperii Ottomannici Homines non emitterentur, qui taliter eliberandis Captivis operam adhibeant, ſpectabit ad probitatem Cæſareorum Præfectorum, ut ad dimittendum Ottomannos Captivos, quo empti ſunt pretio ſincere liquidato, Dominos illorum adſtringant, atque ita Sanctum hoc opus pari utrinque pietate promoveatur: quouſque demùm Captivi utrinque prædictæ ratione eliberentur, legati Plenipotentiarii ex utraque parte officia ſua adhibebunt, ut interea miſeri Captivi benignè tractentur.

XIII.

Pro Religioſis, ac Religionis Chriſtianæ exercitio juxta ritum Romanum Catholicæ Eccleſiæ, quæcunque præcedentes glorioſiſſimi Ottomannorum Imperatores in Regnis ſuis ſive per antecedentes Sacras Capitulationes, ſive per ſigna Imperialia, ſive per Edicta, & Mandata Specialia favorabiliter conceſſerunt, ea omnia Sereniſſimus, & Potentiſſimus Ottomannorum Imperator impoſterum etiam obſervanda confirmabit, ita ut Eccleſias ſuas præfati Religioſi reparare atque reſarcire poſſint, functiones ſuas ab antiquo conſuetas exerceant, & nemini permiſſum ſit, contra Sacras Capitulationes, & contra leges Divinas aliquo genere moleſtiæ, aut pecuniariæ petitionis eoſdem Religioſos cujuſcunque ordinis, & conditionis afficere, ſed conſuetæ Imperatoriâ pietate gaudeant, & fruantur. Præterea Sereniſſimi, & Potentiſſimi Romanorum Imperatoris ſolenni ad fulgidam Portam legato licitum ſit, commiſſa ſibi circa Religionem, & loca Chriſtianæ Viſitationis in Sancta Civitate Jeruſalem exiſtentia exponere, atque inſtantias ſuas ad Imperiale ſolium afferre.

Commercia juxta antecedentes etiam Sacras Capitulationes libera ſint utriuſque partis ſubditis, in omnibus Imperiorum Regnis, & Ditionibus; ut autem utrique parti utili ratione, & ſine fraude, & dolo peragantur, inter Deputatos Commiſſarios rem mercatoriam bene intelligentes tempore ſolennium utrinque Legationum contractabitur, & ſicuti cum aliis Excelſi Imperii amicis Nationibus obſervatum eſt, ita etiam ſubditi cujuſcunque Nationis Cæſareæ Majeſtatis ſecuritate, & utilitate Commerciorum in Regnis Excelſi Imperii idoneis modis, & uſitatis Privilegiis gaudebunt, & perfruentur.

XV.

Quæcunque conditiones in antiquis Sacris Capitulationibus expreſſæ ſunt, nec prædictis Punctis hoc Tractatu ſtipulatis, aut liberrimo cujuſque poſſidentium Dominio, & uſui ejuſdem adverſantur, aut præjudicant, poſthac etiam colantur ſanctè, & obſerventur, caſſatis & annullatis iis, quæ ſupradictis quocunque modo repugnant.

XVI.

Ut quoque tantò magis Armiſtitium hoc bonáque inter ambos Potentiſſimos Imperatores amicitia firmetur, ac coaleſcat, mittentur Solennes utrinque legati ex quo uſitatis cæremonialibus ab introitu in Confinia uſque ad reditum in locum ſecundæ permutationis excipiendi, honorandi, tractandi atque proſequendi, qui in ſignum amicitiæ Spontaneum munus, conveniens tamen, & utriuſque Imperatoris dignitati conſentaneum afferent; Et primâ æſtate in menſe Junio iter, præviæ mutuâ correſpondentiâ, uno eodemque tempore ſuſcipientes in Sirmienſi confinio, more jam pridem inter utrumque imperium obſervato, permutabuntur. Solennibus porrò legatis in Imperatoriis Aulis, quidquid libuerit, petere liceat, ac permittatur.

XVII.

Regula, & norma Curialium in recipiendis receptiſque pariter honorandis, & tractandis Miniſtris ultrò citròque commeantibus, & commorantibus juxta uſitatam, prioribus etiam temporibus modalitatem deinceps ab utrinque cum æquali decore, & ſecundum diſtinctam characteris miſſorum prærogativam obſervetur. Legatis Cæſareis, & Reſidentibus, & quibuſvis eorundem Hominibus pro ſuo arbitrio quibuſcunque placuerit Veſtibus uti licitum ſit, neve quiſquam impedimento eſſe poſſit. Miniſtri porrò Cæſarei, ſive oratoris, ſive legati, ſive Reſidentis, ſive Agentis munere fungantur, quibus reliquorum Principum Fulgidæ Portæ amicorum legati, & Agentes immunitatibus, & Privilegiis perfruuntur eædem libertate, imò ad diſtinguendam Cæſareæ dignitatis prærogativam uſitatis melioribus modis fruantur, habeantque liberam poteſtatem conducendi interpretes: Curſores etiam, & alii eorum Homines Viennâ ad Fulgidam Portam, atque iterum redeuntes, & ultrò citròque venientes Salvo paſſu tutò, & ſecurè permeent, atque ut commodè iter ſuum perficiant, omni favore coadjuventur.

XVIII.

Pax iſta quamvis ſecundum propoſitas conditiones concluſa, tum demum integrum ex omni parte robur obligationis, & debitæ obſervantiæ vinculum accipiet & inducet, cum omnia, & ſingula, quæ de Confiniis ſuprà recenſito modo ultro citróque promiſſa, & acceptata ſunt, tam de diſtinctionibus limitum, quàm de evacuationibus, & demolitionibus plenarie in effectum, & executionem deducta fuerint, ita ut abſolutæ deſignatione limitum in unoquoque Confinio ſtatim ſubſequatur demolitio, aut evacuatio, quod ut quam celerrimè ſuccedat, deſignentur ad limites, & terminos Confiniorum ponendos, & diſtinguendos, ex utraque parte Commiſſarii, qui die Æquinoctii, ſcilicet 22. menſis Martii, aut 12 ſecundum veterem Stylum, Anni Milleſimi Sexcenteſimi Nonageſimi noni in locis inter Commiſſarios conſenſu Gubernatorum utriuſque Confinii determinandis, mediocri, & pacifico Comitatu conveniant, atque intra ſpatium duorum Menſium, ſi poſſibile ſit, aut etiam citius, ubi fieri poterit, Confinia limitibus, & terminis manifeſtis per ſuperiores articulos conſtitutis diſtinguant, ſeparent, determinent, & Statuta inter legatos Plenipotentiarios utriuſque imperii accuratiſſimè, & citiſſimè exequantur.

XIX.

Has vero conditiones, & articulos ad formam hic mutuò placitam à Majeſtatibus utriuſque Imperatoris ratihabitum iri, atque ut ſolennia ratificationis Diplomata intra ſpatium triginta dierum à die Subſcriptionis vel citius in Confiniis per Illuſtriſſimos & Excellentiſſimos legatos Plenipotentiarios Mediatores reciprocè rectèque commutentur, legati Plenipotentiarii utriuſque imperii ſeſe infallibiliter obligant, atque præſtituros compromittunt.

THE

THE INSTRUMENT OF THE Treaty of Peace, BETWIXT THE GERMAN and OTTOMAN Empires, Subſcrib'd, January 26. 1699.

FOR the perpetual Memory of the Thing, Be it known to all whom it may Concern, That after a cruel and pernicious War had for 17 years been carried on with the Effuſion of much Blood and Deſolation of many Provinces, between the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Prince and Lord Leopold, Elect of the Romans, and Emperor of Germany, always Auguſt, King of Hungaria, Bohemia, Dalmatia, Croatia, Sclavonia, Arch-Duke of Auſtria, Duke of Burgundy, Brabant, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, Marquis of Moravia, Duke of Luxemburgh, of the Upper and Lower Sileſia, of Wirtemberg and Tecka, Prince of Swevia, Count of Habsburgh, of Tyrol, Kyburgh and Goritia, Marquis of the Sacred Roman Empire, of Burgovia, of the Upper and Lower Luſatia, Lord of the Marquiſate of Sclavinia, of the Port of Naon, and the Salt Mines, on one part: And between the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Prince and Lord, Sultan Muſtapha Han, Emperor of the Ottomans, and of Aſia and Greece, and his Glorious Predeceſſors, on the other Part. Theſe two moſt Potent Emperors, out of a juſt Senſe of Compaſſion towards their afflicted Subjects, at length, reſolving to put an End to theſe Miſchiefs every Day encreaſing with Deſtruction to Mankind, the Divine Goodneſs brought it to paſs, that by the Endeavours and Mediation of the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Prince and Lord, William III. King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, and the High and Mighty Lords, the States General of the United Belgic Provinces, that Solemn Treaties of Peace were ſet on foot at Carlowitz in Sirmium upon the Confines of both Empires, and there brought to a Concluſion; There Meeting at the ſaid place, on the part of his Sacred Cæſarean and Imperial Majeſty of the Romans, as his Plenipotentiaries, the moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lords, Wolfang, Count d'Ottingen, of the Sacred Roman Empire, Chamberlain of his Sacred Cæſarean Majeſty, and Privy-Counſellor and Preſident of the Imperial Aulic Council; and the Lord Leopold Schlik, Count in Paſſaun and Weiskirchen, of the Sacred Roman Empire, Chamberlain of his ſaid Cæſarean Majeſty, Captain General of the Guards, and Colonel of the Regiment of Deſvetorii: Both theſe, at theſe Treaties of Peace, with the Ottoman Port, Deputed Ambaſſadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries; But on the part of his Imperial Ottomannick Majeſty, the moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lords, Mehemet Effendi, Supreme Chancellor of the Ottoman Empire, and the Lord Alexander Mauro Cordato, of the Noble Family of Scarlati, Privy Counſellor and Secretary of the ſaid Empire; By the Intervention and Care of the moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lords, the Lord William Paget, Baron Beaudeſert, and the Lord Jacob Colyer, Ambaſſadors from the moſt Serene King of Great Britain, and the High and Mighty States General, to the Ottoman Port, and both of 'em Ambaſſadors Extraordinary for the Eſtabliſhment of this Peace, and both of 'em perform'd the Office of Mediator with Integrity, Induſtry and Prudence, after having Invok'd the Name of GOD, and Exchanged the Powers, receiv'd the Twenty following Articles of Peace, which were Agreed upon to the Glory of GOD, and the Safety of both Empires.

I.

THE Region of Tranſylvania, as it is at preſent in the Poſſeſſion, and in the Power of his Cæſarean Majeſty, ſo it ſhall remain under his Dominion, Bounded by the Confines of Podolia, and with the Mountains on the ſide of Walachia, which were its Antient Limits before the preſent War, between Tranſylvania on one part, and Moldavia and Walachia on the other; and on the ſide of Walachia, it is to extend to the River Meriſch, to be Circumſcrib'd by the Mountains, that were its Antient Boundaries, and ſo the Antient Limits are to be obſerv'd by both Empires, without extending or diminiſhing them on either ſide.

II.

The Province ſubject to the Fortreſs of Temeſwaer, with all its Diſtricts and Rivers, ſhall remain in the Poſſeſſion and under the Power of the Sublime Ottoman Empire; and it ſhall remain Bounded by Tranſylvania on one ſide, and by Walachia on the other, to the River Meriſch, the Antient Boundaries of Tranſylvania, mention'd in the former Article: Then from the River Meriſch to the nearer Banks of the Tibiſch; and from the Tibiſch to the Danube, to be Limited by the hither Banks of the Tibiſch; and as for Caranſebes, Lugos, Lippa, Cſanad, Kiſcaniſia, Betche, Betskerecke, and Sablia, which are comprehended within theſe preſcrib'd Limits between the Meriſch and the Tibiſch, and were before the preſent War belonging to the Territories of Temeſwaer, both theſe and any other place of the like Nature, ſhall be ſlighted by the Imperialiſts, ſo that by Virtue of this preſent Treaty they may not be Rebuilt, and this foreſaid Region of Temeſwaer is to be left Free and Entire; ſo that for the time to come, neither in theſe Places, nor on the Banks of Meriſch or Tibiſch, ſhall it be lawful to Build any Places that ſhall carry the Appearance of Fortifications.

The uſe of the Rivers Tibiſch and Meriſch between the Province of Temeſwaer, and thoſe ſubject to the Imperialiſts, ſhall be left Free and Common to thoſe Subjects of both Empires, as well in relation to the Watering of their Cattle, as to the Fiſhing, and any other Conveniencies to both Subjects.

Ships of any Burden, coming from Parts ſubject to the Imperialiſts, whether it be from the Meriſch into the Tibiſch, and from the Tibiſch into the Danube, are by no means to be hindred or ſtop'd, whether they are going up or down the Streams; ſo that the Navigation of German Ships, or other Subjects of the Empire, are neither going nor coming to be Incommoded, but their Paſſage, both going and coming, is to be Free in both the ſaid Rivers; And becauſe the common Convenience of mutual Friendſhip and Kindneſs requires, that the Ottoman Subjects ſhould likewiſe partake of the Benefits of theſe Rivers, therefore they may freely make uſe of Fiſhermens Ships, or other Boats.

But Mills built on Bottoms of Ships can be only planted there, where they do not Obſtruct the Navigation of the Imperialiſts, and that to be done by Communicating with, and Conſent of the Governours on both ſides; and the Intent of this is, That the Navigation of the Meriſch be not rendred worſe to the Imperialiſts, whether it be by leſſening the Stream for the ſake of Mills, or any other pretence whatſoever.

The Iſlands in both the ſaid Rivers, that are in the poſſeſſion of the Imperialiſts, are to remain ſo; and that the Subjects on both ſides may live Quietly and Peaceably, is to be provided by ſevere Edicts, forbidding all ſort of Inſolencies and Contraventions to the preſent Articles.

III.

Conſidering the Region commonly call'd Batska, betwixt the Tibiſch and the Danube, is in the ſole Poſſeſſion, and under the Power of his Imperial Majeſty, it is agreed, it ſhall for the future continue ſo, and Titul is not to be more Fortify'd than it is at preſent.

IV.

A right Line to be drawn from the Extreme Bank of the Tibiſch oppoſite to that of Titul, and to that Angle of Land made by the Conjunction of the Tibiſch and Danube to the Bank on the other ſide the Danube, and thence to be ſtretch'd ſtreight to Moravitz on the hither Bank of the River Boſſut, and from thence to the place where the Grand Stream of the River Boſſut falls into the Save, and Moravitz is to remain without 1699. without any Fortification, and only open Villages to be built on both ſides the River, and the Empires ſhall remain ſeparated by the foreſaid Line, to be mark'd out either by Ditches, Stones, or Pales, or any other way, after the following manner, viz. That part of the Country within the foreſaid Limits towards Belgrade, ſhall remain Subject to the Ottoman Emperor; but the Country on the other ſide the ſaid Line ſhall continue under the Dominion and in the Poſſeſſion of the moſt Potent Roman Emperor, and according to the foreſaid Boundaries, the adjacent Rivers are to remain in the Poſſeſſion of each Party.

V.

Reckoning from the River Boſſut flowing into the Save, and likewiſe the Entrance of the River Unna into the ſame River, that part of the Save adjoyning to the Imperial Country, is to remain to his Imperial Majeſty, and the other part to the Turkiſh Emperor.

The River Save, flowing betwixt both Dominions, and the Iſlands ſituated in it, ſhall be common to the Subjects of both Empires, as well for the Uſe of Navigation up and down the River, as any other ſort of Conveniencies, who are to enjoy a peaceable and undiſturb'd Commerce: That Country on the ſide the River Unna towards Boſnia, belonging to the Turkiſh Empire, ſhall be terminated by the Banks of that River Novi, Dubizza, Jeſſenovitza, Doboy, and Brod, on the ſide of Boſnia, are to be Evacuated, and ev'ry other ſuch like place in this Tract of Land, and the Imperial Garriſons to be all withdrawn, and the Country to be left Free: But Caſtanovitz, and the Iſlands on this ſide Novi, towards the Save, and the further Banks, ſhall be left diſtinct from theſe Limits, conſidering it is Agreed, they ſhould remain in the Poſſeſſion of the Roman Emperor.

As to the Places beyond the Unna, of great diſtance from the Save, which are Garriſon'd and Poſſeſs'd ſome of 'em by one Party to this Treaty, and ſome by the other, with the Lands that were Appendages, and belonging to the ſaid Places before the preſent War, it is Agreed, They ſhould remain to the Poſſeſſor, with this Condition, That Commiſſaries on both ſides ſuddenly to be appointed ſhall ſeparate each Diſtrict or Territory by particular Lines to be diſtinguiſh'd by Ditches, Stones, Poſts, or any other evident Marks to avoid Confuſion; particularly the Confines of Croatia are thus to be diſtinguiſh'd, and the Bounds of all other Places now in the Poſſeſſion and under the Power of each Party to this Treaty.

And on both ſides, it is Agreed, That if any one dare preſume to alter, change, remove, pull up, deſtroy, or violate any thing that is thus ſet for diſtinguiſhing Land-Marks, he if found out, or convicted by any manner of Enquiry, ſhall for an Example to others, be moſt ſeverely puniſhed.

It ſhall likewiſe be an Inſtruction to the Commiſſaries to be as ſoon as poſſible Deputed on each ſide by the Sovereign Authority, that as the end of their Deputation is the fixing the Limits and Boundaries of each Empire, ſo their principal Intention ſhall be the Security and Quiet of the Subjects of both Empires, and this to be ſo manag'd, that without Perſonal Heats on either ſide, or without any particular Regards, they plainly diſtinguiſh the Limits of each Empire.

The Fortifications of Brod on the other ſide the Save, (lately made by the Imperialiſts) at the time the Place is Evacuated by the Garriſon, it is Agreed, ſhould be Slighted, yet conſidering that Place is very convenient for a Staple for Merchants, it ſhall be lawful to Encloſe that Place with convenient Walls, but ſtill not ſuch as ſhall ariſe to the Nature of a Fortification.

VI.

The Limits thus fix'd by this Treaty, and afterwards, as Occaſions require, to be more diſtinctly ſettled by the perſonal view of Commiſſaries on both ſides, ſhall for times to come be with ſo much Exactneſs and Religion obſerv'd, that they ſhall not be extended, alter'd, transferr'd, or chang'd upon what pretence ſoever.

Nor ſhall any of theſe Parties, the Limits thus ſet forth and eſtabliſh'd, pretend to Exerciſe any ſort of Juriſdiction beyond the Lines and Bounds thus deſcrib'd, whether it be upon pretence of Collecting of Tribute or Contributions for times paſt, or for the preſent, or for times to come, or upon pretence that theſe Subjects deliver'd themſelves over to the other ſide, or upon any other Colour or Account whatſoever, be permitted, allow'd, or conniv'd at to make Collections out of each others Diſtricts, or in the leaſt to moleſt each other, that all Occaſion of Quarrel and Diſpute may be for ever remov'd.

VII.

It ſhall be lawful for each Party, for the Security of their Confines on the Lands thus peaceably ſet out and poſſeſſed by this preſent Treaty, in the beſt manner they can, to repair and ſtrengthen all Caſtles, Fortifications, and other Places now in being, except it be thoſe againſt which there are particular Proviſions made: But in the Extreme Confines of both Empires, it is Agreed, That open Villages may be without any Lett or Hindrance, raiſ'd, yet ſo that there be not any Fortifications erected.

VIII.

All ſudden or private Inſults, all hoſtile Incurſions or Devaſtations, or Executions from the Subjects of one Empire upon the other, are forbid upon the ſevereſt Penalties; The Contraveners or Tranſgreſſors of this Article, whereſoever they are found, ſhall immediately be Impriſon'd, and by the Juſtice of the Place where they are taken, ſhall be puniſh'd without Pardon or Reprieve; Diligent Search ſhall be made after what they have thus Rob'd or Unjuſtly Acquir'd; and when it is found, it ſhall be wholly reſtor'd to its proper Owner. The Captains, Commanders, and Governors, in both the Empires, ſhall Adminiſter equal Juſtice, under the Penalty not only of their Office, but of their Life and Honour.

IX.

It ſhall not be Lawful for either of the Emperors to Receive or Comfort in his Dominions, the Rebels or Malecontents of the Others; But ſuch Fugitives as theſe, as likewiſe all Robbers, Thieves, altho' they are the Subjects of the Other Empire, yet ſhall they be puniſh'd in the Country they are found in: If they lie Conceal'd, then all Endeavours may be us'd to diſcover 'em to the Governours of thoſe Places, and they upon ſuch Diſcovery are oblig'd to puniſh 'em; If theſe Governours be Remiſs in Puniſhing of theſe wicked Men, then ſhall they incur the utmoſt Diſpleaſure of their Emperor, and ſhall be put out of their Employment, or loſe their own Lives. And that a Securer Reſtraint may be made to the Extravagancies of theſe Wretches, it is provided, That neither of the Parties ſhall Entertain or Nouriſh the Haydones, whom they call Freebooters, and thoſe Partymen nam'd from Pribecke, or any other ſort of Men, who not being in the Pay of either Empire, live upon Robbery and Rapine, and both theſe and thoſe that nouriſh and aſſiſt 'em, ſhall be puniſh'd according to their Demerits; And ſo intolerable are ſuch Wretches, that tho' they promiſe Amendment of their Cuſtomary Life, yet is not Credit in this caſe to be Indulg'd to 'em, but they are to be remov'd from the Confines to ſome more remote Parts of the Empires.

X.

In the time of the War, ſeveral of the Hungarians and Tranſilvanians withdrew themſelves from the Subjection of his Cæſarean Majeſty into the Confines of the Sublime Port, and by the preſent Truce it is Agreed, theſe ſhall be Indemnify'd in the manner following, viz. They ſhall have convenient Habitations allotted them in the Ottoman Empire; But leaſt the Peace and Tranquillity of the Bordering Subjects ſhould be endanger'd to be diſturb'd, the Places appointed for their Abode ſhall be remote from the Boundaries of the Empires: The Wives likewiſe of theſe ſhall be permitted to follow 'em, and to Cohabit with 'em in the Places thus aſſign'd. But conſidering theſe Men are always hereafter to be taken as Subjects of the Ottoman Empire, it ſhall never hereafter be Lawful for 'em to Forſake or Renounce to that Subjection; And in caſe they pretend to Recede from it, and to return into their Native Country, they ſhall be deem'd Rebels or Malecontents, nor ſhall they receive Entertainment or Succour from the Imperialiſts, but being taken they ſhall be deliver'd to the Ottoman Governours on the Borders; that by this means the preſent Peace may on both ſides be better ſecur'd.

XI.

In Order to remove all Differences, Controverſies, or Diſcords, which might ariſe concerning the Interpretation of any of theſe Articles or any other matter during this Truce, it is Agreed, That where there ſhall be occaſion for a ready and effectual Remedy, an equal number of Commiſſaries ſhall on both ſides be immediately choſe on the Confines: Theſe ſhall be Sober, Prudent, Experienc'd, and Peaceable Men, who without Troops meeting with an unarm'd Retinue of equal number on both ſides, ſhall hear, conſider, decide, and amicably Agree all ſuch Controverſies as can ariſe, and ſhall propound and appoint ſuch Order and Methods, by which either Party ſhall without delay or fraud, reduce or compel their Servants and Subjects to a ſincere Obſervance of this Peace; But if Matters of ſuch great Moment ſhould ariſe, that ſuch Commiſſaries are not able to Agree or Determine 'em, then ſhall Affairs be refer'd to the two moſt Potent Emperors themſelves, that they themſelves may find out and apply ſo proper Means or Expedients for the ſetling ſuch Differences, that they may in as ſhort a time as poſſible be finally determin'd; nor ſhall ſuch Reſolutions be neglected or long Protracted.

Whereas in the Sacred Articles of former Treaties between the two Empires, Duels, and all ſort of Challenges in order to 'em, have been forbid; it is now likewiſe Agreed, that in like manner for the time to come they ſhall remain unlawful, and if any dare

XII.

The Captives, that during this preſent War have on each ſide been carry'd away, and are at preſent remaining in the publick Priſons, conſidering from this happy Peace, they may reaſonably expect Releaſe, nor can they be retain'd in this Miſery without Indignity to the Imperial Majeſty, and Offence of laudable Cuſtom, ſhall be reſtor'd by way of Exchange upon the uſual or more eaſie Conditions; and in caſe there are more on one ſide than on the other, or ſome of greater Quality on one ſide than on the other; yet the Solemn Demands of the Ambaſſador on each ſide ſhall ſo far prevail upon the Clemency of each Emperor, that theſe Supernumeraries ſhall with the reſt find a Releaſe: But as for the Priſoners that are in private Hands, or amongſt the Tartars, they ſhall be Redeem'd upon Equitable and as moderate Terms as poſſible: But if ſuch fair Agreement cannot be made with the Patrons of theſe Slaves, the particular Judges of the Places where they live ſhall ſettle this Matter of what is to be pay'd for their Redemption; but if thoſe ways ſhould fail, then the Captives themſelves making it appear by Teſtimonies or Oaths, what their Maſters pay'd for 'em, upon the Repayment of that Money ſhall be Releas'd; Nor ſhall it be permitted to their Maſters to oppoſe themſelves to this Releaſe upon the pretence of a greater Price; and conſidering that on the part of the Ottoman Empire there may be no particular Society of Men employ'd to look after this Redemption of Captives; yet it is Agreed, That the Cæſarean Magiſtrates ſtand in Honour oblig'd to ſee the Turkiſh Slaves Releas'd upon the Payment of what they coſt their Maſters, ſo that this work may be carry'd on with equal Sincerity on both ſides: And that ſuch Captives may at length gain their Liberty, the Ambaſſadors of each Empire ſhall in the mean time uſe all good Offices, that they may in the mean time be treated with Mildneſs and Humanity.

XIII.

As concerning the Religious Orders, or Exerciſe of the Chriſtian Religion, according to the Rites of the Roman Catholick Church, it is Agreed, by the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Ottoman Emperor, That whatſoever Indulgences have been made by the precedent moſt Glorious Ottoman Emperors in their Dominions, whether it were by Antecedent Sacred Capitulations, by Imperial Signets, by Edicts or Special Mandates, that all theſe ſhall ſtand good and confirm'd; ſo that the foreſaid Religious may repair and rebuild their Churches, may Exerciſe their uſual and accuſtom'd Functions; ſo that it ſhall not be lawful from any one, contrary to theſe Sacred Capitulations and Divine Laws, to impoſe upon 'em any ſort of trouble or pecuniary Exaction, let theſe Religious be of what Order or Condition ſoever, they ſhall enjoy the uſual Protection and Goodneſs of the Imperial Ottoman Empire. 1699.

Beſides, it ſhall be allow'd to the Ambaſſador of the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Roman Emperor to the Fulgid Port, to enter into Treaty there according to his Inſtructions about the Religion and Places of Chriſtian Pilgrimage or Viſitation in the Holy City of Jeruſalem, and he ſhall there lay before the Imperial Throne his Demands about theſe Matters.

XIV.

The Commerce according to the former Sacred Capitulations, ſhall be free to the Subjects on both ſides, through all the Kingdoms and Dominions of both Empires, but this intercourſe of mutual Trade may be perform'd without Fraud, and with juſt Profit, at the times of the Solemn Embaſſies on both ſides, there ſhall be appointed Commiſſioners well vers'd in Mercantile Affairs, who ſhall Debate this Matter; and the ſame Privileges the High Empire allows to other Nations in Friendſhip with it, ſhall with the ſame Security and Advantages to the Subjects of his Cæſarean Majeſty of what Nation ſoever they may be.

XV.

Whatſoever Conditions are expreſs'd in the Antient Sacred Capitulations, ſhall ſtand good and be religiouſly Obſerv'd, provided they do not contradict the Articles of this preſent Treaty, or are no ways prejudicial or obſtructive to that free Exerciſe of Power, which each Empire is intended to have in its own Dominions; and in caſe any former Articles come under this Diſcription, then they are declar'd by theſe Preſents null and void.

XVI.

And that this preſent Truce may the better grow and be confirm'd into a mutual Friendſhip and Confidence betwixt the two moſt potent Emperors, Extraordinary Ambaſſadors ſhall be ſent on both ſides, who are to be Receiv'd, Treated, and Attended from their Entrance into the Confines, and during their ſtay, and to the time of their Return till

1699. till they are again Exchang'd with the uſual Ceremonies, and for a more manifeſt Declaration of the Friendſhip between the two Emperors, theſe Ambaſſadors ſhall bring and make voluntary Preſents, yet ſuch as ſhall correſpond to, and be agreeable to the High Dignity of each Emperor. And the ſaid Ambaſſadors, by Concert in June in the enſuing Summer, at the ſame time beginning their Journey, ſhall be Exchang'd in the Confines of Sirmium, after the manner that has been us'd upon ſuch Occaſions.

And it ſhall be permitted to each of the Ambaſſadors at the Imperial Courts, to make what Requeſts they ſhall think convenient.

XVII.

The Rule for Receiving, Entertaining, or Treating the Miniſters by the Courtiers of each Empire, ſhall be taken from the practice of former times, to be executed with all imaginable Candor and Decency, according to that diſtinct Prerogative which the Characters of thoſe that are ſent ſhall Demand. The Cæſarean Ambaſſadors, Envoys, or Reſidents, and their Attendants, ſhall without the hindrance of any one, enjoy a full liberty of uſing what ſort of Garments they pleaſe. Beſides, the Cæſarean Miniſter, whether he be Veſted with the Character of Ambaſſador, Envoy, Reſident, or Agent, ſhall at the Fulgid Port enjoy the ſame Privileges and Immunities, which the Ambaſſadors or Agents of any other Princes there enjoy, and to make a Diſtinction of the Prerogative of the Cæſarean Dignity, with the uſual Marks of Preference: They ſhall have liberty of Hiring their own Interpreters, and their Meſſengers that come to the Fulgid Port, or return from it to Vienna, ſhall have free Paſſage going and coming, with all convenient Favour and Aſſiſtance in their Journey.

XVIII.

This Peace tho' it now ſtands concluded upon the preſent Conditions, yet it ſhall then only be eſteem'd to have and to receive its full force of Obligation and Effect, when all and ſingular Conditions, ſtipulated and accepted on both ſides, as well concerning the Diſtinctions of the Borders, as the Evacuations and Demoliſhments ſhall be fully executed in this manner, after the Limits are ſettled, then ſhall the Evacuations and Demoliſhments of Places follow, and that all this may as ſoon as poſſible be put in practice, Commiſſaries to ſettle theſe Diſtinctions, ſhall on both ſides be appointed, who at the Equinoctial, S. N. 22. S. V. 12 of March, A. D. 1699. ſhall with a moderate and peaceable Attendance, meet at Places to be determin'd by the Governors of the Confines, and theſe Commiſſaries ſhall within two months or leſs, if poſſible, by manifeſt marks deſcrib'd in the former Articles ſeparate and ſet apart theſe Confines, and ſhall with all exactneſs and expedition, execute all other things that ſhall be Agreed by the Plenipotentiaries of both Empires. 1699.

XIX.

The Plenipotentiaries of both Empires do mutually Oblige themſelves, and Promiſe, that theſe Conditions and Articles thus reduc'd into Form, ſhall be mutually Ratify'd by the Majeſty of each of the Emperors, and that within 30 days or ſooner from the time of Subſcription, the Ratifications ſhall in Solemn manner be mutually Exchang'd in the Confines by the moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lords the Plenipotentiary Mediators.

XX.

This Truce ſhall continue, and God willing, extend to full 25 years, to be reckon'd from the day of the Subſcription, after the Expiration of which Term, or in the middle of it, it ſhall be in the Power of either of the Parties, that ſo ſhall think fit, to prolong it to a greater number of Years.

Therefore what things ſoever are here eſtabliſh'd by the mutual and free Conſent of the Majeſty of the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Emperor of the Romans on the one part, and the Majeſty of the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Ottoman Emperor on the other, and their Heirs, ſhall be Religiouſly and Inviolably obſerv'd thro' all their Empires and Kingdoms, by Land and Sea, through all their Cities and Towns, and by all their Subjects and Dependants; and it is likewiſe Agreed, that it ſhall on both ſides be ſtrictly enjoyn'd to all Governours, Commanders, Captains, Generals, to all the Soldiery, to all under their Protection, to all in Subjection and Obedience under them, that they take diligent Care to Conform themſelves to all the above-mention'd Conditions, Clauſes, Compacts and Articles, that under what pretence or colour ſoever, contrary to the Peace and Friendſhip thus eſtabliſh'd, the Subjects on either ſide do not offend or injure one another; but abſtaining from all ſort of Enmity, they are commanded to become good Neighbours to each other, under the ſevereſt Penalties, if after they are thus admoniſh'd, they do not yield a ready Obedience.

The Tartar Cham likewiſe, and all the Nations of the Tartars, by whatſoever Names they are call'd, ſtand engag'd to the Obſervance of this Peace, Good Neighbourhood, and Reconciliation; nor ſhall it be permitted 'em in prejudice of theſe Agreements to commit any Hoſtilities in the Provinces; or upon 1699. any of the Subjects, or upon any under the Protection of his Cæſarean Majeſty. Moreover, if any one ſhall preſume to Act contrary to theſe Sacred Imperial Capitulations, Agreements or Articles, whether he belongs to the Tartar Nations, or to any other Forces by whatſoever Name call'd, he ſhall be moſt rigorouſly puniſh'd.

This Peace, Ceſſation, and Security of the Subjects on both ſides, ſhall commence from the Date of this Subſcription, and thence all Enmities on both ſides ſhall ceaſe and be extinguiſh'd, and the Subjects on both ſides ſhall enjoy full Security and Tranquillity, and for that end, and in order all Hoſtilities may be carefully prevented, Mandates and Edicts for publiſhing the Peace ſhall as ſoon as poſſible be ſent to all Governours of the Confines; but conſidering ſome time will be requiſite, that the Officers in the remoter Confines may have notice of this Peace, 20 days are for this purpoſe appointed, after which, if any one on either ſide preſume to commit any ſort of Hoſtility, he ſhall without Mercy, ſuffer the Puniſhments before declar'd.

In the laſt place, that theſe Conditions of Peace, contain'd in 20 Articles, and accepted of on both ſides, may with great and due reſpect be inviolably obſerv'd; The Lords the Ottoman Plenipotentiaries, by Virtue of an Imperial Faculty granted to 'em for that purpoſe, have deliver'd to us an Authentick and Inſtrument, writ and ſubſcrib'd in the Turkiſh Language, are likewiſe by Virtue of a Special Order, and by our Plenipotentiary Power have on our part deliver'd theſe Writings of the Articles Sign'd and Subſcrib'd by our proper Hands and Seals in the Latin Tongue, as a True and Authentick Inſtrument. 1699.

This Treaty between the Emperor, being thus finiſhed and agreed, the next thing was to appoint Commiſſaries to regulate the Limits between Croatia, and Boſnia, as was concluded by the Treaty of Peace at Carlowitz, to appear upon the ſaid Limits on the $\frac{14}{24}$th of March following, in order to which Affair his Imperial Majeſty appointed Count Marſilii for his Commiſſary, giving him Orders to depart from Vienna in a Wecks time. But the Ratifications relating to the Articles of Peace concluded on both ſides were ſooner diſpatched, for the Grand Seignior's Ratification of the Treaty arrived at Belgrade, the 9th of March N. S. 1699. of which Advice was given the ſame day to the Secretary of the Imperial Embaſſy, who waited at Peter-Waradin with that of the Emperors, that the Exchange might be made on the ſame Day, the which was accordingly done.

THE TREATY OF PEACE

BETWEEN

The Moſt Serene and Moſt Potent King,

AND

Republick of POLAND,

AND

The Sublime OTTOMAN Empire,

Made at Carlovitz in Sirmium, in a General Congreſs of the Confederate Plenipotentiaries.

In the Name of the moſt Holy and Individual Trinity.

TO the perpetual Memory of the Thing; Be it known to all and every one, whom it may Concern: Whereas there has been a long War between the Kingdom of Poland, and the Sublime Empire, to ſtop the Effuſion of humane Blood, and with Deſires of Reſtoring a mutual Quiet, the moſt Serene and moſt Potent William III. King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, and the States General of the United Provinces, in order to ſet on foot this Treaty of a happy Peace, have interpos'd their Mediation, all the Duties and Conditions of which Mediation have with great Study and Induſtry been perform'd by their Excellencies the Plenipotentiary Ambaſſadors to the Fulgid Port, on the behalf of his Britannick Majeſty, by William Lord Pagett, Baron de Beaudeſert in the County of Stafford, Lord Lieutenant of the ſaid County; and on the part of the States General, by Lord Jacob Colyer; which War, through GOD's Bleſſing, by Reciprocal Inclinations on both ſides, has been Compos'd and wholly Extinguiſh'd, at Carlovitz on the Confines of Sirmium, where, according to the Deſignment of the Illuſtrious Mediation, a Congreſs of the Plenipotentiary Ambaſſadors was appointed, and Treaties of Articles of Peace begun with the moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lord, Mehmet Effendi, Creat Chancellor of the Sublime Empire, and the moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lord, Alexander Mauro Cordato, of the Noble Family of Scarlati, and Privy-Counſellor of the Sublime Empire, Ambaſſadors Extraordinary for the Treaty of Peace; and after ſome Seſſions, at length, by the Divine Goodneſs, this 1699. Buſineſs of a happy and deſir'd Peace was Digeſted into Terms agreed on both ſides, and a moſt entire Friendſhip and Peace was Perfected and Concluded, Reſtor'd and Renew'd, between the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Emperor Sultan of the Muſulmen, Sultan Muſtapha, Son of Sultan Mehmet, and the moſt Serene and moſt Potent King Auguſtus II. my moſt Noble Lord, and the Republick of Poland, which Peace is to be Religiouſly obſerv'd betwixt both Dominions, and is Digeſted into Eleven Articles, which follow one by one.

I.

BY the Help and Bleſſing of God, Hoſtility with the High Empire founded on Eternity, having for ſome time ceas'd, and now the Ancient Friendſhip Agreeable to the Nature of Reconciliation and good Neighbourhood reviving, that all Acts of Hoſtility may be prevented, and the Subjects enjoy their Ancient Security, Quiet and Tranquillity, the Ancient Limits ſhall be eſtabliſh'd and reſtor'd to what they were before the two laſt Wars, and the Confines of the Provinces ſubject to Poland, ſhall by theſe Ancient Boundaries be ſeparated and diſtinguiſh'd, as well from the Imperial Confines of Moldavia, as of thoſe of all other Countries ſubject to the Sublime Empire, nor ſhall there on either ſide be any Pretenſion or Extenſion made but the Ancient Limits, without Change or Diſturbance, ſhall as Things Sacred, be Religiouſly obſerv'd and maintain'd.

II.

Whatſoever Fortifications or Places, great or leſs, which before the War, before this lay within the Limits of Moldavia, and have hitherto been in the Poſſeſſion of Poliſh Maſters, the Poliſh Garriſons ſhall be withdrawn, and they ſhall be Evacuated, and the Province of Moldavia ſhall remain as free as ever, and in the ſame peaceable State it was before the laſt War.

III.

The Fortreſs likewiſe of Caminiec being before the two-laſt Wars ſituated within the Ancient Limits towards Poland, ſhall be Evacuated, and the Muſulman Garriſon withdrawn, and ſhall be entirely left; Nor ſhall the Sublime Empire hereafter make any Pretenſions upon the Provinces of Podolia and the Ukrain; and the Deputy of the Ukrain Coſſacks, who goes by the Title of Hatmannus, now reſiding in Moldavia, ſhall be remov'd. And conſidering the Ancient Limits of Poland and Moldavia are very plain, if the Seaſon permits, the Evacuations on this ſide 1699. ſhall be begun by the beginning of the enſuing March, and the Poliſh Troops ſhall be withdrawn out of Moldavia as ſoon as poſſible, and the Fortifications and Places ſhall be Evacuated, and Moldavia left free; And at the ſame time from the beginning of March, the Evacuation of Caminiec ſhall Commence, and the Buſineſs of the Evacution ſhall without Heſitation, Neglect, or Delay, be put in Execution, as ſoon as it can be perform'd; and the ſaid Evacuation of this Fortreſs of Caminiec, ſhall at fartheſt be compleated by the 25th of May, and that the Evacuation of the ſaid Fortreſs may be perform'd with Speed and Eaſe; The Poles, ſhall, as much as poſſible, in order to the Lading and Carrying away of Goods, aſſiſt the Tranſportation with Carriages and Cattle; and on all hands the Evacuation ſhall be carry'd on with Security and Safety: In all which Evacuations of Fortreſſes, and other Places, in whatſoever manner they are fortify'd, whoſoever of the Subjects ſhall voluntarily deſire to depart, may do it ſecurely, and ſafely, with all their Effects and Goods; and whoſoever of 'em have a mind to continue where they are, may in like manner ſafely do it; and there ſhall by no means be any Lett or Impediment on either ſide; and conſidering the Evacuation of all Fortreſſes and Places is to be commenc'd in the beginning of March: As to the Affair of leaving behind the Artillery at Caminiec, viz. thoſe that were belonging to it, and were found there; the Poliſh Envoy that is to be ſent to the Fulgid Port, ſhall lay that Demand before the Throne of the Emperor.

IV.

None of the Subjects of the Sublime Empire, of whatſoever Condition, eſpecially the Tartars, let 'em be of what Nation ſoever, ſhall under the colour of any Pretenſion or Controverſie preſume to commit any Hoſtilities upon the Subjects of the King and Republick of Poland, or upon their Borders; and ſhall not preſume to make Excurſions, to take Captives, to drive away Cattle, or to do any ſort of Damage, or give any ſort of Diſturbance, which ſhall be particularly expreſs'd in Royal Edicts, and commanded to be put in Execution by Viſiers, Beglerbegs, and the moſt Happy Crimean Cham, Carelgaius and Nuradinus, and the other Sultans, and the Weywode of Moldavia, that they, with utmoſt Diligence, ſecure the Peace, Quiet, and Tranquillity of the Borders; that neither by the Captures of Men, or driving away of Cattle, or by any other Means, the Poliſh Subject ſuffer any Loſſes or Diſturbance, and that they make ſtrict and ſevere Enquiries after the Diſturbers and Tranſgreſſors of theſe Conditions of Peace, and when they come to the knowledge of 'em, they Inflict Puniſhments upon 'em for Example to Others; and if in theſe matters any one acts careleſly or negligently, he ſhall be duly puniſh'd as is Agreeable to the Divine Laws. In like manner, the Poles on their part ſhall carefully obſerve and proſecute theſe Conditions of Peace, and let no Man dare to act any thing contrary to 'em.

V.

Conſidering the Kingdom of Poland was from Ancient Times entirely Independent, it ſhall not, by the Sublime Empire, and by any Nations ſubject to it, under the colour of any Pretenſion or Demand whatſoever, be diſturb'd with any Hoſtility, nor upon the force of any Compacts of that happy Peace, ſhall they ſtand oblig'd to any ſuch Pretenſions.

VI.

In this War, the Budziac and other Tartars, leaving their proper Seats, and entring upon the Lands of the Moldavians, do upon that pretence Exerciſe Hoſtilities upon, and Create Diſturbances to Moldavia, and its Inhabitants, which being contrary to the Sacred Capitulations formerly granted to the Kings of Poland, for that Reaſon ought to Ceaſe and be prevented; therefore ſhall the Tartars be remov'd from all Places and Poſſeſſions, and Lands and Winter-Quarters, whether theſe were taken from others, or newly rais'd by them, and ſhall inhabit their Native Places, and live peaceably, and for the time to come Create no Diſturbances.

VII.

The Regulars of the Church of Rome, according to the Edicts granted by the Sublime Empire, whereſoever they have Churches, may without hindrance Exerciſe their uſual Functions, and live peaceably; and beſides, the Extraordinary Envoy to the Fulgid Port may lay before the Imperial Throne any new Demands upon this Head.

VIII.

Conſidering Merchandize is one of the Fruits of Peace, and brings the Provinces into a more thriving Condition; therefore the Merchants of each Party, not practiſing by any obſcure Ways, but going and coming through convenient and open Roads, after they have pay'd the uſual and ancient Duty for things Exported and Imported, ſhall by no means be burden'd with new Exactions and Demands; nor ſhall a Duty in ready Money be Exacted; and whatſoever Native Subjects of the Two Polands and Lithuania, and of other Nations ſubject to them, after this manner coming to exerciſe their Merchandize, their Buying and Selling, as is declared in former Sacred Capitulations, ſhall not be troubled with the Exaction of the Tribute call'd Haracz, or any other unuſual Exactions: But ſtill with this Proviſo, that any reſolving to leave their Native Country, and ſet up their Reſt in the Dominions of the Empire, or any Foreigners mixing themſelves with Polanders, ſuch ſhan't to the Detriment of the Government enjoy this Exemption. Poliſh Merchants leaving the War, and returning Home with their Horſes and Carriages, and Captives, having an Authentick Certificate of their Diſmiſſion, and being deſirous to return to their own Country, ſhall not be ſubject to any Exaction, nor ſhall any Lett or Obſtruction be made to Captives thus going away. But ſtill under this pretence, none without leave obtain'd, ſhall preſume to carry away things prohibited. Beſides, the publick Officers of Juſtice ſhall not pretend to intermeddle in the Confiſcation or Diſtribution of the Goods or Effects of Merchants Subjects to the one, dying in the others Dominions, but they ſhall be deliver'd into the hands of Merchants of Credit, that according to the Inventory they may be diſpos'd of to the Right Heirs: But if any Difference happens betwixt the Merchants themſelves, this ſhall be Decided by the Conſul or Chief, and let him be Accountable to thoſe whom he is ſubject to. None, contrary to the Divine Laws, ſhall be Compell'd to pay any Debt, not verify'd in Writing, or by ſome Judiciary Inſtrument; nor ſhall the Cauſes of Debts or Contracts be Try'd or Decided by hireling Evidences, becauſe upon the reading and conſidering the Divine Precepts, ſuch ſort of Suits are to be Decided only by Authentick Inſtruments and Writings of an Antecedent Date; And ſo in all Controverſies of the like Nature, whatſoever Privileges are intermix'd and eſtabliſh'd in the Sacred Capitulations, ſhall, as in the Grants to the other Confederate Nations, be Interpreted and Extended to the Poliſh Merchants; and beſides the true meaning of all Grants by Sacred Edicts, (which are ſtill preſerv'd in their hands) particularly indulg'd to the Poles, ſhall be maintain'd and obſerv'd.

IX.

Captives carry'd away in time of War, ſhall be Releas'd purſuant to the Declaration about this matter in former Capitulations, upon Proofs made according to the Laws, of their Value, or by Oaths that make that manifeſt, the due Prizes being pay'd. But if the Captives have ſerv'd a long time, the Prizes of their Redemption ought to be proportionably 1699. Abated; but if the Maſter of the Captive cannot be brought to a fair and moderate Price, the Judges of the Places proceeding in a legal Courſe, ſhall compoſe ſuch Differences: If after the Concluſion of the Peace, Captives ſhall be taken out of the Poliſh Territories, they ſhall be Diſmiſs'd without Ranſom; Beſides, Men going about for the Redeeming Poliſh Captives, whether in the Kingdoms of the Sublime Empire, or amongſt the Tartars, as long as theſe Men ſhall behave themſelves peaceably, they are by no means to be diſturb'd, either upon this very pretence, that they make it their Buſineſs to deliver Captives, or upon any other Account whatſoever; nay, thoſe that do Diſturb 'em, or do 'em any Injury, ſhall be puniſh'd: Captives detain'd in publick Priſons, ſhall on both ſides be Releas'd by Exchange: Farther, the Great Embaſſy of Poland may preſent his Demands concerning Captives to the Imperial Throne.

X.

As long as the moſt Serene King of Poland ſhall continue in this eſtabliſh'd Peace with the Sublime Empire, as is expreſs'd in former Capitulations, the Waywode of Moldavia ſhall continue to behave himſelf towards the Kings of Poland in the manner as was anciently us'd: Let the Moldavians remain in Peace like the reſt of the Subjects of the Sublime Empire; and if any fly out of the Provinces of Moldavia, or Walachia, and take Refuge in Poland, they ſhan't be receiv'd; If any by more Subtle means ſlide themſelves into the Poliſh Dominions, and ſhall be afterwards found out to Diſturb or Corrupt their own Country, ſuch ſort of Men, when demanded, ſhall be ſurrendred up, and this Agreement as it remains, clearly and manifeſtly expreſs'd in former Capitulations, ſhall be obſerv'd. The like Meaſures ſhall be us'd towards Poliſh Subjects, whether they be Poles or Coſſacks, or of whatſoever Nation, when they ſhall create any Diſturbance, they ſhall not be receiv'd nor protected on this part, but ſhall be ſurrendred up. And in general, whoſoever go about to Diſturb this Peace and Friendſhip thus concluded, ſhall be puniſh'd according to their Demerits.

XI.

All Conditions and Clauſes deſcrib'd and contain'd in former Capitulations, ſo far as they are not oppoſite to the preſent Compacts, nor contrary to the Independent and perpetual Rights of either Soveraignty, ſhall hereafter be obſerv'd and maintain'd; but thoſe that are contrary, ſhall by the Bleſſing of the moſt High God be utterly Aboliſh'd and Annihilated. Which Peace and Agreement betwixt 1699. the Majeſties of the moſt Serene and moſt Potent highly above-mention'd King of Poland, (my moſt Gracious Lord) and his Succeſſors, and the Republick of Poland; and on the other part, of the moſt Serene and moſt Potent Emperor of the Muſſulmen, and of his Heirs, as it ſtands concluded in theſe deſcrib'd Articles, in a more perfect and exact manner; ſo by the Will and Goodneſs of God let it remain perpetual, ſtable, firm, and unſhaken, and may it be preſerv'd and kept from all Diſturbance, Change, Confuſion and Violation, and ſo without any Interruption, may it moſt firmly Perſevere, and moſt conſtantly Continue, and that all Hoſtilities may be remov'd and taken away, notice ſhall as ſoon as poſſible be given in the Confines, to all Commanders and Governours, that they take care to themſelves, that no Tranſgreſſions be committed, and that neither ſide does Injury to the other; but that in great Sincerity and Friendſhip, all on each ſide Comport themſelves as this happy Peace directs: That the Concluſion of this happy Peace may become known and certain to all, a term of Thirty days are appointed, after which no Pretence nor Excuſe ſhall be receiv'd, but Edicts being iſſued, requiring an exact Obedience, whoſoever ſhall do any thing contrary ſhall be moſt ſeverely puniſh'd. After the Subſcription of the Inſtruments of Peace on both ſides, an Envoy ſent from Poland, and coming to the Fulgid Port, according to Ancient Cuſtom, ſhall bring the Royal Publick Letters, containing a Ratification of the Pacts declar'd in theſe Inſtruments, and likewiſe ſhall receive and carry back with him the Imperial Letters of Ratification: But after this, in Order to a more ſolemn Confirmation of theſe Agreements, and an abſolute Completion of a mutual Friendſhip, and for a more perfect Diſpoſition and Digeſtion of all other Matters, the great Embaſſy, that according to Ancient Cuſtom is to be ſent, ſhall, as ſoon as poſſible, ſet forward; and therefore this happy Peace, compris'd in Eleven Articles, ſhall on each ſide be receiv'd and maintain'd. Now in Conſideration that the highly mention'd moſt Illuſtrious and moſt Excellent Lords, Plenipotentiaries and Ambaſſadors Commiſſionated of the Sublime Empire, have by Virtue of their full Powers and Authority, deliver'd in due Form an Authentick Inſtrument of this Peace, written in the Turkiſh Language, I likewiſe by Virtue of full Powers, and my Deputation, have deliver'd the preſent Writing of the ſaid Peace, Subſcrib'd with my proper Hand, and Seal'd with my Seal, as a Valid and Authentick Inſtrument.

TRA
L'Eccelſo Imperio Ottomanno;
E LA
Sereniſſima Republica di Venezia.

TRattato di Pace tra' l'Eccelſo Imperio Ottomanno, e la Sereniſſima Republica di Venezia, conchiuſo nel Congreſſo di Carlouiz nel Sirimio ſotto le Tende alli 26 di Genaro 1699; eſſendovi Ambaſciatori Plenipotenziarii del l'Eccelſo Imperio gl'Illuſtriſſimi & Eccellentiſſimi Signori Mehemet Effendi Gran Cancelliere, & Aleſſandro Mauro Cordato; e per la Sereniſſima Republica l'Illuſtriſſimo & Eccellentiſſimo Sig. Carlo Ruzini Cavalliere; Mediatori gl'Illuſtriſſimi & Eccellentiſſimi Signori Gulielmo Paghet Ambaſciatore di Sua Maeſtà Brittannica, e Giacomo Colyer Ambaſciatore degli Alti e Potenti Stati Generali delle Provincie Unite: oltre gl'Illuſtriſſimi, & Eccellentiſſimi Signori Ambaſciatori Plenipotenziarii di Sua Maeſtà Ceſarea, e di Polonia, &c.

I.

LA Morea colle ſue Citta, Fortezze, Caſtelli, Terre, Ville, Monti, Fiumi, Laghi, Boſchi, Porti, & ogni altra coſa, che ſi ritrova dentro la Circonferenza della medeſima, ora poſſeſſa dalla Republica di Venezia, reſti pacificamente nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio dell' iſteſſa Republica, tra'i ſuoi limiti del Mare, e dell' Eſſamiglio, ove ſono li Veſtiggi dell' antica muraglia, così che nè dal canto di Morea ſi faccia veruna eſtenſione nella Terra Ferma, nè dal canto della Terra Ferma ſi faccia alcuna eſtenſione oltre i Limiti della Morea.

II.

La Terra ferma eſſendro nel poſſeſſo dell' Eccelſo Imperio, reſta totalmente nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio dell' iſteſſo Imperio, per appunto nello Statò, che ſi trovava nel principio di queſta ultima Guerra. La Fortezza di Lepanto reſtarà evacuata dalla Republica di Venezia. Il Caſtello detto di Rumelia nella parte di Lepanto ſi demolirà, e ſi demolirà parimente la Fortezza di Preveſa, e ſi laſciarà in quella parte la Terra ferma nel ſuo primiero, & intiero Stato.

III.

L'Iſola di Santa Maura colla ſua Fortezza, e Capo di Ponte, detto Peracia, ſenza veruna eſtenſione maggiore in Terra ferma, e l'Iſola di Leucade attaccata à Santa Maura, reſtaranno nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio della Republica di Venezia.

IV.

L'Evacuazione di Lepanto, e la Demolizione del Caſtello di Rumelia, e di Preveſa, ſi eſſeguiranno ſubito doppo la diſtinzione de'i Limiti in Dalmazia; & in queſto mentre per levare tutte le oſtilità, & anco le occaſioni di queſte, li Preſidii de'i detti trè Luoghi ſi conteneranno dentro, nè faranno alcuna eſcurſione nella Terra ferma, nè veruna pretenſione per qualſivoglio preteſto, e gli Abitanti delli ſudetti Luoghi poſſano reſtare, e partire, ſecondo che vorranno, ſenza uſarſi alcuna violenza.

V. Li

V.

Li Golfi, che ſi trovano frà la Terra ferma, e la Morea reſtano all' uſo commune, obligandoſi l'una, e l'altra parte di conſervarli immuni, e franchi da qualſivoglia cattiva Gente.

VI.

Le Iſole dell' Arcipelago, e di quei Mari reſtaranno in quello Stato, che erano avant'il principio di queſta ultima Guerra, nel poſſeſſo dell' Eccelſo Imperio, nè ſi pretenderanno dalla Republica caraggi, ò ſiano contribuzioni, od altra introdotto nel tempo della preſente Guerra.

VII.

Per l'avenire l'Eccelſo Imperio non pretenderà dalla Republica di Venezia per l'Iſola di Zante, nè dalli ſuoi Abitanti alcuna Penſione paſſata, ò futura. L'Iſola di Egina colla ſua Fortezza come adgiacente alla Morea, e poſſeduta dalla Republica di Venezia, rimanerà col ſuo preſente Stato nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio del l'iſteſſa Republica.

VIII.

Nella Dalmazia le Fortezze di Cnin, Sing, e Ciclut, e Gabella, eſſendo al preſente nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio della Republica di Venezia, reſtaranno nel pacifico poſſeſſo, e Dominio della medeſima; mà poiche ſi devono porre li Limiti in tale forma, che li poſſeſſi reſtino chiari, e li Sudditi di ambe le parti in quiete, e tranquillità, nè ſi poſſa venir à qualſivoglia imaginabile differenza, che poſſa in alcuna maniera diſturbare la tranquillità delli Confini: ſi è accordato, che dalla Fortezza di Cnin alla Fortezza di Verlika, e da quella alla Fortezza de Sing, e da queſta alla Fortezza di Duare detta Zadvaria, e da queſta alla Fortezza di Vergoratz, e parimente da queſta alla Fortezza di Ciclut, e Gabella, ſi tirino Linee rette, e ſi ſeparino li Confini, ſiche dentro le dette Linee verſo il Dominio Veneto, & il Mare tutte le Terre, e li Diſtritti colli Caſtelli, Forti, Torri, e Luoghi chiuſi, reſtino nel ſolo poſſeſſo, e Dominio della prememorata Republica: e le Terre, e Diſtritti, che ſaranno fuori della detta Linea, reſtino nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio dell' Eccelſo Imperio, colli Caſtelli, Forti, Torri, e Luoghi chiuſi, eſſiſtenti in quelli, e non ſi permetterà per l'avenire alcuna eſtenſione, e dilatazione, ò reſtrizione nè dall'una, nè dall' altra parte. E le dette Linee ſecondo l'abilità de'i Luoghi ſi faranno chiare, e manifeſte colli termini ò di Colli, e Boſchi, ò di Fiumi, & acque correnti, & ove il luogo non darà l'evidenza, ſi poneranno ſegni di Foſſe, ò Pali, ò Colonne, come frà li Commiſſarii d'ambe le parti deſtinati à queſta deſignazione di commune concerto ſi trovarà à propoſito; e perche dette Fortezze nel poſſeſſo della Republica habbiano anche in fronte ſpazio conveniente di Territorio, alle Fortezze di Cnin, Verlika, e Sing, Duare, e Vergoratz, e Ciclut, ſi aſſignarà dalli Commiſſarii lo ſpazio di un'ora di Paeſe, con rettitudine ò linea ſemicircolare, conforme lo permetterà, ò lo richiederà la convenienza del Terreno; la Fortezza di Cnin haverà il ſuo fianco verſo le parti della Croazia, ſin'al Confine del Ceſareo Dominio, ſenza verun pregiudizio delli trè Dominii, che haveranno in quella parte li termini delli loro Confini, mà ſi haverà ſempre da oſſervarſi il Jus accordato à cadaun di queſti trè Dominii per queſta univerſale Pace.

La ſudetta linea ſi oſſervarà dall'una, e dall' altra parte; mà ſe vicino, ò dentro in quella, veniſſe à reſtare qualche Fortezza dell' Eccelſo Imperio, reſtando nelle ſpalle di quella il ſuo Territorio intiero, nella fronte ſemi-circolarmente haverà da goder il Terreno poſto dentro la circonferenza parimente dello ſpazio d'una ora, e per la Fortezza di Ciclut parimente nella fronte ſi darà il territorio nello ſpazio di un'ora, e nel fianco fuori della linea lo ſpazio di due ore di Terra, tirandoſi una linea retta ſin'al Mare.

Et in queſta forma, e regola eſſendo diſtinto il Confini, e poſti li termini, e ſeparate le Terre da poſſederſi, ſi oſſervaranno inviolabilmente, e ſenza veruna mutazione; e ſe alcuno mai haverà l'ardire di violare qualche ſegno, ò di traſgredire qualche termine, e gli Uffiziali ancora, che mancaranno, nella dovuta cura col meritato caſtigo delli delinquenti, tanto dall'una, quanto dall' altra parte, ſaranno ſeveramente puniti.

E ſe à caſo li Commiſſarii haveſſero l'incontro di qualche difficoltà, che non poteſſero accordarſi: informaranno li loro Padroni ſinceramente, e realmente, affinche cogli Uffizii delli Rappreſentanti delle Maeſtà Ceſarea, e Brittannica, e degli alti Potenti Stati Generali delle Provincie Unite preſenti alla fulgida Porta ſi definiſca amichevolmente: E per ſimile od altra qualſivoglia differenza di Confine non ſi venirà ad alcuna oſtilità, nè s'intorbidarà la quiete delli Sudditi, nè s'intenderà alterare la Pace conchiuſa coll' Eccelſo Imperio.

IX.

Il Territorio, e li Diſtritti della Signoria di Raguſa ſaranno continuati colli Territorii, e Diſtritti dell' Eccelſo Imperio, levandoſi ogni oſtacolo, che impediſce la continuazione, e la communicazione delle Terre della detta Signoria colle Terre del medeſimo Imperio.

X.

Nella vicinanza di Cattaro, Caſtelnuovo, e Riſano, eſſendo attualmente nel poſſeſſo, e Dominio della Republica di Venezia, reſtino nel pacifico poſſeſſo, e Dominio della medeſima Republica, colle lora Terre; e l'iſteſſo s'intenda per qualunque altra Fortezza in quella parte eſſiſtente attualmente nel poſſeſſo della medeſima. I.

T*HE* Morea, with all its Cities, Fortreſſes, Caſtles, Lands, Villages, Mountains, Rivers, Lakes, Woods, Ports, and ev'ry thing elſe, that is found within the Circumference of it, now in the Poſſeſſion of the Republick of Venice, ſhall remain peaceably in the Poſſeſſion and the Dominion of the ſaid Republick, as it ſtands Bounded by Sea and by Land, by that Line where remain the footſteps of the Antient Wall, ſo that from within the Morea, that Land ſhall not be Extended any farther towards the Terra Firma, nor on the ſide of the Terra Firma ſhall they exceed theſe Limits of the Morea.

II.

The Terra Firma that is in the Poſſeſſion of the Sublime Empire, ſhall remain entirely in the Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the ſaid Empire, exactly in the State it was in, in the beginning of the laſt War. The Fortreſs of Lepanto ſhall be Evacuated by the Republick of Venice, the Caſtle of Rumelia on the ſide of Lepanto, ſhall be Demoliſh'd, and likewiſe the Fortreſs of Preveza ſhall be Demoliſh'd, and the Terra Firma on that ſide ſhall be left in its firſt intire State.

III.

The Iſle of St. Maura, with its Fortreſs, and that Entrance upon the Bridge call'd Peracia, without any farther Extenſion of it towards the Terra Firma, and the Iſland of Leucade adjoyning to St. Maure, ſhall remain in the Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the Republick of Venice.

IV.

The Evacuation of Lepanto, and the Demoliſhment of the Caſtle of Rumelia, and of Preveſa, ſhall be perform'd immediately after the Separation made of the Limits of Dalmatia; and in the mean time to prevent all Hoſtilities and all Occaſions of Complaint, the Garriſons of the Three ſaid Places ſhall keep themſelves at Home, and ſhall not make any Excurſion into the Terra Firma, nor any Demand upon what pretence ſoever, and the Inhabitants of the ſaid Places may either ſtay behind, or go away, without any Violence to be us'd towards 'em.

V.

The Gulphs that are betwixt the Terra Firma and the Morea, ſhall remain in Common, and each Party does oblige it ſelf to Clear and Preſerve 'em free from Robbers.

VI.

The Iſlands of the Archipelago, and of thoſe Seas ſhall remain in the State they were before the beginning of this laſt War, in the poſſeſſion of the Sublime Empire, and the Republick ſhall not pretend from 'em any Duties

1699. or Contributions, or any thing elſe introduc'd in the time of the preſent War.

VII.

For the time to come, the Sublime Empire ſhall not pretend from the Republick of Venice, or from the Inhabitants, any Penſion paſs'd or future upon account of the Iſland of Zante. The Iſland of Egina, with its Fortreſs being adjacent to the Morea, and in poſſeſſion of the Republick of Venice, ſhall in its preſent State remain in the Poſſeſſion and Dominion of that Republick.

VIII.

In Dalmatia, the Fortreſſes of Cnin, Sing, Ciclut, and Gabella, being at preſent in the Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the Republick of Venice, ſhall remain in the quiet Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the ſame; but becauſe the Limits ought to be put into ſuch a Form, that Poſſeſſions may be diſtinguiſh'd, and the Subjects of both Parties reſt in Quiet and Tranquillity; and that they may not come to any ſort of imaginable Difference, which might Diſturb the Peace of the Confines, it is agreed, that a ſtreight Line be drawn from the Fortreſs of Cnin to the Fortreſs of Verlika, and from that to the Fortreſs of Sing, and from that to the Fortreſs of Duare call'd Zadveria, and from that to the Fortreſs of Vergoratz, and likewiſe from that to the Fortreſs of Ciclut and Gabella a ſtreight Line ſhall be drawn, and thus the Confines ſhall be ſeparated, ſo that within the Lines towards the Venetian Dominion and the Sea, all the Lands and Diſtricts, with the Caſtles, Forts, Towers, and incloſ'd Places, ſhall remain in the ſole Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the foreſaid Republick, and the Lands and Diſtricts, which ſhall be without the ſaid Line, ſhall remain in the Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the Sublime Empire, with all the Caſtles, Forts, Towers, and incloſ'd Places that are there, and for the time to come no ſort of Encroachment, Extenſion, or Reſtriction on one ſide or other ſhall be permitted: And the ſaid Lines, according to the nature of the Place, ſhall be made plain and manifeſt by the Boundaries either of Hills or Woods, or Rivers or Currents, and where the place won't afford the evidence of ſuch Marks, there ſhall theſe Diſtinctions be made by Ditches, or Pales, or Pillars, as ſhall be agreed by the Commiſſaries of both Parties by common conſent deſign'd for this purpoſe, and that theſe Fortreſſes might have in the Front of 'em, a convenient ſpace of Territory; The Commiſſaries ſhall aſſign a quantity of Land of about one Hour (about three miles) to the Fortreſſes of Cnin, Verlika, and Sing, Duare, and Vergoratz, and Ciclut, to be meaſur'd either in a right or ſemicircular Line, according as the Convenience and Circumſtances of the Land will 1699. permit; the Fortreſs of Cnin ſhall have its Flank towards the Parts of Croatia, even to the Confines of the Cæſarean Dominion, without any prejudice to thoſe Three Potentates, the Boundaries of whoſe Dominions terminate thereabouts; but the Rights accorded to each of theſe Three Governments by this Univerſal Peace ſhall always be obſerv'd.

The foreſaid Line ſhall be obſerv'd by each Party, but if in the Neighbourhood of it, or within it, there happens to be any Fortreſs belonging to the Sublime Empire, which juſt behind it has an entire Territory belonging to it, then ſhall it enjoy from the Front the quantity of Land of an Hour, Circumſcrib'd within Semicircular Circumference; and as to the Fortreſs of Ciclut, that ſhall likewiſe have from the Front a Territory of one Hour, and in the Flank, beſides that Line, the ſpace of two Hours of Land, to be meaſur'd by a right Line to the Sea.

And in this Form, and by this Regulation, the Confines diſtinguiſh'd, and the Limits ſettled, and the Lands of each Poſſeſſion ſeparated, ſhall be inviolably obſerv'd, and without any alteration; and if any one ſhall have the Boldneſs to violate theſe Marks for Boundaries, or commit Treſpaſſes on theſe Limits; and even Officers that ſhall be wanting of a due Care in puniſhing Delinquents, ſhall be ſeverely puniſh'd, as well on one ſide as on the 'tother.

And in Caſe the Commiſſaries ſhall meet with any Difficulty which they can't Agree, they ſhall truly and ſincerely inform their Patrons, to the end that by the good Offices of the Repreſentatives to the Fulgid Port of their Cæſarean and Britannick Majeſties, and of the High and Mighty States General of the United Provinces, the matter may be amicably determin'd, and from any ſuch like Difference about the Confines, no Hoſtilities ſhall enſue, nor ſhall the peace of the Subjects be diſturb'd, nor ſhall it be interpreted to break the Peace concluded with the Sublime Empire.

IX.

The Territory and Diſtricts of the Signory of Raguſa, ſhall continue joyned to the Territories and Diſtricts of the Sublime Empire, and all Obſtacles ſhall be remov'd that may hinder the Continuation and Communication of the Lands of the ſaid Signory with the Lands of the foreſaid Empire.

X.

All in the Neighbourhood of Cattaro, Caſtelnuovo and Riſano, that is actually in the poſſeſſion and Dominion of the Republick of Venice, ſhall remain in the peaceable Poſſeſſion and Dominion of the ſaid Republick, with all the Lands appertaining; and this ſame is to be underſtood of any other Fortreſs on that ſide being now actually in the poſſeſſion of the ſaid Republick; And the Commiſſaries that ſhall be appointed on one ſide, and the other, ſhall be Men of an Experienc'd Probity, that they may without partiality and prejudice, equally decide this important Affair; And here two Separations ſhall be made by evident Signs, that all occaſions of Diſturbance may be remov'd, but good notice is to be taken, that the ſaid entire Continuation of the Lands of Raguſa be not interrupted.

XI.

The Diſtinction of the Limits on both ſides in Dalmatia and about Cattaro, being to be ſet on foot as ſoon as ever the Seaſon will permit, the Commiſſaries deſign'd for this work giving previous Advices, they ſhall indeed have a Military Attendance, but a peaceable and quiet one, of equal number on each ſide, and by the help of God they ſhall enter upon this Office on the day of the Equinox of this inſtant Year, viz. $\frac{11}{21}$ March, and ſhall in the foreſaid Places uſe all their Diligence in diſtinguiſhing and ſeparating one Confine from the other, that they may with Expedition finiſh the matter in two Months and ſooner if it be poſſible.

XII.

As the Continuance of the Friendſhip and Quiet of the Subjects on both ſides is earneſtly deſir'd, ſo ought thoſe to be equally abominated, who, carry'd on by their own ill Diſpoſition or Cuſtom do in the time of Peace, with Robberies, and other hoſtile Acts, diſturb the Tranquillity of the Confines; therefore no Reception nor Encouragement ſhall be given to theſe Banditti of what ſort ſoever by either Party, but they ſhall be purſu'd, taken, and deliver'd up, that for an Example to others, they may undergo their deſerv'd Puniſhment, and for the time to come all Aſſiſtance and Maintenance ſhall be forbid to be given to ſuch evil Men.

XIII.

It ſhall be lawful for each Party to amend, repair, or fortifie the Fortreſſes in their Poſſeſſion, but not to build Fortreſſes a-new near the Confines, or to rebuild the demoliſh'd Fortreſſes of the Republick of Venice, on the ſides of the Terra Firma; But for the Convenience of the Subjects, it ſhall be lawful for them any where to erect open Towns or Villages, maintaining peaceably amongſt themſelves good Correſpondence and Neighbourhood, and containing themſelves in their proper Bounds; and if by chance any Difference happens amongſt them, the Governours of the Confines for both Parties meeting peaceably amongſt themſelves, ſhall with all Juſtice take away the occaſion of any manner of Diſpute.

XIV.

The Ancient Method and the Tenor of the Antecedent Capitulations ſhall be obſerv'd as well in the matter of Religion, and Liberty, and Exchange of Slaves, as in Traffick; and it ſhall be lawful for the Venetian Ambaſſador to lay his farther Demands on theſe Subjects, before the Imperial Throne: In the mean time the Sacred Edicts granted heretofore to the Republick, ſtand alſo confirm'd by this preſent Peace and Traffick, ſhall enjoy the ſame Form it had before the laſt War, and the Merchants of the Venetian Nation all the Privileges that have been granted to 'em.

XV.

All Hoſtilities ſhall ceaſe, as well by Land as by Sea, and a good Correſpondence be maintain'd, as well from the day of the immediate Subſcriptions of the Plenipotentiaries of the Sublime Empire, and of the Republick of Venice, as from the day of the Subſcription of the Plenipotentiaries of his Ceſarean Majeſty and of Poland to this Agreement by the Republick; and that the Governours of the Confines may have notice of this Truce, for the Countries of Boſnia, Albania, and Dalmatia, Thirty days are appointed, and Forty days for the Parts about the Iſland of Candia and the Morea, and all the other Confines on that ſide; and after and within thoſe Terms, as far as poſſible, neither on the part of the Sublime Empire, nor on the part of the Republick of Venice, ſhall any Contravention be made to theſe Articles, which can any ways be obſerv'd.

Moreover, by theſe Preſents, a true and univerſal Amneſty is granted to all Subjects upon the account of any Fact or Crime committed during the War, all thoſe things ſhall be paſs'd over in Oblivion, nor ſhall any one for the time to come upon that account be puniſh'd or moleſted as a Delinquent.

Extract of a Letter from Conſtantinople, of the [illegible]th of February, 1700.

ON the 29th of January, O.S. Count Otting the Emperor's Ambaſſador, made his publick Entry here: Firſt, marched the Baſha of Nicopoli, with his Retinue, who conducted the Ambaſſador from Rutſick hither; after him an Oda of Janiſaries, with their Aga and Officers; then came the Dutch Ambaſſadors Gentleman of the Horſe, his led Horſes, my Lord Pagett's Secretary, with three Gentlemen, and 12 Men in Liveries, all the Engliſh Nation; and then followed the Chiouſſes, Viſier Agas, the German Ambaſſadors Officers, five Led Horſes, the Gentlemen Hautboys, Trumpeters, Noblemen, and he himſelf on Horſeback, having 20 Trabants on both ſides, his Drugoman, and the reſt of his Retinue: He came in by Adrianople Gate, through part of the City, and out again by Fenar-Gate on the Water-ſide, ſo to Uſun Kebathana, and finally to Pera, where he is lodged in Hattum Huſſein Aga's Houſe, not far from my Lord Pagett's.

The $\frac{3}{13}$th Inſtant he had his Audience of the Viſier, where he was Clothed with a Sable Veſt, and his Gentlemen to the number of 100 with Caſtans.

The $\frac{6}{16}$th his Excellency went in Pomp to the Sultan: The reaſon why he had his Audiences ſo ſoon, is, becauſe the Turks Ramazan or Lent begins on Friday the $\frac{9}{19}$th, and therefore they could not then receive him with the uſual Ceremonies.

There being here at preſent more Ambaſſadors than has been ſeen theſe 18 years, there paſſes a great many Viſits between them; my Lord Pagett has been the 19th of January to Viſit the French Ambaſſador, and he my Lord the 1ſt inſtant; on the 5th my Lord went to the Venetian Ambaſſador, and the 7th to the Emperors: The 8th, The French Ambaſſador ſent a Gentleman to Count Otting, to Compliment him upon his Audience of the Sultan, adding, that he hoped to have the Honour to Salute him, and doubted not but that his Excellency (according to the Cuſtom of this place) would ſee him before any other Ambaſſador; upon which Count Otting ſent a Gentleman to the French Ambaſſador to aſſure him of his Intention to keep Friendſhip and good Correſpondence with him; but as for the Viſits, he could not but obſerve the Cuſtom practiſed in all the Courts of Chriſtendom, to pay the Viſits in the order as they were given him; and as the Engliſh Ambaſſador had firſt ſent to him to felicite his Arrival, and had viſited him in Perſon, he could not but repay him the firſt Viſit; whereupon the French Ambaſſador told the Gentlemen, Je ſuis faché que de la maniere que les choſes ſont, je ne puis pas me donner l'honeur de ſalver ſon Excellence; time will ſhew if he perſiſts in this Reſolution. The Venetians are alſo much Incenſed againſt the Hollander, for having Viſited the Imperial Ambaſſador the firſt, and thereby Uſurped, as they ſay, their Right of Precedency.

I will trouble you further with the Deſcription of my Lord's Cavalcade when he delivered the King's Letters.

His Excellency with his Retinue went on Horſeback from his Palace to the Waterſide, where 40 Boats, each with 7 Oars on a ſide, were prepared for the Tranſportation of himſelf and his Retinue: He Embarked, and in his paſſage was Saluted by the K. William and Dalaware, two Engliſh Ships then in Port, which had placed themſelves in the middle of the River for that purpoſe: Being landed on the other ſide, we found our Horſes in a readineſs, and every thing diſpoſed to begin a regular March: Firſt went ſix Janiſaries, then the Gentlemen of the Nation all mighty well mounted, and their Horſes richly accoutred; then 50 of his Excellencies Liveries, two and two, his 16 Interpreters, his Gentlemen of the Horſes at the Head of 7 led Horſes; after that, the Honourable Thomas Pagett, encompaſſed with Footmen, two of which held the Reins of his Bridle, he himſelf carrying the King's Letters at Arms length: After him went his Excellency, preceded by 6 Pages, and ſurrounded with Heydukes and Selict-Cohadars, his Excellencies Gentlemen and Officers to the number of 30, all well mounted. In this manner we rode through the Principal Streets of Conſtantinople to the Grand Viſier's Palace, where his Excellency was received with all the Demonſtrations of Civility and Reſpect, he himſelf being firſt Veſted by the Viſier Azem, then ſuch of his Retinue as were thought by his Excellency deſerving that Honour. The Ceremony being over, his Excellency returned in the ſame manner to his Palace, where was prepared a ſumptuous Entertainment for all that accompanied him.

On the 16th of February, N. S. the Turkiſh Ambaſſador had Audience of the Emperor, and was conducted to the Palace. The Emperor received him in the Council-Chamber, ſeated on his Throne under a rich Canopy, and attended by his Principal Miniſters of State, and other Perſons of the firſt Quality: The Ambaſſador when he entred the Room, made a low Reverence, another in the middle of the Chamber, and the third near the Throne. He went up the Steps of the Throne, preſented his Credentials, and laid them on the Table that was before the Emperor, and then returned to the Place, where he made his Speech in his own Language, containing an Aſſurance of the Sultan his Maſter's Friendſhip, and ſincere Intentions, ſtrictly to obſerve the Treaty between the two Empires lately concluded, which being interpreted by the Sieur Della Torre, the Emperor commanded Count Caunitz, Vice-Chancellor of the Empire, to return an Anſwer, which he accordingly did in High Dutch, and the ſame was Interpreted to the Ambaſſador by the Sieur Della Torre. Then the Ambaſſador ordered his Steward to bring in the Grand Signior's Preſents; a Liſt of which he laid upon the Table, with a Letter from the Grand Vizier, and going once more up the Steps to the Throne, kiſſed the Border of the Emperor's Robe, his Attendants at the ſame time making a very low Reverence. After which the Ambaſſador withdrew, walking backwards while he was in the Emperor's Preſence, and making three Reverences in like manner as when he came into the Room, and was reconducted to his Houſe, and nobly entertained.

The Laſt Account of Count TEKELY.

TEKELY was a Count of the Kingdom of Hungary, and one of the moſt Ancient Families thereof, and one of the moſt Zealous Profeſſors, and Aſſertors of the Proteſtant Religion, which cauſed him to joyn with the Turks, through the whole Courſe of the laſt Wars, of which we have given an ample Account in the due places of this Hiſtory, whereby appear the great Services which this Noble Perſon did them, and how ill and barbarouſly they ſometimes uſed him.

I have particularly inſtanced how this preſent Sultan being at Belgrade, where having occaſion for this Tekely's Services, he ſent a Capugi-baſhee or two, to fetch him thither from Conſtantinople, where he had Lodged himſelf for Recovery of his Health, being informed by the Phyſicians at Conſtantinople, that the Air of that City was much better than that of Adrianople. The Officers who are ſent from the Grand Seignior to execute any of his Commands, do commonly perform them without any Conſideration, or Ceremony, or Reſpect to the Perſon to whom they are ſent, and ſo they did to Tekely, whom finding in his Bed, labouring under a grievous Fit of the Gout, they rudely forced him to ariſe, and without any Remorſe, threw him into a Waggon, and hurried him away to Belgrade, to receive ſuch Commands as the Grand Seignior had to employ him in; and on all Occaſions as the hopes of a Peace appeared, the Neglects put upon him did daily increaſe.

It is commonly the Humour of the Turks, after they have done with the Service of any Perſon, never more to treat them kindly; nor if they can to ſuffer them to Live: Of which we have a freſh Inſtance by Letters of the 15th of July laſt from Conſtantinople, which tell us, That the Chimacam of that place had received an Expreſs Command, or Decree, from the Sultan, to Exile or Baniſh Tekely, into ſome Iſland of the Archipelago.

At the firſt coming of this News Tekely was ſtrangely Surpriſed, and was half Dead with the Apprehenſions thereof; the Remembrance of his Journey to Belgrade, and Terrours thereof were ſcarce out of his Mind, before another Scene of Baniſhment was preſented to him, into an Iſland where was no Suſtenance fit for his Weak Indiſpoſed Body, nor no Conſolation, or Comfort to be expected from Society, or Converſation of Mankind; nor yet from his Wife neither, who, poor Lady, by this hard Uſage, was ſtruck with an Aſtoniſhment, and both joyned together in their loud Exclamations againſt the Ingratitude, and Tyranny of Princes, who have no Tenderneſs of Compaſſion for any but themſelves; for if they had had, they would never have expoſed two ſuch Noble Families unto Ruine and Deſtruction.

After all which Hardſhip, it is believed, that the Turks will ſcarce ſuffer them to arrive unto the Place of their Baniſhment, but by the way take their Lives, as hath been the Practiſe commonly amongſt the Turks on the like Occaſions. And this ſad Account ſhall ſuffice to put an end to the many Tragedies of this Hiſtory.
